In an agricultural village the presumption is that the Zamindars own the whole of the village including the sites upon which the tenant's houses have been built. The tenants are only the owners of the materials with which the houses have been constructed and apart from some special custom, the sites remain the property of the Zamindars. Prima facie, therefore, a tenant cannot transfer a dwelling house and the site upon which is built, unless of course there is some custom legally binding on the parties which gives the tenant such a right. The mere production and proof of sale deeds or mortgages is no proof that the Zamindars were aware of these transactions and did in fact acquiesce in them. The defendant alleging such a custom must not only establish positively that such sale took place with the knowledge and acquiescence of the Zamindars. LANDLORD AND TENANT—Abandonment.

Abandonment.

———Abandonment—Leaving village, not sufficient—Arrangement for cultivation and payment of rent—Presumption.

Whether there is abandonment or not is a question of intention. If a tenant leaves his village having made arrangement for the cultivation of the land and the payment of the rent during his absence, which he intends to be temporary, there would be no abandonment. But if he makes these arrangements and then leaves the village never intending to return, there will be abandonment. But merely because a man leaves his home and does not return to it there is no presumption that he never intended to return. It may be that he left the village for a pilgrimage with full intention of coming back to his home, but somehow or other either he met with an accident or suddenly died and did not return, in such a case there is no abandonment. It is only such cesses which have any direct or any proximate bearing on the purpose for which the lands are let that can be claimed by the landlord. In the case of manibham lands, even if they pay rent, the rent payable to the landlord is fixed and there is no necessity for any supervision of the harvest. Therefore, the levy of kanganam, a cess in respect of supervision of harvest, would be illegal and the landlord cannot recover this cess even if he proves payment of the cess for a number of years. Kulavettu is a cess collected in respect of charges incurred for repairs of tanks in the village. ———Co-sharer—Partion between co sharer landlords—Effect on their relationship with tenants.

The Civil Court partition is between landlords and by itself it does not constitute the breaking up of the holding. The holding is a unit for which a certain rent is payable to the landlord. The rent payable is not divisible being a lump rental in respect of the entire holding. The holding can be broken up and rents apportioned with the consent of all the parties concerned, namely, all the landlords and raiyats concerned. There is no procedure in Civil Court partition suits under which the tenants can be brought on the record and the rents apportioned after splitting up the holdings. What the Civil Court partition does is that it changes the position of the co-sharer landlords from holders of lands as tenants-in-common into landlords holding different pieces of land in severalty, but so far as their relation with a raiyat, lands of whose holding have been allotted to the different landlords, is concerned, they continue to be his co-sharer landlords. Before the partition each co sharer had his undivided share extending over the entire holding; after the partition, each co-sharer holds different pieces of the land comprising the holding in severalty, but the holding is still a holding under all the landlords taken as a whole and from the raiyat's point of view all of them taken together will be his landlords. Thus where an ouster by title paramount or an attornment thereto is alleged it is not the title of the landlord at the beginning of the tenancy which is being impeached by the raising of such a defence and the rule of estoppel laid down in S. 116 no longer operates as a bar. Such a defence is permissible without a tenant having to surrender possession as is ordinarily necessary before the lessee can deny the lessor's title. (Tapp, J.) RAM RAKHA MAL v. MUNNA LAL.

———Ejectment—Non-transferable holding—Tenant effecting transfer—Right of landlord to eject tenant.

In cases between a landlord and transferee of his tenant having no right to transfer or between a person in whom the paramount right is vested and transferee from a holder under a maintenance grant, the transferee is ejected by virtue of right of re-entry contained in the lease or grant or by virtue of proprietary right being vested in a person who can eject trespassers. In such cases the person in whom the paramount title is vested can be prevented from entering on the property only by the lessee or grantee, as the case may be, who has the right of enjoyment. Any other person even though he may be a transferee of a person or grantee who ex hypothesi acquires no right under his transfer, cannot question the right of the paramount owner to enter on his own land. It the lessee or grantee having no right of transfer has himself abandoned possession and transferred it to a third person, the person in whom the paramount title is vested can re-enter. All that he need establish in support of his right of re-entry is that the lessee or grantee abandoned his interest in the property restricted in its enjoyment to him personally. If a tenant encroaches upon the lands of persons other than his landlord and acquires title to them by adverse possession he acquires it prima facie to the ultimate benefit of the landlord, unless he had expressed a clear intention to hold if for his own benefit. But this principle would not entitle the landlord to claim additional rent in respect of such lands whether or not the tenant's title has been perfected. The true scope of the principle is that if the tenancy determines in any way, the landlord becomes entitled to take possession not only of the lands originally included in the tenancy, but also of the encroached lands; and the tenant would have no right to retain them. An ex-proprietary tenant becomes the tenant of the whole proprietary body but if the whole proprietary body agree among themselves that he should become the tenant of a particular proprietor, there is nothing whatever in the law which would render such an arrangement invalid. The consequence of such an arrangement would be that the person empowered to deal with the tenant would be the person whom the general body of proprietors had accepted as landholder of that tenant, and he is entitled to sue for ejectment of that tenant. ———Forfeiture—Denial of title—Rule as to—English law—Applicability.

LANDLORD AND TENANT—Forfeiture.

The T. P. Act largely reproduces the English law, and the principles of English law as to forfeiture apply both to tenancies created before the Act came into force and to those excepted from its operation. The definition of "disclaimer" in S. 111 (g) of the Act is taken from an English case. To entail a forfeiture, the repudiation of the landlord's title must be clear and unequivocal, and made to the knowledge of the landlord. But the English law as to forfeiture by matter in pais does not apply to India. There can be no forfeiture by disclaimer in cases not covered by the T. P. Act, unless the disclaimer is in matter of record. For a denial of landlord's title to be effective, there must be present the elements of an estoppel (a change of position has been brought about or the bar of res judicata has arisen) or the rule that a man cannot approbate and reprobate must apply. There is a good deal to be said for the view that where the T. P. Act does not apply, the disclaimer of the landlord's title, even though clear and unequivocal and even though made in a judicial proceeding, would not operate as a forfeiture of the tenancy, unless it amounts to an estoppel or comes within the mischief of the rule that a man may not approbate and reprobate, or is made in such circumstances that it would render the tenant's possession adverse to the landlord. Assuming that a bare disclaimer in matter of record is legally sufficient to work a forfeiture, the Courts have the power to relieve against it. Cases dealing with disclaimer in tenancies from year to year cannot be regarded as authorities on the subject of forfeiture. ———Forfeiture—Express clause for re-entry necessary.

Even if a tenant has been guilty of a breach of duty by building on land intended for cultivation, it does not operate necessarily as a forfeiture and render him liable to be evicted. ———Nature of tenancy—Land in market town—Origin unknown—User as shop and residence on fixed rate of rent—Evidence of transfer and succession—Inference—Ejectment—Notice to quit.

Certain lands in a market town were held by one E. B. The lands abutted on a road and had structures on them consisting of two buildings with roofs of corrugated iron sheets and floors of boards, the premises having been used all along for a shop and also for a residence. The rent paid was the same without any change for about 52 years, and was payable annually. The origin of E.B.'s tenancy was unknown; but he sold it in 1877 to one I, who continued to pay the same rent as E.B. On I's death, his heirs sold it to defendant No. 1 and the predecessor of the other defendants. The value of land increased enormously.

Held, (i) that the facts did not point unmistakably to permanence and were not inconsistent with a non-permanent tenancy; that abstention on the part of the landlord from taking steps to eject the transferee or heirs or to enhance the rent could not lead to the inference of permanency of tenure; and consequently the character of the tenancy was it was not permanent nor heritable nor transferable; (ii) that the tenancy was one from year to year at a fixed rent, and for a term not specified and so terminable on notice, and not a tenancy-at-will or a monthly tenancy; that it was an old tenancy which had its origin prior to the Transfer of Property Act and has been continued from year to year; (iii) that the tenancy being apparently one according to the Bengali year, a six months' notice, calculated according to the Bengali calendar and expiring with the end of the Bengali year was necessary for terminating the tenancy; (iv) a tenancy to continue year to year is a continuing tenancy so long as the parties are satisfied; and though terminable at the option of either party at the end of any year, it is not ipso facto terminated at the end of every year. Ordinarily a raiyat who has transferred the whole of his (non-transferable) holding may be held to have abandoned it and to have forfeited his tenancy. But the landlord is not bound to re-enter and may well have recourse to the alternative remedy open to him, that is to say, he may still sue the original tenant for the rent of his holding. The obligation to pay rent is not avoided by merely transferring the holding. So a decree obtained in 1918 by the landlord against the original tenant for rent is not nullity in spite of a transfer by the tenant of his holding in 1907 and the decree-holder purchaser is entitled to eject the tenants unless they can prove adverse possession for twelve years from the date of the auction purchase. An occupancy tenant died leaving him surviving a widow. Mutation of land was however made in favour of one R daughter's son, on the widow alleging that her husband had adopted R as his son and agreed to get mutation entered in his name. One K lambardar was present at the time of mutation and attested the mutation. Some time after the death of the widow the descendants of K sued for possession of half of occupancy rights as landlords qua their share as the landlord of the other half had obtained a similar decree and it was held that adoption of R had not been established.

Held, that although K was present at the mutation proceedings, the mere fact that he attested the mutation could not be regarded as having created a fresh occupancy tenancy in favour of R and that even if K's attestation could be regarded as an admission by him of the adoption, the admission being based on an erroneous state of affairs would not be binding on him or his successors. No tenant can obtain a permanent right of occupancy by prescribing against his landlord. Where the tenancy is admitted but the terms of the letting are not known, the Court has to ascertain whether, as a term of the original letting, occupancy rights were conferred. Direct evidence not being ex hypothesi available, the Court has to ascertain whether as a term of the original letting occupancy rights were conferred. The question in each case is whether the onus originally cast on the claimants has been discharged by the cumulative effect of the evidence. Where besides the statements of the tenants, there was evidence adduced under the heads of (1) evidence of hereditary occupation of the same lands, unqualified by proof of the grant of any terminable lease, (2) payment of cist or rent according to fixed scale of rates. (3) non-exercise of the right to evict, and (4) alienation of tenants' holding to the knowledge and with the acquiescence of the inamdars.

Held, that the cumulative effect of the evidence was to establish occupancy rights in the tenants. (Venkatasubba Rao and Curgenven, JJ.) GOPALARAJA v. MUTUKARUPPAN CHETTY. 1932 M.W.N. 1025.

Held, that the receipt, which was found to be genuine was not merely a recognition of some tenancy; having regard to the early recognition of the right of occupancy in favour of the Factory in the Khatian of 1902 and to the unbroken sequence of their possession, the acceptance of rent amounted to a full recognition of the occupancy rights which prevailed against the purchasers of mauza. tion of a tenancy by the tenant, either under any presumption or under the Limitation Act. Where a person is given possession of land as a tenant, the mere fact that he asserts that the tenancy is of a particular kind will not by lapse of time convert the tenancy into one of that kind. Whether a tenancy is permanent or not must depend on the facts of the case and the agreement between the parties and not on mere assertions. The fact that the landlord has been accepting rent from the tenant every year and has given a receipt therefor in no special form only means that he has recognised him as tenant. ———Permanent tenancy—Agreement to give up land on the expiry of the term—Compromise of doubtful claim.

The plaintiff sued the defendants for possession of the property alleging that the lease to the defendants for a period of twenty-five years had expired. The defendants set up a plea of permanent occupancy. The kabuliyat under which the defendant's possession was originally confirmed imposed restrictions with regard to the cultivation of the thikans, planting of trees and erection of buildings and the tenants gave up the right to have the land continued to them after the expiry of the period of lease. At the time when the kabuliyat was entered into, there was dispute between the tenants and the landlord, i.e., the State, that the State wanted to enhance the rent and ultimately by the intervention of the Bombay Government, the terms of the kabuliyat were settled.

Held, the agreement was a compromise of doubtful rights which did away with the right to permanent tenancy, if any existed, and that it was binding on the tenants and his co-sharers (i.e.) the other members of the family as it was for their benefit. Stapilton v. Stapilton, W. & T. ———Permanent tenancy—Burden of proof— Land built upon by tenant.

Once it is found that the land is leased, the onus of proving permanent tenancy or the right to hold without disturbance is on the tenant. In regard to onus, ordinarily, the lessee must prove that he is entitled to hold the land of the lessor. The mere fact of a tenancy for eighty years at a low and uniform rental does not shift the onus of permanent tenancy from the lessee on to the lessor. He is responsible for preserving the lease deed and for producing it to substantiate his right to possession and its loss does not entitle him to any inference in his own favour. Substantial buildings do not justify an inference of a permanent lease. 16 I.A. 6; 15 I.A. 83; 52 Cal. 43; 31 Bom.L.R. 830 (P.C.), Ref. The suit land on which the plaintiff had built a house belonged to the Government and had been leased to a predecessor in title of the plaintiff. The original lease deed and other records were lost and the plaintiff contended that by reason of the fact that the words vechanpatti were used by the survey-map in describing the land, and the fact of substantial buildings as well as non-payment of annual rent, the onus was upon the Government to show that the period of the lease had expired and that the plaintiff was liable to be ejected, or assessed to increased rent.

———Permanent tenancy — Circumstance justifying presumption

Mere absence of pucca structure is not a determining factor on the question whether a tenancy is permanent or not. Nor is it sufficient for an inference of permanency that the tenants have possessed the land for a long period succeeding from father to son on payment of a uniform rent. The plaintiffs brought a suit for a declaration that the defendants were not permanent but tecca tenants of a part of the land and trespassers in respect of the other part, that they were attempting to raise a pucca structure on the land which they had no right to do and they prayed for an injunction that the defendants, be restrained from doing so. It was proved that the defendants, their father and grandfather had been residing on the said land and they had been paying rent at a uniform rate. It also appeared from the record and evidence that for 40 years the plaintiffs had notice that the defendants were claiming permanent right and yet they had suffered them to remain on the land for 40 years before instituting this suit.

Held, that the circumstances of this case established the presumption that the defendants had a permanet right. (M.C. Ghose, J.) MOSLEM MOLLA v. SUBAL CHANDRA CHANDRA ROY. 153 I.C. 1047=7 R.C. 417=A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 716.

Held, that the words daimi kaimi indicated that the tenancy was a permanent tenancy, and that an entry in the record of-rights to the effect that the holding was an occupancy one could not be given effect to since the recitals in the patta lead to the conclusion that it was intended that the tenancy should be permanent. The predecessor in interest of the defendants was granted by the Government in 1862 a tasallinama, which authorized the grantee to settle or "abad karo" all the lands that fell within certain specified boundaries (the lands being barren and uncultivated) and provided that the settling cultivator who brought the entire land under cultivation would be considered a full or permanent tenant (entitled to retain the land as pukka asami), and that if he failed to settle all the lands and it remained uncultivated or waste, the Government would have power to make over the village to somebody else for purposes of settlement; but that if he settled the whole, he would be entitled to it. There was no mention of a right of ejectment in any other contingency. The original grantee as well his successors (the defendants) had been in possession of the village without objection for over 70 years had colonized it and constructed houses of considerable value and had been paying rent continuously. The document mentioned no rent, but it was assessed under separate proceeding. In a suit by the Government for ordering the defendants to execute a lease for 30 years and in default for ejectment,

Unless there be a series of transfers of a tenancy for residential purposes of which the origin is unknown and a series of recognitions, the Court would not be right in inferring that the tenancy was in its origin of a permanent character. ———Permanent tenancy—'Mokra'—Meaning of.

Though the use of the word 'Mokra' may not by itself signify perpetual fixity of rent, and though there is no presumption that a permanent lease must be at the same time mokarari, the intention may be gathered from the terms of the document to create a permanent mokarari lease. Thus where one of the conditions in the lease is to the effect that the tenant shall pay without notice additional rent at the stipulated rate for land which may be found to be in excess by measurement, it indicates that the rent was a fixed one because it could not have been intended that the tenant would pay for the excess area at the rate stipulated in the Kabuliat and at the same time would have to pay at an enhanced rate for the original are a mentioned in the Kabuliat. Where a landlord proceeds to assess rent on land, in respect of which no rent had previously been paid, and is met with the plea of niskar, the initial burden of proof is on the landlord. The burden is not discharged by mere proof that the lands are within the geographical limits of his estate. But where there is an entry in the record-of-rights in favour of the landlord, the initial onus which is on him is shifted on to the tenant who can discharge it by proving a grant of a rent-free title or evidence leading to the inference of such a grant. ———Rent—Enhancement—Principles applicable.

A kabuliyat contained a stipulation to the following effect: "If the Government revenue due on the land is enhanced after the period of the lease, rent can be enhanced after taking into consideration the rate of rent for similar land with similar rights in the neighbourhood". The landlord having sued for enhancement on the ground that the revenue had increased,

Held, that the claim for enhancement was sustainable. The time which has to be taken into account in determining the prevailing rate of rent in the locality was the time of the claim be the landlord for enhancement, the time of the institution of the suit and not the time when the tenant was let into possession or the time when the tenancy was created. Tenancies of similar description and the similar advantages in the neighbourhood have to be taken into account and the rate of rent should be enhanced without reference to the improvements effected by the tenants, and without reference to the civil importance of the town. In a suit brought by the lessor against the mortgagee for rent due under the lease,

Held, that the English doctrine of privity of estate did not apply to India, even assuming that it applied as between lessor and lessee, privity of estate in English depends, not upon the assignee being in possession, but upon the whole term granted by the lease being legally vested in him and there being no intervening estate between the estate of the lessee and the estate of the lessor the mortgage in the present case did not transfer the estate of the lessee so as to introduce that doctrine, because all that it transferred was merely a right to possession and enjoyment and the document did not transfer the whole estate which the lessee might possess under the lease, assuming that he possessed any estate. In a claim for suspension of rent on the ground of dispossession by the landlord from a part of the tenancy, the onus is on the tenant to prove dispossession and the extent of eviction, even though suspension of rent was allowed on the ground of dispossession in a suit for rent for a previous period. It is for the tenant affirmatively to prove that the earlier dispossession continued down to the period for which rent is claimed in the present suit. It is not for the landlord to prove that the tenants have since been restored to possession. The prior decision does not operate as res judicata in a later suit. Further where the entry in a record-of-rights finally published after the period covered by the prior suit shows that the defendants are in possession of the entire holding for the entire rent claimed, it is incumbent on the defendant tenant to rebut the presumption arising in favour of the landlord that there was no dispossession of the tenants from any portion of the tenancy in respect of which the rent is claimed. ———Rent—Suspension—Grounds for—Principles—Eviction by lessor—What amounts to—Entry by agreement—Effect of.

Eviction which entitles a tenant to suspend payment of rent is a doctrine of English Common law, introduced in India as one based on justice, equity and good conscience. It applies to cases where the rent is a lump rent and every bit of the leased property is liable for that rent. But there are exceptions to this rule, in which on equitable considerations the Court allows an apportionment of rent and gives a decree for the portion in the possession of the tenant. To constitute eviction at law, it has to be established that the lessor, without the consent and against the will of the lessee, wrongfully entered on the demised property, evicted him and kept him so evicted. In other words, to justify the lessee to a suspension of rent, the entry by the lessor must be tortious which implies that the entry must be against the consent of the tenant. Any entry by the landlord by arrangement with, or with the consent of, the lessee is not tortious. Depriving the landlord of his rent is a sort of penalty imposed upon him for his wrongful act in withholding the possession from his tenant. This penalty cannot be imposed upon him, unless his act is wrongful and is of such a nature as to give the tenant a cause of action in the courts of law. Where the only fact proved was that by some arrangement a portion of the leasehold was taken away from the tenant who, since then, was all along paying a reduced rent at a fixed figure, and the landlord accepted such payment.

Held, there was a case for apportionment of rent, and that there was no equity in favour of the tenant for a suspension. (Khaja Mahomed Noor and Agarwala, JJ.) RAMESHWAR LAL v. BUTTO KRISTO RAI. 13 Pat. 396=152 I.C. 992=7 R.P. 281=A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 653.

Rent is paid for the use of the land, that is, the ordinary use of the land as understood by agricultural tenants, and if a zemindar through his own fault keeps a tenant out of possession, until such time that he cannot use the land in the ordinary manner, the zemindar is not entitled to rent for that harvest. ———Rent—Suspension—Limits of doctrine.

If a landlord dispossesses a tenant from a portion of the tenure, he is not entitled to recover any rent from the tenant until he restores the portion, from which his tenant has been dispossessed, to him and it makes no difference that at some time the tenant is found to be in possession of some more lands but not the entire tenure. Where the tenants are out of possession for more than 12 years of the plot, it cannot be said that they cannot recover the same from the landlord and that they have made themselves liable to pay rent for the portion in their possession.

Per Suhrawardy, J.—It may be that where the lessor commits an honest mistake about the extent of the property leased including in it some portion over which he had no disposing power or was the innocent cause of the dispossession of the lessee by a third party from a portion of the lease hold or otherwise acts bonafide, he is entitled to some relief. ———Rent—Suspension—Limits of doctrine—Ejectment of fraction.

Where dispossession or eviction by the landlord is found and the Court is called on to determine the question of the suspension of rent, no consideration whether the rental is a lump rental or a rental at a certain rate per bigha or acre enters into the question. The real test is whether there was one indivisible tenancy and whether there was interference by the landlord with the due enjoyment of the premises or any part of them. In deciding the test, however, one may consider whether the tenancy consists of separate mouzas or parcels of land separately assessed to rent or whether the tenancy is in fact and not in law only divisible or indivisible. If it is to be held that where rent is assessed at a rate per bigha the doctrine will not apply, though it be a case of dispossession or eviction by the landlord, the doctrine will fail to achieve its object. LANDLORD AND TENANT—Rent.

———Rent—Suspension—Principles governing.

In order to make out a case of suspension of rent the first element that has got to be established is that the lands from which the tenants have been dispossessed formed part of the original tenancy. It should also be noticed that it is not any and every act of dispossession by a landlord which ought to be penalised. A wrongful or tortious act of dispossession is necessary in order that the principle may be applied. (Mukerji, J.) DHARANI MOHAN RAY v. SAJANI KANTA TARAFDAR. 149 I.C. 1117=6 R.C. 706=57 C.L.J. 515=A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 146.

———Rent—Suspension—Principles — Lump rent—Dispossession from part—Effect

When the rental is a lump rental, and the tenant is forcibly and deliberately dispossessed from a part of the demised premises, there can be no question of an equity to an apportionment of rent; the tenant is entitled to entire suspension of rent till he is restored to possession of the dispossessed portion. (Mitter and Patterson, JJ.) MAHOMED ALI FAKIR v. KARAM ALI TALUKDAR. 155 I.C. 506=7 R.C. 594=38 C.W.N. 1202=A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 134.

———Rent—Suspension—Requisites for.

Whether the doctrine of suspension of rent is to apply or not clearly depends on the circumstances of each case in the sense that mere dispossession of the tenant is not enough but that it must be found that the landlord was a party to it and that too, deliberately (Case-law discussed.) ———Rent—Suspension—Tenant evicted from portion of premises.

In cases of eviction of the tenant from a portion of premises, proportionate rent for remaining portion should not be decreed in all cases. Where the value of such a tenancy depends upon enjoyment of the whole of it, and it might well be that if the landlord dispossessed his tenant of a comparatively small but important part of the tenancy, the value of the latter would so deteriorate that mere non-realisation of the proportionate amount of rent would be an entirely inadequate compensation. It would be the same if the landlord dispossessed the raiyat of a large slice or of the best lands with the result that the holding became uneconomic. Perhaps the sound course is to determine what is eqitable in the particular case, and that might range from the apportionment of rent per bigha where the dispossession is trivial or slight, in a rapidly rising gradient to entire suspension where the interference with the enjoyment of the tenancy is considerable. In a suit for partition on the allegation that N had a raiyati jote in respect of the lands in suit and that N died leaving as heirs two daughters, by the heirs of one of the daughters claiming a partition and separate possession of her share,

Held, that the mere expression "jote" would not necessarily lead to the inference that the right of N was heritable. The onus of proof was upon the plaintiffs who claimed a share of the land in right of inheritance. It was for them to prove that the right of N was heritable. ——Sir land—Suit for ejectment from some of the plots—Second suit for ejectment from remaining plots—Maintainability.

The principle underlying the rule that when once a suit for ejectment has been dismissed for default the plaintiff has no right to sue again on the same cause of action is based on the ground that where the withdrawal of a suit or its dismissal for default has resulted in the determination of the status of a tenant, he should not be again embarrassed by subsequent litigation. The same considerations do not, however, exist in the case of tenants and sub-tenants in sir land. If such a tenant was to be allowed to hold for ever because his landholder withdrew a previous suit or allowed it to go by default, the result would be that he would acquire occupancy or statutory rights, which is directly prohibited by the Tenancy Act. So the fact that the plaintiffs who owned a very large holding sued in the previous case for ejectment of the defendants from some of the plots is no bar to their second suit for ejecting the defendants from the other plots omitted in the previous suit. Surrender.

See also EJECTMENT supra.

———Surrender—Essentials.

A surrender is not effected merely by the execution of a deed unless the deed was executed with a complete intention to surrender. The making over of the deed to the landlord is necessary, and if the deed is made over with a promise that the landlord would settle the land with a particular person, the surrender does not take effect till the settlement is made with that person. It is a provisional surrender dependent upon the settlement of the land with that person. (Muhammad Noor, J.) JAGATBANDHU DUTTA v. SHAYAM CHAND BHOLE. 6 I.R. ———Surrender—Proof.

The execution of istifa and the payment of money to the persons making the surrender can be taken to be sufficient evidence of actual surrender. There is no law under which a raiyat, who has minor sons, is debarred from giving up cultivation of his holding if he is not able to cultivate. Unless it can be shown that the surrender by the raiyat was a dishonest transaction entered into with the intention of depriving his sons of their interest in the holdings, the surrender should be upheld, especially when for years afterwards nothing seems to have been done to repudiate it. A landlord cannot refuse to accept a surrender on the ground that the tenant as minor sons. (Case-law referred.) In any year in which the talukdar is himself in charge of the property or in which the plaintiffs refuse the theka, the plaintiff will be entitled to receive daswandh from the assets of the village."

Held, that it was the intention of the decree that the tenants should be in occupation so long as they paid jama in accordance with the practice prevalent in the Shahi days and that it was not intended that the land could be resumed at the option of the taluqdar or that the thekadars would be liable to have their jama enhanced to an exorbitant extent at the will of the taluqdar and

Transfer of tenancy.

———Transfer of tenancy—Death of transferor without issue—Right of transferee.

If a tenant after having made a transfer which is valid as against himself and as against the landlord were voluntarily to surrender his tenancy, the law will presume that the tenancy has a continuance in order to work out the rights created by such a valid transfer. The principle has however no application where the tenant right comes to an end by operation of law, that is when the tenant dies without heirs entitled to succeed under the law. The determination of the tenancy in such cases enlarges the rights of the landlord and gives him a right to immediate possession leading to the forfeiture of the rights of the transferee in the land. Utbandi tenancy.

———Utbandi tenancy—Incidents.

The incidents of utbandi holdings vary under the influence of custom. The landlord is not bound to give the land to the same raiyat nor is the raiyat bound to take it in the next season or the next year. In some places there is a custom under which the raiyat has a sort of lien which entitles him to occupy the lands for three years if he elects to do so; and there is an implied agreement that if without fresh rates being fixed, the raiyat occupies the lands for the next season or year, he would pay at the same rate also for the lands he may cultivate during the period of such occupation. Utbandi raiyat held not entitled to notice under S. 106, ———Ghatwali tenure—Ghatwal's—Position of.

The question whether the interest of the ghatwals is co-ordinate with that of the zemindar or subordinate to him is a question of fact. A ghatwal's interest may not necessarily be that of a subordinate tenure-holder. The fact that a land is within the ambit of one's zemindari does not necessarily show that the holder of the land is subordinate to the zemindar. His rights may be co-ordinate with him. Where however in lieu of his holding the tenure, the ghatwal pays some rent to the zemindar, he is a tenureholder under him. The fact that as a part of consideration for holding the tenure, the ghatwal has to render services to the Government, is in no way derogatory to the position of the zamindar who is the proprietor of the tenure. The incidents of a Government ghatwali are that it is hereditary, indivisible, and inalienable, but the rule as to inalienability may be relaxed by the Government in certain cases and the tenure may be alienated by the special permission of the Government. A Government ghatwal while he enjoys certain special privileges also suffers from this disability that he can at any time be dismissed by the Government for misconduct. If the Ghatwal holds the ghatwali tenure subject to the payment of a fixed and established annual sum and the performance of certain duties for the maintenance of the public place, he will be liable to be dismissed by the ———Ghatwali tenure—Handwe Raj—Status of.

There can be no doubt that the Handwe estate was in its origin and has continued to be a Government ghatwali estate possessing all the incidents of a Government ghatwali. There is nothing in the Sanad of 1780 or in the proceedings of the Decennial or the Permanent Settlement to show that it was intended that the ghatwals of Handwe should by reason of the inclusion of their estate in the Zamindari of Kharagpur occupy a status different from that which they occupied before. The status held by the Handwe ghatwals before the Permanent Settlement was that of the talukdars who were declared to be the proprietors of the soil by Regulation VIII of 1793, but by reason of the fact that they did not take steps to have their taluks separated from the Kharagpur Zamindari either under the provisions of the aforesaid Regulation or the Regulation of 1801, their status was converted into one of dependent talukdars. Their failure to apply for separation merely deprived them of the right to separation, other rights remaining unaffected. The position of the proprietor of the Kharagpur estate is that of a superior landlord or one who is entitled to realise a certain rent from the Handwe ghatwals, but the holders of Handwe properties possess all the rights which usually go with the proprietorship of the soil. ———Ghatwali tenure — Inclusion of Government ghatwali in a Zamindari—Effect of.

A Government ghatwali does not cease to be a Government tenure merely by reason of its inclusion in a Zamindari estate and its being a unit in the assessment of that estate, unless such inclusion can be shown to have amounted to a release by the Government of the ghatwali services or to a grant to a third party of the right to receive them and of the right to appoint a ghatwal. The mere existence of a general legal proposition that non-accrual of a right of occupancy is an inherent incident in a ghatwali tenancy, would not rebut the statutory presumption that the record of rights is correct until the contrary is proved by evidence, any more than the general proposition that a landlord is entitled to all land within his estate would rebut an entry that a certain raiyat possesses a right of occupancy in his holding. Least of all would it do so in Chota Nagpur, where it is common knowledge that in such tenancies a local custom or usage exists that a right of occupancy can accrue even as regards agricultural land settled with a new raiyat and much more so where the land is Korkar. ———Ghatwali tenure—Shikmi ghatwali—Alienability—Lease beyond the life time of ghatwal—Validity.

By their very nature the ghatwalis are inalienable. The shikmi ghatwal had to perform police services at the time of the grant. The shikmi ghatwali when it was created, was nothing more than a subdivision or at the most a sub-infeudation in relation to the ghatwali itself and it cannot take upon itself a higher right than that of the ghatwali. The shikmi ghatwalis are therefore inalienable and the shikmi ghatwal has no power to grant a lease which is valid beyond his lifetime. (case law discussed.) ———Ghatwali tenures—Types of.

Very broadly speaking, Ghatwali tenures may be said to fall under two classes : (1) those created by the Government or the ruling power and (2) those created by the Zamindar or the holder of a Ghatwali estate. There is also another class of Ghatwali tenures which though created by the Government have, since their creation, and generally at the time of the Permanent Settlement, been included in a Zamindari estate and formed into a unit in its assessment. These last Ghatwali tenures are really a branch of class (1). The validity of a lease for a term of 33 years (or Khandagutte Cowle), of a carpenter's service inam, is not affected by a subsequent resumption of the inam. The resumption and re-grant involve no more than terminating the inam by the imposition of full assessment, but they do not operate to extinguish any engagement entered into by the holder of the inam prior to such resumption. What was resumed was not the land itself but only the remitted assessment. A reference to S. 13 (it) of Act III of 1895 and to Paragraph 3 of the Board's Standing O. 55 will show that purposes of resumption, an inam is presumed to comprise the net assessment on the land, except where there is prima facie evidence that the land too is included. The question therefore is one of fact whether the person, in whose favour fields have been recorded as muafi-khairati, is a tenant or not. The difference between land given on condition of service and land given to a tenant, which is to be held rent-free as long as the tenant performed certain services is that in the latter case, if the tenant ceases to perform services, then the landlord, though he cannot eject the tenant, is entitled to recover the assessed rent from tenant. 9 N.L.R. 97, Dist.; 3 N.L.R. 185, Rel. on. LAND TENURE.

The nature and extent of mirasidars in Miras villages vary from place to place in the presidency and the onus is on the mirasidars to prove that any specified incident attaches to miras rights in any particular district. 40 M. 410, 2 M. 149, Ref. 'Miras' right to cultivable land does not mean absolute ownership; it is only a preferential right. The right of cultivable waste is again a matter for a proof. 6 M. 303 and 21 M. 433, Ref. So in the absence of any reliable evidence, apart from opinions expressed by some of the witnesses, no assumption can be made that, because the plaintiff is styled ekabhogam mirasdar, and has hitherto been the sole pattadar in a village close to the Chingleput border, he must have such rights and privileges. ———Mirasi tenure—Mirasi inam village—Tenants introduced into uncultivated lands—Melwaramdar as landlord—Right of thunduwaramdar.

In the case of a mirasi inam village, where new tenants have been introduced into uncultivated land, the melwaramdar can only be regarded as the landlord; and even though the mirasidar receives the thunduvaram he cannot be regarded as a landlord nor is he entitled to eject the newly introduced tenants. The payment of thunduvaram is not indicative of the character of mirasidar as landlord. It is only a customary payment due to the mirasidar on account of his preferential rights in the village. The right to the thunduvaram can only be regarded as the present remnant of a customary right the origin of which is lost in obscurity. It is not possible to contend that the mirasidars are the sole landlords, while recognizing the melwaramdars as entitled to a portion of the rent due to the landlords of the village. The position that there is a double set of landlords, melwaramdars getting the melwaram, and the mirasidars getting the thunduwaram is an impossible position. Where tenants have been introduced on uncultivated land in a mirasi inam village and they have been in possession for over a century without executing muchilikas they are not liable to be ejected at the option of either the mirasidar or of any body. Absence of muchilikas though the whole century would be practically conclusive of the consciousness of all parties that all the newly introduced tenants whether their rights are less than mirasidars or equal to theirs were certainly not regarded as ejectable at the option of the mirasidars or of anybody whatever help the mirasidar might have rendered the tenant by introducing him on the kaduvetti or immemorial waste land for the purpose of reclamation, the melwaramdar only must be regarded as a landlord and the mirasidar cannot be regarded as a landlord. Having regard to the nature of the mirasi tenure and its incidence, the mirasidars, in so far as they are mirasidars cannot be regarded as landholders and are not entitled to eject the newly introduced tenants. There is no particular reason why tenants introduced into uncultivated lands in the mirasi inam villages should stand on a different footing from tenants introduced into such lands

If a ryot entitled to water in an irrigation source, starting in the river bed, abandons his customary channel and opens another in such a way as to cause loss or likelihood of loss of supply to another ryot in his customary channel, the latter has a right of action against the offending ryot. It makes no difference in the law applicable that the Government supply of water in the river bed sinks at time below the surface. Government by recognizing these channels have recognized that the sub-surface water is part of the recognized supply, which it is their duty to have conveyed in sufficient quantity to the respective wet areas. ———Ryotwari tenure—Rights to water as against Government and as against other wet ryots—Interference with customary supply by private parties—Cause of action.

The ryot is entitled to such supply of water as is necessary and sufficient for the irrigation of his registered wet fields. He must accept that supply from the irrigation source approved by Government who can alter the manner and method of supply. He has no right to insist on any particular source or any other source than that recognized by Government or that it shall come by any particular channel, nor can he prescribe against the Government for such right by user otherwise for any length of time. Between him and the Government there is something in the nature of a contractual obligation under which Government undertakes to regulate, distribute and furnish to him his necessary supply in the manner authorized by it as the proper and usual manner, until and unless Government has provided him with another, equally efficient. This obligation by Government is in certain cases subject to the reciprocal obligation of the ryot to keep the main channel free from silt and sometimes himself to construct the minor interfield channels. As between two villages or areas each taking off from the same source by its own channel, the right of each to water, be it contractual or proprietary, as against Government, is to its necessary and sufficient supply and as against each other to that supply, so soon as the supply has passed into its own channel and earmarked for it. The same principle mutatis mutandis applies to individual wet ryots of the same villages inter se. The wet ryot has a right as against other wet ryots and even subject to Government's right to give him an equally efficient supply, as against Government to the protection of law for that supply, once it has passed into the channel earmarked for his supply. One ryot cannot prescribe against another or against Government for supply by any one particular channel. His user of a particular channel is in no sense adverse to the user by another of another channel, since each uses it by authorization of Government. Nor is it an easement by which he is conveying property of his own over a servient tenement. It is an incident of ryotwari tenure. If the customary supply and manner of supplying according to this contractual or proprietary right has been interfered with not by Government but by private parties, such interference, prima facie, is an invasion of a right and will give rise to a civil cause of action. 7 M.H.C.R. 60; 16 Mad. 333; 28 Mad. 72; 31 Mad. 171; 32 Mad. 141; 32 Mad. 423; 37 Mad. 304 and ———Service tenure—Failure to perform services—Liability to ejectment.

The refusal by a tenant to perform services which are incidental to his holding is sufficient of itself to ground a suit for ejectment. No question of the lessor having to assert a right of forfeiture or any matter of that kind arises at all. The tenancy automatically comes to an end when the tenant makes default in rendering the services stipulated for and the grantor thereupon becomes entitled to re-enter. Nor does the landlord lose the right merely by allowing a long period of time to elapse before he takes steps to enforce that right by legal process.

Per Curiam :—There seems to be a distinction between a case where there is a right to service of public character such as chowkidari chakran and one where the service is to a private person such as the grantor. In the former case the zemindar himself is not or may not always be entitled to resume possession whereas in the latter case he can do so either when the service is not required or when the grantee has refused to perform the service. The plaintiff's lands were leased by public auction in March, 1921, for a period of seven years. The defendant's bid was the highest and he deposited a portion of the amount before the selling officer, the balance to be paid in yearly instalments. The defendant continued in possession for about 4 years and the plaintiff brought the present suit for delivery of possession, alleging that the lease in favour of the defendant was a yearly lease and for that purpose relied on the auction list, a muchalika executed by the defendant a day after the auction and an agreement, dated 15th June, 1921, for showing that the original lease was superseded by a later lease in writing.

Held, that as it was an agricultural lease, it could be made orally, that the oral lease became complete on the acceptance by the selling officer of the defendant's bid, that the documents which came into existence subsequently did not supersede the oral lease, that the auction list and muchalika having been suppressed by the plaintiff, he could not be permitted to establish their contents by secondary evidence and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief prayed for. LEASE—construction.

When a lessee assigns his term under the lease, the lessee is liable to pay rent to the superior landlord; but the assignor also continues to be liable for the rent on his personal covenant. He is therefore entitled to an indemnity from the assignee in respect of the rent payable to the landlord. But a suit by the assignor against the assignee for recovery of the rent from him, alleging that the defendant had not paid the rent to the landlord and that the latter had given him (plaintiff) notice to pay rent will be premature when the plaintiff has not himself paid the rent to the landlord and when the landlord has not taken any steps beyond issuing the notice to the assignor. The obligation of the assignee of a lease to pay rent to the superior landlord and the right of indemnity which the assignor has as against the assignee both arise under the law itself and not by reason of any covenant between the parties as in the case of a sub-lease. A lease recited that the lessee was already in possession of the property (consisting of a hat bazar, bandar and ghat under a (miadi) temporary ijara settlement, that the lessor had acceded to the lessee's prayer and made a bemeyadi settlement with him. The premium under the previous temporary settlement had been Rs. 2,000 and the rent Rs. 500 per annum, whereas under the present lease the premium was Rs. 3,500 and the annual rent Rs. 800. The lease contained conditions disabling the lessee from claiming abatement of the fixed rent on any ground, from making a surrender and from granting any bemeyadi settlement to any other person and specifically reserved to the landlord the right of taking khas possession in certain specified circumstances. On a question arising if, on a proper construction of the kabuliyat, the tenancy was perpetual or determinable at will.

LEASE—Construction.

Held, that the question cannot be resolved by reference only to the use and meaning of the word "bemeyadi" but should be determined after consideration of all the provisions of the kabuliyat, by which the rights of the parties are defined ; that the settlement created a perpetual tenancy, not terminable at will on notice. ———Construction—Chukani—Status of chukanidar —Permanency of right.

The word chukani does not mean a temporary interest but it implies a permanent element which may develop into an occupancy right. But where in a lease the word "chukani" is used only with reference to the interest of an under-raiyat which is not heritable, the chukanidar cannot acquire a right of occupancy by 12 years' occupation of the land in question. Consequently on the death of the chukanidar, his heirs are liable to be ejected as trespassers. (Nasim Ali, J.) SARIATULLA v. HABIBAR RAHAMAN KHAN. 39 C.W.N. 454=A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 462.

———Construction— Forfeiture clause— Stipulation for forfeiture on lessee's bankruptcy—Lessee benamidar for limited company—Liquidation of company—If entails forfeiture of lease.

Appellant granted a lease of the suit property for a term of 75 years to K, who was admittedly a benamidar for the respondents, a limited company. The lease provided inter alia that 'if the lessee becomes bankrupt, the lessee's rights shall ipso facto cease and this (lease) shall be void and lessor shall have the right to re-enter and take possession of the premises as if this lease were non existent and without the lessee being entitled to claim damages or compensation of any kind from the lessor." About two and a half years after the lease, the High Court made an order for the compulsory winding up of the respondent company and an official liquidator was appointed. Appellant claimed that he was entitled to enforce the forfeiture clause as the "lessee", the company had become "bankrupt," as the company had gone into liquidation.

Held, (1) that a forfeiture clause in a lease must always be construed strictly as against the person seeking to enforce and to take advantage of it, and effect should be given to it only so far as it was rendered absolutely necessary by the wording of the clause ; (2) that the benami character of the lease did not necessarily lead to the inference that the proviso for forfeiture and re-entry was not intended to apply to the insolvency of the benamidar lessee ; (3) that it could not be said that the appellant lessor had in mind on the date of the lease that possibility of the respondent company going into liquidation and intended to guard himself against such a contingency; and (4) that therefore appellant was not entitled to enforce the clause in question. ———Construction—Holding over by tenant—Liability for rent.

A certain property was usufructuarily mortgaged by B in favour of A on 18th January, 1911, on condition that the "othi" right was to be for the period of two years. Instead of actually taking possession of the mortgage property, A granted a lease on 19th January, 1911, of the same on a fixed annual rent, such rent being payable up to the time of the redemption of the "othi." There was a collateral agreement by way of mortgage, under which the property was offered as security for the payment of rent due under the lease. In 1916 a certain amount was paid by B towards the rent due under the lease and was accepted by A. After a period of more than 12 years, A brought the present suit for the recovery of a sum alleged to be due under the lease-deed.

Held, (1) that the usufructuary mortgage and the lease-deed were the parts of the same transaction and that the lease was for a period of two years only; (2) that B's continuance of possession after expiration of the original term of two years must be taken to be that of a tenant holding over on the original terms of the lease; (3) that the collateral security clause in the lease-deed was not any part of the terms which constituted the transaction of the lease and hence this clause could not be carried over after the determination of two years period; (4) that A could only recover the rent due for three years prior to the suit. Held, that the talukdar merely wished to grant to the lessees heritable occupancy rights in the place of the occupancy rights for life and there was no intention of converting their occupancy rights into the rights of under-proprietors and that the use of the expression "naslan bad naslan" the provision for payment of malikana dues to the lessor and to his heirs, the liability to pay for the chaukidar and the patwari and the non-reservation of the right of "re-entry" to the lessor, do not necessarily indicate any intention of conferring a transferable estate. The price of ten arhis was stated to be Rs. 10. The lease further provided for a selami of Rs. 150 and two kinds of penalties, namely for default of cash rent and for default of paddy rent; for the former default, interest was realisable and for the latter default barhi or damages were to be realisable.

Held, on construction of the lease, (1) that it was intended that a cash rent and paddy rent were to be kept separate; (2) that the paddy rent was meant to be a real rent, that is to say, a tenant was liable to deliver paddy in addition to paying cash rent; (3) that in case of failure to deliver paddy rent the landlord was entitled to get the paddy rent at Rs. 10 and not at the current market rate; (4) that the primary liability was to pay 10 arhis of paddy and only if he could show that he was unable for any reason to deliver the paddy was he liable to pay Rs. 10. It was not intended that the tenant should escape liability when he was in a position to give paddy, or that he should be liable to pay its cash value of the current market rate when, owing to scarcity for instance, there was dearth of paddy and the price would be high. Held, that the use of the word 'ticca' indicated meant that it was 'fixed in perpetuity' and that on non-delivery of the paddy, the landlord was entitled only to claim the sum of Rs. 20 mentioned in the kabuliyat with the specified rate of interest and not to the market value; and that the absence of a provision "bari" also implied that the landlord was entitled only to the amount stipulated in the lease. ———Construction—Perpetual lease—Lease without any definite period specified—Duration of—Circumstances to be considered.

From the mere fact that no definite period is specified in a lease, it does not necessarily follow that the lease is a perpetual lease. If a grant be made to a man for an indefinite period, if enures, generally speaking, for his lifetime and passes no interest to his heirs unless there are some words showing an intention to grant a hereditary interest. But this rule does not apply if the period of the grant can be definitely ascertained from the other terms of the instrument creating the lease. In the absence of express words importing perpetuity in the lease itself it is permissible to take into consideration the object of the lease, the circumstances under which it was created and the subsequent conduct of the parties to determine whether the grant was intended to be perpetual. The land was compulsorily acquired by the Government and the Land Acquisition Officer made a reference to the Court as regards the distribution of the compensation money.

Held, that the lease was a lease in perpetuity with a limitation or condition by which the lease is determined on the acquisition of the land by the Government; that the lease was determined on such acquisition, that the compensation for all the interest in the land except for wells, trees and other lessee's improvements should go to the lessors, and the assignee of the lessee's interest was entitled only to so much of the compensation as represented the value of improvements effected by the lessee; that the stipulation bound not only the original lessee but also the ultimate assignee of the lessee's interests in the lease, though it did not amount to a covenant running with the land (Reilly, C.J. and Srinivasa Rao, J.) ———Construction—Perpetual lease—"Thika mokra"—Permanent tenancy.

A Kabuliyat, after referring to the fact that the tenant had been holding the land for some considerable time before the execution of the document, stated that it was being executed as the tenant was desirous of having a registered potta or lease thika mokra for a fixed yearly rent of Rs. 6. In case of default in payment of rent, the landlord was entitled to evict the tenant without obtaining relinquishment from the tenant. Without the landlord's consent, trees could not be cut down or new tanks dug or transfer of lands by sale or mortgage made. New taxes by the State were to be paid by tenant who also undertook to preserve the boundaries as of old.

Held, that in the context, the word 'thika' indicated the creation of a tenancy, and 'mokra' signified that the rent had been fixed in perpetuity and that slight increase of rent from Rs. 6 to Rs. 6-3-0 or the restrictions on the powers of the tenant did not destroy the permanent character of the tenancy. Covenant.

———Covenant against alienation — Provision for enhanced rent on breach—If penal—Power of Court to relieve against—Waiver—Acceptance of original lower rent after alienation—Effect of.

A permanent mulgeni lease deed provided that the lessees were not to alienate their interest and that in case of such alienation, the rent was to be paid at an enhanced rate from that date. The lessees sold their interests, but the lessor continued to accept rent at the original rate. About 16 years after the alienation, the lessor sued for rent at the enhanced rate.

Held, that the stipulation for enhanced rent on breach of covenant against alienation was not penal, but only in the nature of liquidated damages and could not be relieved against, and that the lessor was entitled to claim rent at the enhanced rate except for the period for which he had collected the rent at the lower rate.

Held, further, that the acceptance by the lessor of the lower rent with full knowledge of the breach of the condition would not amount to waiver of the claim for enhanced rents. ———Covenant as to mutation fee in case of transfer —Transferee bound—Default by transferee—Right of landlord to sue—Court auction-purchaser—Right to sue transferee in ejectment.

One of the terms of a mourashi mokrari lease was as follows:—"If you transfer the lands of this jama to anybody, the purchaser would be bound to pay into my sarkar as mutation fee one fourth of the amount which would be the fair price for the land at the time, if such fee is not paid, the transfer will not be valid." The lessee sold the tenancy but the transferee did not pay chouth. The lessors sued the original lessee for rent and had the property sold in execution of their decree The purchaser who made his purchase at the rent execution sale sued the transferee from the lessee in ejectment.

Held, such a restrictive covenant in a lease is a valid covenant for the benefit of the lessor and is operative and it runs with the land and remains operative during the entire period of the lease, that the covenant as to payment of mutation fee was valid and enforceable and that the purchaser was entitled to treat the transferee as one with no title to remain on the land and to eject him under the circumstances. A bemiadi lease of land in a Municipal town taken by a Muktear with the object of building a basha thereon to enable him to carry on the legal profession in the Law Courts of the place, is not a permanent lease. Basha does not carry with it the idea of a permanent residence. The lease is one for the lifetime of the lessee. The erection on the land by the lessee of 3 or 4 corrugated iron roofed huts with pucca plinths, stairs and compound wall is not inconsistent with the lease being only for the lifetime of the lessee. Nor would the consent of the lessor to such erections, change the lease as originally granted into a perpetual right of occupation by an implied contract, as it were, the structures being such as can be erected by the lessee for his purpose during his lifetime in a Municipal town. The lessee cannot also invoke the equitable doctrine of estoppel by acquiescence in such a case, because, the lessor cannot be said to have abstained from asserting his legal rights, or encouraged the lessee to erect the structures, so as to prevent him from evicting the lessee who has made no mistake about his rights, being fully aware that the lease is not one in perpetuity. The question whether the parties intended that the mortgage-deed should or should not be enforced in the case of default of either party is in this aspect purely a question of fact and not a question of law. The counsel when he stated that in the event of default by either party, the plaintiff was entitled to enforce the mortgage was merely stating his client's position as to the real understanding between the parties and not expressing an opinion on a point of law. In the circumstances it would be unfair to allow the Counsel to appear against the same person later on, and an assurance on the part of that individual that he had no objection to the counsel's appearance in Court would also be of no avail in the matter. ———Authority—Compromise—Authority withdrawn by client—Opposite party in ignorance—Court, if will enforce compromise.

Counsel in India have the same implied authority to compromise an action as have Counsel in the English Courts. But if such authority is invoked to support an agreement of compromise, the circumstances must be carefully examined. In the first instance, the authority is an actual authority implied from the employment as Counsel. It may however be withdrawn or limited by the client; in such a case the actual authority is destroyed or restricted; and the other party if in ignorance of the limitation, could only rely upon ostensible authority. But if in fact Counsel has had his authority withdrawn or restricted, the Courts will not feel bound to enforce a compromise made by him contrary to the restriction, even though the lack of actual authority is not known to the other party. ———Authority—Compromise—Power to — Advocate, O.S., Bombay—Power to agree to extension of time for award.

The rights of an advocate, O.S., are the same as those of a Barrister. Amongst the many powers, duties, privileges and obligations extending beyond the mere duty of acting as an Advocate, he has power to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration or to compromise it. Those powers and obligations are derived from his retainer as Counsel and not from any contractual appointment as an agent. In non-litigious work, on the other hand, Counsel has no such special authority. His authority in that class of work is merely that of an agent and depends on the terms of his particular employment.

Obiter.—The special authority of Counsel in relation to litigation is confined to litigation in the ordinary course and does not extend to matters pending before private tribunals. Even apart from any such special authority, even an ordinary agent (and more so in the case of an Advocate) has the power to agree to an extension of time for making the award. ———Authority— Compromise— Power over matter collateral to suit.

In an action by transferee challenging a mortgage by the transferor as collusive, a compromise to the effect that the mortgagee should buy out the plaintiff's interest in the mortgaged property for an agreed price cannot be entered into by Counsel as it is a matter collateral to the suit. Not only would it not be binding on the parties but it would, in any case, be a matter in respect of which the Court in pursuance of O. 23, R. 3, should not make a decree. A compromise by the Counsel cannot be supported by reference only to the implied authority of the Advocate. Although a Counsel has complete authority over the suit, the mode of conducting, it and all that is incident to it—such as withdrawing the record, calling no witnesses or selecting such as, in his discretion, he thinks ought to be called, and other matters which properly belonged to the suit and the management and conduct of the trial—he has not, by virtue of his retainer in the suit, any power over matters that are collateral to it. So in an action however, desirable it may be that litigation should cease by one of the parties purchasing the property of the other, the Counsel have no authority to agree to such a sale and bind the parties to the suit without their consent, and certainly not contrary to their instructions and such an agreement would be void. ———Authority—Consent decree—Binding nature on client.

When the case was opened, the Counsel for defendant in view of certain documents mentioned to the Attorney that the defendant should consent to a decree and he also consulted his client behind his back, but it appeared that the Counsel was under the impression that the person consulted was a relative of the party and not the party himself. The decree that was passed on the basis of the Counsel's representation was sought to be impugned on the ground that the Counsel did not have the requisite authority.

Held, that the party present having in fact been consulted the agreement was binding on him.

Per Rankin, C.J.—If the party thought he was not properly and adequately consulted then his duty was to refuse, when his Counsel was proposing to consent to a decree to allow that to happen and if necessary to give notice to the other side and the Court that he was withdrawing the authority which the Counsel had on his behalf. If any right is to accrue to the client from the fact of his being in Court, he must at least make his presence known to the Counsel in order that the Counsel may act accordingly and it is monstrous to suppose that, because he keeps quiet in a back seat and does not even instruct his Counsel as to who the client is or take any steps to inform the Counsel of his presence, the Counsel has got to carry on upon the footing that he has no authority to deal with the case as circumstances may require. LEGAL PRACTITIONER—Authority.

———Authority—Construction—General powers followed by specific instances of special authority—Power to abide by oath of witness, implied.

Per F.B. (Mukerji, J., dissenting).—In the case of an appointment of a vakil by vakalatnama to conduct a case, it is prima facie implied that he has full power to conduct the ease in the way he considers best and therefore such a document should be construed liberally. If the vakalatnama confers very wide powers in very general terms on the vakil, and authorizes him to conduct the case and to take other proceedings and expressly states that whatever is done by the vakil should be accepted by the litigant and then it goes on to specify certain particularly important powers like those of appointing arbitrators and compromising disputes, etc., unless there is a special clause excluding his authority to act in a particular way in the course of the suit, such an authority should be implied. The mere fact that certain important powers are emphasised in particular does not in any way derogate from the general authority conferred upon him. It follows therefore, that when general authority to conduct a case is conferred upon a vakil and it is followed by special powers to compromise a case and to refer the dispute to arbitration, the power to abide by the oath of a witness whether under the Oaths Act or by way of an agreement or compromise is by necessary application implied. 58 M.L.J. 551 (P.C.); 43 Cal. 527; 19 A.L J. 63; 13 All. 272 (F.B.); 38 All. 131; 25 A.L J. 29, Ref. Protracted examinations of witnesses with questions which are quite irrelevant to the suit, and only tend to swell the size of the record, must be deprecated. Disciplinary action.

———Disciplinary action—Considerations.

The point to be considered in all cases of disciplinary action against a member of the Bar is whether his conduct involves unfitness on his part for the exercise of his profession. Moral turpitude which would entitle the Court to take action must be such as is connected with the pleader's profession or consists of any attack upon the system of which the Court forms part or embarrasses in any way the administration of justice by the Courts. A speech of a vakil alleged to injure the feelings of an important sect of the Mohammadans does not fall in any of these categories and is, therefore, not one which would induce the High Court of Jammu and Kashmir to take any action against him. The State imposes suitable penalties for the infringement of its laws and provides proper sanctions for the enforcement of such penalties and there is no reason why the disciplinary jurisdiction vested in the High Court should be employed merely in aid of the Criminal Law. ———Disciplinary action—Conviction for sedition—Legality of conviction—If can be challenged.

Where a legal practitioner has been convicted for sedition, it is not open to him in an inquiry under disciplinary jurisdiction to contend that his conviction was not justified on the facts found. LEGAL PRACTITIONER—Duties.

———Duties—Accepting brief for opposite party—Rules regulating — Madras High Court Rules of Practice, R. 277.

R. 277 of the Madras High Court Rules of Practice only embodies the principles observed by the Courts generally in India and England for regulating professional conduct and etiquette in cases where a Counsel who has advised a party or acted for him at any stage of a suit wishes to appear for the opposite party in the same proceeding. The general rule is that he cannot appear for the opposite party except when specially authorized by the Court or with the consent of the party. Such consent may be express or presumed if, without offering an engagement to the pleader, the party engages another to appear for him. In the absence of consent express or implied, the pleader is bound to give an opportunity to the party to engage his service. But even in a case where the party refuses to retain him, Counsel ought not to accept a brief for the opposite party if he would be embarrassed in the discharge of his duty by reason of the confidence reposed in him. ———Duties — Approval of breach of laws—Impropriety.

Practising pleader wishing to remain on the roll must remember that those who live by the law should keep the law and not encourage others in its breach by publicly extolling and glorifying persons sentenced for breach of laws and by showing hearty sympathy towards seditious and disloyal movement. A pleader who gives formal and public expression of his approvol of the conduct of a person who commits offences against the law of the land is not a proper person to hold the office of the pleader. ———Duties—Collecting evidence for client.

A pleader helping his clients by collecting evidence for them to be used on their behalf does not exceed his duties as their Counsel. In the Punjab the Counsel has the duties both of solicitor and of advocate, and it cannot be held that it is no part of the duties of a solicitor either to collect evidence on behalf of his client or even to furnish him information which was in his own personal knowledge and not in the knowledge of his client at all. ———Duties—Conduct of case—Intimidation by Judge—Duty of Counsel to protest.

It is the duty of the members of the Bar, if their clients are prematurely threatened from the Bench, not to adopt an attitude which may appear pusillanimous, but to protest then and there, that they resent such observations, and if necessary, after consultation with their attorney instructing them, to apply for a transfer of the case to the list of another Judge. ———Duties—Drafting pleadings—Grave and serious allegations.

Per Thom, J.—No Counsel is entitled to frame a serious charge against a party to a litigation unless he is in possession of admissible and relevant evidence upon which, if accepted, Counsel could reasonably ask the Court to hold the allegations true. It may well be that the evidence in support of the allegations is untrue and it is certainly not the duty of a Counsel in the ordinary course to test the truth of the witnesses whom he intends to put into the witness box but at the conclusion of the evidence which he has led, he should be in a position to submit as a reasonable proposition to the Court that the evidence which he has led if accepted establishes the allegations for which he had made himself responsible. If he is not in possession of such evidence to support them, he is not entitled to make grave and serious allegations.

Per Iqbal Ahmad, J.—It is in the interest of administration of justice that too rigid a test of the conduct of an Advocate in the matter of drafting pleadings should not be emphasised and that the test should be such as not to deter a Counsel from fearlessly placing before the Court such allegations as their clients instruct them to make, so long as those allegations do not appear manifestly reckless and unfounded. It is no doubt the duty of Counsel to use their own judgment, experience and discretion and not to make irrelevant or unduly insulting allegations in the pleadings, but it is equally their duty to embody the case of their clients in the pleadings fearlessly, provided the instructions received from the clients justify the case in the pleadings. While on the one hand a Counsel is expected to be careful, and not reckless in drafting the pleadings, he cannot, on the other hand, assume the role of a Judge and refuse to embody allegations that his client instructs him to make unless and until he has examined the evidence on the subject. A Counsel is one sense the mouthpiece of his client, but he does not guarantee or pledge himself for his client's veracity.

Per Allsop, J.—On the one hand Counsel must look to the interests of his client and not be deterred by fear or favour from making any allegations which in those interests it is necessary for him to make. On the other hand, he cannot take shelter behind his client and claim to be an entirely irresponsible instrument in his client's hands. There remains in him a duty and an obligation to his fellow citizens and he is certainly not entitled to make scandalous and serious allegations against those fellow citizens unless he has some basis upon which the allegations can be grounded. It is the duty of an advocate to maintain towards the Court a respectful attitude and treat the Bench always with courtesy and deference. ———Fees—Money withdrawn from Court for client—Suit for—Plea of appropriation for services rendered—Sustainability—Lien—Question, if arises.

In a suit against an advocate by his client to recover a sum of money withdrawn from Court by the defendant on behalf of the plaintiffs, the defendant pleaded that he had rendered professional services for which the remuneration promised had not been paid and that he had appropriated the amount towards that. The Small Cause Judge without going into the case set up by the defendant decreed the suit holding that the defendant had no right to exercise a right of lien over the money in his hand.

Held, that the general question of the right of exercise of a legal practitioner's lien did not arise in the case and that the question for decision was whether the services were rendered as pleaded entitling the defendant to remuneration and there was an agreement to appropriate the amount towards such remuneration. The Court never interferes for the purpose of preserving the solicitor's lien after a bona fide compromise between the parties has been arrived at, though the result of such compromise may be to deprive the solicitor of his costs. The solicitor's lien never precludes a fair and honest arrangement between the parties unless the solicitor is in a position to prove that there was a fraudulent intention on the part of the plaintiff and defendant to cheat him of the costs payable to him by the party. In the absence of any such collusion, the parties may, even after notice of the solicitor's lien, compromise before verdict or judgment, without regard to the solicitor's claim for costs. But if a valid compromise is made, and after the compromise the solicitor gives notice that he has a lien for costs, it is at the defendant's peril if in face of that notice he pays over the money which has been agreed to be paid to the plaintiff by way of compromise. Ross v. Buxton, 42 Ch. In India as at English Common Law, a solicitor has a particular lien which does not depend on actual possession of the property, as distinguished from possessory lien by reason of certain property like title deeds being in his hands. This lien is not liable to be defeated on the ground that the assignee of a decree or the attaching creditor of the Solicitor's client had no express notice of the lien. ———Lien—Solicitor's lien—General and special lien—Extent of—Discharge by client and discharging himself—Distinction between.

A solicitor has a lien upon the funds, money or property recovered for his client, but this lien is, unlike a lien on documents and papers, not a general lien, but restricted to costs incurred in the recovery of the funds, money or property. He has, however, a general lien upon all his client's papers and documents for payment of all taxable costs, charges and expenses incurred by him on behalf of his client and the lien entitles him to refuse production of the papers and documents to his client except on certain conditions. There is, however, a distinction in English and Indian law according to which the rule is quite different when the solicitor discharges himself from what it is when the solicitor is discharged by his client. If a solicitor discharges himself, the client or his new solicitor is entitled to an order not merely for inspection and production of the papers and documents in the former solicitor's possession, but also for delivery thereof on an undertaking to hold them without prejudice to the former solicitor's lien, and subject to the re-delivery thereof after the hearing of the suit and if necessary, subject also to the undertaking to ———Misconduct—Criminal offence—Disciplinary action—Advisability of criminal trial in the first instance.

Per Reilly, J.—Misconduct which is the subject of inquiry under the Bar Councils Act may often involve the commission of criminal offences. The criminal offence involved may sometimes be of a petty nature, such as trespass or assult, or may be only incidental to the misconduct which is the serious matter alleged against the Advocate concerned. In such cases it may often be quite unnecessary to insist that the criminal charge should be disposed of before the Advocate's conduct is investigated under the Bar Councils Act. Again the criminal offence alleged against the Advocate may be such that he can be prosecuted for it only on the complaint of a private person, which has not been made, or may be one in respect of which it is obviously appropriate that the complaint has been made. In either of those cases there may be nothing improper or inappropriate in launching an inquiry into misconduct under the Bar Councils Act, although the criminal charge involved has not been disposed of. But when, as in the present case, the Advocate is accused of a grave criminal offence, for which no private complaint is required, to deal with him under the Bar Councils Act for the misconduct involved in the commission of that offence before he has been tried for the offence appears to me altogether improper. He has no right whatever, even on the instructions of his client recklessly to make charges of fraud. His responsibility to the Court, and to the Bar, whose traditions it is his duty to maintain, make it incumbent upon him to satisfy himself that there are reasonable grounds for making such charges. Where, in a written statement filed by the defendants and signed by their Advocate on their behalf, a charge of fraud against the plaintiff was recklessly made without a shred of evidence to support it and this fact was well known to the defendants and their Advocates.

Held, that the conduct of the Advocate in alleging fraud on behalf of his client, in the written statement

To establish misconduct all that has to be proved is misbehaviour which would justify removal or suspension; it is not necessary that the act of misconduct should have all the ingredients of a 'crime' under the criminal law. Where by deceiving the Court, a legal practitioner obtains an adjournment to delay the course of justice and to gain an advantage for his client by dishonest means, and while continuing to be Counsel for his client and being fully aware that the case is still pending, he improperly gives himself jurisdiction as an arbitrator and prevents the Court from proceeding to decide the case and thereby helps his client to improperly procure an award, he is guilty of gross professional misconduct which is highly unscrupulous and improper. When a client asks his pleader to write in a pleading or petition accusations of dishonesty, criminality, etc., against any one or instructs him to ask questions of that nature, the pleader is not to blindly follow the instruction. He must satisfy himself that, apart from their relevancy, there are materials on which those accusations or questions can be made or asked and that they are not recklessly made. If he does not do so, he is guilty of professional misconduct. It is not, however, necessary that at the time of receiving instructions or preparing the pleadings, the pleader must insist on having certified copies of all the papers. He must act in good faith and with due care. But it is not his duty to go about and inquire into the truth of the allegation. Investigation of truth is not the duty of the pleader, but the function of the Court. When a pleading contains allegations of fraud or collusion or other similar charges, the pleader's duty ends when he has satisfied himself that his client was not making a reckless irresponsible statement and that there is some material on which it is based. It is enough if he believes that there are good grounds for making the charge. While it is the duty of the Court to see that pleaders do not recklessly make themselves parties to such allegations and take shelter under the privilege of a lawyer and escape the consequences by simply stating that they were instructed, so much restriction should not be placed on them that when a member of the public feels aggrieved against a public officer and wants to take up his conduct before a tribunal, lawyers may not be available to accept the brief. It was proved that the advocate's clerk consulted him and showed him the papers before he entered into agreements with his clients and that he gave him advice regarding the prospect of the litigation.

Held, that a Counsel is expected to be free from any personal as distinguished from professional interest in litigation and the conduct of the Advocate in allowing his clerk to enter into such a transaction called for severe censure, but his conduct in advising him in the matter and then appearing for the litigants without receiving the usual fees in advance amounted to professional misconduct. ———Misconduct—Test—Rules for guidance.

The principles to be applied in considering whether certain conduct amounts to misconduct or not are as follows : (1) that the mere holding of certain views and expression of such views in language however emphatic or strong is no ground for taking disciplinary action against a legal practitioner ; (2) that mere conviction for an offence is not sufficient but the Court must look into the nature of the act on which the conviction is based to decide whether the legal practitioner is an unfit person to remain in the profession ; (3) that a legal practitioner is a part of the machinery provided for the maintenance of order and the enforcement of the law of the land ; it is therefore inconsistent with his duties as legal practitioner to incite others either to boycott the Courts or to break the law which it is the duty of the Courts to administer : those who live by the law cannot preach the breaking of the law ; (4) that organized breach of the peace, incitement to acts tending to subvert order is a reasonable cause to suspend or remove a lega practitioner; and (5) that acts involving moral turpitude or which imply general infamy make a legal practitioner unfit to remain on the rolls of the Court. An Advocate in the exercise of his profession is bound to exercise reasonable skill and prudence but he is not expected to be infallible and unless the Court is satisfied that the act complained of was such that could not reasonably have been done by an Advocate exercising reasonable skill and care, a suit for negligence is not maintainable against the Advocate. The defendant acted as Counsel for the plaintiff in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights against his wife and a share of her inherited properties. He had been instructed to insist on the plaintiff's right to mesne profits in respect of his share. The suit was compromised and cl. (3) of the compromise declared that the plaintiff was entitled to one-third of the joint interest of the couple in the estate of the wife's father at the time of his death. No mention was made of mesne profits as the Advocates differed on the amount to which the plaintiff was entitled and considered it inadvisable to postpone the compromise on that account and the plaintiff's Advocate thought that it would be open to the plaintiff to agitate the matter subsequently, if necessary. In the administration proceedings that followed, cl. (3) was construed by the Court as absolutely debarring the plaintiff from claiming any mesne profits in respect of that property. In a suit for damages for negligence by the plaintiff against his Advocate,

(5) It is a question of fact in each case whether the Counsel acts under instructions when he compromises or refers to arbitration matters not involved in the suit and the Court on a consideration of the probabilities and the circumstances of the case can find that the Counsel acted on instructions, even though there is no direct evidence on the point. ———Privilege — Extent of—Presumption of good faith—Defamatory statements about third parties—Caution necessary—Duty to withdraw statement, when shown to be untrue.

A member of the bar in this country has no absolute privilege. An Advocate who makes defamatory statements in the conduct of a case has no wider protection than a layman ; that is to say, he has to bring his case within the terms of Excep. 9 to S. 499, I. P. Code, and under 105 of the Indian Evidence Act the burden of proof would normally be with him. But in practice the Courts have held that an Advocate is entitled to special protection and that if an Advocate is called in question in respect of defamatory statements made by him in the course of his duties as an Advocate, the Court ought to presume that he acted in good faith and upon instructions and ought to require the other party to prove express malice. The Advocate ought to be cautious about making defamatory statements, particularly about people who are not parties or witnesses on the strength of instructions which he has had no time to verify; and if he has been misled into making such a statement which turns out to be untrue, it is his duty to withdraw the statement as soon as it is shown to be untrue or take the consequences like any other individual. Relation with client.

———Relation with client—Duty to client and to Court.

The relation of the legal practitioner and client involves the highest personal trust and confidence. The practitioner is bound to discharge his duties to his client with the strictest fidelity and is subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court for dereliction of duty. He is more than an agent or servant of his client, so far as the Court is concerned. He is in fact an officer of the Court, and as such, owes good faith and honourable dealing to the Court before which he practises his profession. The misconduct of an Advocate is not a matter solely between him and this client; it is a matter of public importance, and the High Cobrt has a duty to perform to the suitors and to the legal profession, and is bound to see that the persons admitted to the profession are those persons on whose integrity and honour reliance may be placed and that their conduct is such as to inspire confidence in their character. The expression "defect of character" as used in S. 12 must be taken to include not only moral turpitude but also such defect in the character of a pleader which renders him unfit to be a member of the honourable profession to which he belongs. The pleaders were connected with the Civil Disobedience movement, and were convicted in 1930; they were convicted again in 1932 for offences committed as members of a procession organized in connexion with the Civil Disobedience movement.

Held, that the offences for which they were convicted involved serious defect of character, seeing that they were directed against obedience to law, which it was the duty of the Courts and of the members of the legal profession to enforce and maintain, and that action could be taken under S. 12. LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (1879), S. 12.

No distinction can be drawn between the various kinds of law-breaking as to when such breaking amounts to a defect of character making pleader unfit to practise as pleader. The principle upon which Courts ought to proceed is, that where a pleader wilfully breaks the law upon one or two isolated occasions, it may not be necessary for the Court to take any action under S. 12. Where, on the other hand, it is shown that the pleader has wilfully and habitually broken the law, then the Court may quite reasonably come to the conclusion that his acts imply such a defect of character as to render him unfit for practice as a pleader, and in such a case the Court may dismiss him from practice. Where the acts of the pleader fall midway between the two extremes, then the Court may take a more lenient view and may think it sufficient to warn the pleader, by inflicting upon him a period of suspension or otherwise, that if he persists in breaking or defying the law, such conduct will inevitably lead the Court to the conclusion that he is totally unfit to practise in the Courts which have been established to enforce the law. A pleader was prosecuted three times and convicted twice for semi-political offences.

Held, that the case fell within the mediate position and warning with suspension was sufficient. (Lort Williams and M. C. Ghose, JJ.) A, A PLEADER, In the matter of. 38 C.W.N. 276=35 Cr.L.J. 592=1934 Cr.C. 354=6 R.C. 419=148 I.C. 57=A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 242 (2).

But a pleader who is convicted under S. 17 (2) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act is guilty of nothing short of an open and defiant violation of law. Seeing that it is the duty of the members of the legal profession to assist the Courts to maintain and enforce obedience to law, such conduct in a pleader is such a defect of character as would unfit him to be a pleader, and make him liable to action under S. 12 of the Act. LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (1879), S. 12.

——S. 12—Scope—Disciplinary action—Object.

S. 12 contains no implication that disciplinary action against a pleader convicted of an offence cannot be based on his conduct when such conduct includes the commission of any offence for which he has been punished. Disciplinary action is not taken by way of punishment but on consideration whether the person formerly admitted to practise is a proper person to continue to practise or not. No one can be admitted to practise until he makes a solemn declaration, and the inference is that one who has contravened this declaration and is likely to do so in future is not such a person. The fact that the motive of the pleader in taking part in a Civil Disobedience movement was to draw attention to the dissatisfaction with the forest policy of Government is no justification nor is the fact he was only a participant and not a leader in the movement material in considering the necessity for disciplinary action. 22 All. 49; 44 Bom. 418; A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 479 and 55 I. ——Ss. 12, 13 and 14—Scope—Pleader—Misconduct—Enquiry—Jurisdiction of High Court and of Subordinate Courts.

Under the Legal Practitioners' Act, the duty of admitting and suspending or dismissing pleaders, is entrusted to the High Court. If a pleader is convicted of a criminal offence implying a defect of character which unfits him to be a pleader, the High Court has power under S. 12 of the Act to suspend or dismiss him. Where the misconduct referred to in S. 13 is alleged, or where a pleader is otherwise alleged to be guilty of professional misconduct, the High Court, after making such enquiry as it thinks fit, can suspend or dismiss him under S. 13. Where, however, in the course of a proceeding before a subordinate Court, that Court has reason to think that a pleader has committed misconduct in the course of his professional duty, S. 14 gives power to the presiding officer of such Court to institute proceedings against the pleader under that section and hold an enquiry; and in case he finds the charge established, he shall record his finding and forward his report to the High Court for necessary action. It is only the presiding officer of the Court in which the misconduct is alleged to have been committed who can institute proceedings under S. 14 and none else has jurisdiction in the matter. Where an Advocate appeared in certain criminal proceedings without filing a vakalatnama, though required by the rules of the Court, Held, though the rules requiring the filing of a vakalatnama or mukhtarnama in criminal proceedings is an arbitrary rule having no moral sanction behind it, it is a rule which an officer of the Court must comply with but a disobedience of that rule did not amount to professional misconduct in the particular case. Therefore, if and when cases of perjury by members of the legal profession are discovered, the member concerned deserved the most severe punishment which the High Court can give in the exercise of its disciplinary jurisdiction on the legal profession. There is nothing against a legal practitioner becoming a surety for an accused in a criminal case. But where a Mukhtar enters into a contract of indemnity with, and receives money from, a third person, who has been rejected as a surety, on the understanding that he should become a surety for appearance and that the amount should indemnify him, if he suffered any loss on account of the bail bond being cancelled, such an agreement constitutes public mischief, being opposed to public policy and the mukhtear is guilty of unprofessional and highly improper conduct; and when the mukhtear further attempts to conceal the agreement from the knowledge of the Court, it has to be viewed as a serious aggravation of the original offence rendering him liable to supension from practice. The accused was charged with selling timber in a manner not permitted by the licence. R appeared to defend the case and the record disclosed that he allowed himself to be "swayed too much by his own feelings" in the course of the trial and conducted the case for the defence in a manner that made manifest his intention improperly to obstruct the course of justice. The record was replete with frivolous objections and open and covert attacks upon the presiding Magistrate for alleged unfairness and partiality. On one occasion R invoked the wrath of the Gods and insisted in an angry and turbulent manner in turning and speaking to them loudly and defiantly about the Court's injustice,

Held, that it was not only indiscreet but reprehensible that R should have conducted the case for the defence. The plaint was signed by the pleaders, one of them having the prior notice. The suit was, however, dismissed for default and compensatory costs were awarded to the defendants. There after proceedings were drawn up against the two pleaders under S. 13 (b) and (f) of the Legal Practitioners' Act. The pleaders did not claim absolute privilege, but stated that on the materials placed before them they felt justified in filing the plaint. The pleaders had supplied to them some papers, original plain copies, which, though they could not lead to the conclusion that there was collusion, furnished materials which justified the lawyers to take up the brief; the party too offered to give evidence at the hearing. There was a general impression in the place that any one who took any step against the Municipal Chairman was involved in some case or other, and those cases had been either found to be false or withdrawn when transferred.

Held, that the facts justified the pleaders in filing the plaint. The fact that later on the plaintiff allowed the case to be dismissed for default did not make the filing of the plaint by the pleaders unprofessional. The pleaders having acted in good faith and with due care, the proceedings were uncalled for and should not have been started. On a hartal day certain pleaders failed to attend Court. It was not proved that they conspired to boycott the Court so as to paralyse the administration of justice.

Held, that with the absence of evidence of intention of any individual pleader to join the boycott it was not proper to take action against him under S. 13 (f). So where a Bar Association passed a resolution to the effect that no member thereof should appear in any criminal case against any other member and subsequently on one of the members defying that resolution, passed another resolution amounting to a professional boycott of that member, the resolution is a flagrant and unwarranted interference with the rights of legal practitioners, contrary to all accepted notions of forensic propriety. ———S. 36 (1), Expl—Resolution of Bar Association—Essentials for validity as evidence.

In order to enable a Court to admit in evidence the resolution of the Bar Association declaring certain persons to be touts, it is necessary to establish that it was a meeting specially convened for the purpose of passing the resolution in question. This implies that the meeting should have been properly convened and that the object of the proposed meeting should have been properly notified to all the members of the Association. It is however not always legally necessary that there should be a personal service of notice on all the members, but when any notice other than a personal notice is claimed to have been given, it must be established that such a mode of giving notice is authorized by the rules and regulations of the Association or that the members concerned had such means of knowledge as to give them the opportunity of attending the meeting. Where it is not proved that all the members of the Association who were able to attend had been notified nor is it shown that those who were not notified were otherwise not capable of attending the meeting, the special meeting convened to declare certain persons touts cannot be said to have been properly convened and consequently the resolution passed thereat is not a valid resolution, such as is contemplated by explanation to S. 36 (1) of the Act. Under S. 36 (1), Expl, the resolution is valuable evidence even though the facts on which the resolution is based are not disclosed. In the absence of any other cogent evidence, the resolution if duly passed should ordinarily be regarded as sufficient for declaring a person to be a tout. The proof of any occupation which involves attendance at Courts for particular purposes is not very material evidence in rebuttal. Where the meeting is specially convened for declaring A to be or not to be a tout and the resolution declares B to be a tout the resolution in so far as B is concerned is not such a resolution as is contemplated by S. 36 and the High Court may set aside an order passed on the basis of such a resolution. LETTERS PATENT (Allahabad), Cl. 2—Matrimonial jurisdiction—Mode of exercise—Suit to declare marriage to be void—Sustainability.

The jurisdiction in matrimonial matters conferred on Allahabad High Court by Art. 26 of its Letters Patent is to be exercised in accordance with the provisions of the Divorce Act of 1869 and in accordance with that Act alone. So far as a suit for declaring a marriage null and void is based on the grounds that the petitioner was an idiot at the time of his marriage and that the consent of the petitioner was obtained by force or fraud, the jurisdiction of the High Court exists, because of the provisions of S. 19, Divorce Act. This Act does not empower the High Court to declare a marriage null and void on the ground that the ceremonies necessary for a marriage enjoined by the Church have not been performed. A suit based on the ground of non-observance of essential ceremonies must therefore be instituted in an ordinary Court of Original Civil Jurisdiction, namely, in the Court of a Munsif or a Subordinate Judge, according to the pecuniary and territorial jurisdiction of such Court. It is no doubt open to the High Court, when such a suit is instituted in the Court of a Munsif or a Subordinate Judge, to transfer it to itself and to try it under its extraordinary original civil jurisdiction. But no such suit is permitted by law to be instituted directly in the High Court. (Sulaiman, C.J. and Mukerji, J.) MT. Jurisdiction to deal with advocates still vests in the High Court under Cl. 8, and the High Court in exercising that jurisdiction is performing a function directed by the Letters Patent, and its Benches are therefore governed by the rule as to the opinion of the majority mentioned in Cl. 27 of the Letters Patent. There is nothing in the Bar Councils Act or in any rules made thereunder which is inconsistent with the provision that the opinion of the majority of the Judges hearing the case should prevail. Indeed the fact that the Act is silent and so are the rules would suggest that the provisions of the Letters Patent have necessarily been retained. The procedure to be followed in proceedings under Art. 8 is left to the discretion of the Court, but it is manifest that where grave charges such as perjury and champerty are involved, scrupulous care should be taken to see, not only that justice is done, but also that justice should seem to be done. An appropriate guide in dealing with such cases is to be found in the disciplinary provisions of the Legal Practitioners' Act, and therefore it is undesirable that such an investigation should proceed before the same Judges as have heard the case out of which the charges arise. Where the accused's defence involves a challenge of the previous decision of the Judges before whom he is arraigned, it is obvious that this must occasion embarrassment on his part. But if this procedure does not involve miscarriage of justice special leave to appeal cannot be granted. Per Banerji and Bennet, JJ.—Procedure is one thing and jurisdiction is another. There is a clear distinction between procedure and jurisdiction. A Bench hearing a Letters Parent appeal derives its jurisdiction to hear the appeal from the Letters Patent and not from the Code, because the Letters Patent provides that such an appeal should lie to a Bench and the Code makes no such provision and as S. 114 is not intended to provide for the review of judgments passed in the exercise of jurisdiction derived from other laws.

Per Mukerji, J. (dissenting).—The mere fact that the Letters Patent provided for a third appeal while the C. P. An order by a single Judge of the High Court transferring a suit from one Subordinate Court to another is a discretionary order and does not amount to a decision as to the rights of the parties at all. It is not a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 10 of the Letters Patent and is therefore not appealable. A Judge has jurisdiction independently of S. 24, C. P. Code, to transfer a suit from one Court to another under S. 107 (b), Government of India Act, and an order under the latter section is expressly made non-appealable under Cl. 10 of the amended Letters Patent. On an application under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent paying that the applicant may be appointed guardian of the person of a minor, the High Court has jurisdiction to grant the relief prayed for, even though the applicant's more appropriate remedy would be no make an application to the District Judge under S. 9 of the Guardians and Wards Act for the guardianship of the child. There is no general rule that the High Court should in all cases take action under Cl. 12, as there may be cases in which complicated questions of fact have to be ascertained, and such cases might be more suitably dealt with in the Court of the District Judge where witnesses could be examined and cross-examined. ———(Allahabad), Cl. 30—Proceeding under Bar Councils Act for misconduct of advocate—Leave to appeal to Privy Council—C.P. Code, S. 109 (c).

When special power has been conferred upon the High Court under S. 10, Bar Councils Act, to get an inquiry made into the alleged misconduct of an advocate and on receipt of the finding, to fix a date for the hearing of the case and to hear the parties concerned and then pass such final orders in the case as it thinks fit and make an order as to the payment of the costs of the inquiry and of the hearing in the High Court, and if necessary, later on to review its order, the High Court in such proceeding is acting judicially and not merely in an administrative capacity. The entire proceeding is of a judicial nature and the proceeding is a hearing before the High Court and orders for the payment of costs of such proceedings can be passed. No doubt, in essence, the action taken is a disciplinary action but the proceeding in itself is of the nature of a judicial proceeding and the inquiry is a public inquiry in which the parties concerned are entitled as of right to be heard. It cannot therefore be said that in such a judicial proceeding, the High Court is not exercising any 'jurisdiction' within the meaning of Cl. 30, Letters Patent. Such a jurisdiction is not an appellate jurisdiction, nor is it a criminal jurisdiction. As it is the High Court only which passes final orders in the case on the receipt of the finding, it must be held to be exercising original jurisdiction and not any appellate jurisdiction. The order passed in such a proceeding is therefore an order passed in the exercise of original jurisdiction of the High Court conferred upon it by the Indian Bar Councils Act, modifying to some extent the power conferred upon it by the Letters Patent. The High Court has therefore jurisdiction to grant leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council provided it is satisfied that it is a fit and proper case. In the case of an advocate the High Court found that not only was the filing of fee certificate contrary to the rules framed by the High Court but that he acted in bad faith in filing it. The point raised was that there was some contradiction in the two sub-sections of the Rule at the time when the advocate had got his form of certificate printed, which contradictions had been lately removed by amendment, that there was latitude allowed to him inasmuch as it was provided that the certificate shall be 'so far as is possible' in the form prescribed and that in filing a certificate he had made it clear in it that he had not received the amount in cash but had accepted a promissory note in lieu of the fee.

Held, that this was a case which should be certified as a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council under S. 109 (c), C.P. Code, or at any rate under Cl. 30, Letters Patent. ———(Bombay), Cl. 15—Leave to appeal from second appeal—Principles applicable—C. P. Code, Ss. 109 and 110.

The right of appeal from the decision of one Judge in second appeal to the High Court and the right of appeal from the decision of more Judges than one to the Privy Council are governed mutatis mutandis by the same principles. In each case, the case must be certified to be a fit one for appeal. Though considerations of private or public importance, or importance as precedents and like matters must exist in a greater measure when a decision is requested from the Privy Council, than when a decision is invited from a Bench of the High Court, yet where there is no point in dispute which the Court could in the exercise of judicial discretion certify as being of great public or private importance and there are not involved questions of public importance or which may be important precedents governing numerous other cases, no leave can be granted from the decision of second appellate Court. The principles for granting leave to appeal under Cl. 15 are similar to those in S. 109 (c), C. P. Code If therefore the development of law is to be on principles of co-ordination and synthesis, similar principles must with the necessary modifications, be taken for guidance when the question arises for granting leave to appeal under either of these analogous provisions. The single Judge hearing second appeal has himself the power to refer the matter to a Bench of more Judges than one, as soon as he considers it desirable to do so. The Advocates who are concerned can before the case comes on for hearing apply to the Chief Justice in his administrative capacity to have any particular second appeal placed before a Bench of two or more Judges. These are considerations of a remedial nature by way of alternatives which the Court has to bear in mind when leave under Cl. 15 is applied for. 28 I.A. 11; 50 B 753; 15 Bom.L.R. 1021; 43 M.L.J. 728 and 50 A. 640, Ref. An application to revoke a leave once granted under Cl. 12 is maintainable. The party is not obliged to wait until the trial and to take the point by way of defence in his written statement. But he is entitled to apply to the Judge who gave the leave that the leave may be revoked. The application to revoke should however be based on something better than a mere criticism of the clarity of the pleadings. If a pleading is not quite in order, the reasonable thing for the learned Judge to do would be to order particulars to be given or to order an amendment of the plaint and it would be unreasonable for him to withdraw the leave and to order the plaint to be taken off the file until he has satisfied himself what the real case of the plaintiff is in respect of the matter which is alleged to give jurisdiction to the Court. In granting leave or revoking it the Judge should go by the cause of action alleged. Where in the case of contracts part of the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of the Court, the defendant cannot ask for revocation unless he shows that Cl. 12 has no application at all. Cl. 12 contemplates the suit being brought for land and such land being situated partly within and partly without the jurisdiction. The cause of action does not matter in such a case except in so far as it affects the propriety of the joinder of the claim to the different parcels of land in the same suit Two different suits cannot be rolled into one for the purpose of obtaining jurisdiction over land outside the limits. If however the claim to the different parcels of land is properly based upon a common title and the right to relief arises out of the same set of facts, it cannot be laid down that each defendant or set of defendants must be interested in some land within the jurisdiction. The question whether in any particular case the jurisdiction is to be exercised is left to the discretion of the Court. LETTERS PATENT (Calcutta), Cl. 41.

—Application for leave to appeal to Privy Council—Maintainability.

Summary proceedings for contempt of the High Court —a Court of Record—in respect of an offence of scandalising the Court, are not made or done in the exercise of "ordinary original criminal jurisdiction," within the meaning of Cl. 41 of the Letters Patent. They are proceedings of a peculiar nature, though in some respects quasi-criminal. An application under Cl. 41 for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against a sentence or order of punishment passed in such proceedings is therefore incompetent Even if it be held that such proceedings are made or done in the exercise of its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction, the High Court will not in such a case declare under Cl. 41 that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council. It is not within the right of a legal practitioner who has been convicted by a Criminal Court and who has been called upon to show cause why disciplinary action should not be taken against him to insist that the High Court should go into the merits of the original conviction. No doubt the High Court has wide powers to intervene in any case brought to its notice in the interests of justice apart from the fact whether the accused himself has moved the High Court or has appealed from the conviction against him or not; such a power, however, would only be exercised in very special cases but it is not a right of the accused or any one else but a power inherent in the High Court itself. The Courts are bound to see that its officers are proper persons to be trusted by the Court with regard to the interests of the suitors. It is necessary therefore for the Court to know what the nature of the act complained of is in order to decide whether that act shows that the person in question is an improper person to remain a practitioner. There is a distinction between being a member of an unlawful association and assisting the operations of an unlawful association. The former interferes with the maintenance of law and order or is a danger to public peace and it may well be considered to render a man an improper person to be a practitioner in a Court of justice, but it by no means follows that a man who has committed an isolated act which assists the operations of an unlawful association is necessarily such an improper person. Much would depend upon the nature of the act done and the particular operation assisted. Where, apart from the conviction of the legal practitioner under S. 17 (1) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act for having assisted in the celebration of the Independence Day, there was nothing on the record to show what exactly the respondent did on the occasion.

Held, that there was no reasonable cause within the meaning of Cl. 8 to take disciplinary action.

Both under Cl. 13 of the Letters Patent and under S. 24, C.P. Code, the High Court has power to withdraw a suit from a Subordinate Court and try and dispose of the action itself. S. 24, C. P. Code, gives the High Court power to make such an order of transfer of its own motion and without notice to the parties and at any stage of the suit; while Cl. 13 of the Letters Patent authorizes the High Court to remove a suit from a Subordinate Court and try and dispose of it for purposes of justice. And when the High Court makes an order of transfer in the interests of purity of administration, but without notice to the parties, a party feeling aggrieved by such an order has a right to appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and ask for a re-consideration of the order; but since the transfer is made in the interests of purity of administration of justice, such considerations transcend any personal grounds which a party may urge and no re transfer will be ordered unless it is shown to be necessary in the interests of justice. ———(Madras), Cl. 26—"Decision on a point of law"—What constitutes—Question as to admissibility of evidence—Failure of Judge to decide—Ground for review.

Held, by the majority (Madhavan Nair and Curgenven, JJ., dissenting).—A point of law referred to in Cl. 26 of the Letters Patent means a point of law submitted to and decided by the trial Judge or any direction as to the law given by him in the course of his summing up to the jury. The word "decision" cannot be read so as to cover cases where the Judge has never applied his mind to the matter and has not pronounced an opinion on it.

(Per Madhavan Nair and Curgenven JJ., dissenting).—All questions which have to be necessarily decided in a trial and which in effect have been decided by the Judge, though not expressly, would fall within the meaning of the word "decision". The words "decision" and "decided", in Cl. 26 should be liberally construed when inadmissible evidence is admitted, though no objection is taken and no ruling is given by the Judge, it should be understood having regard to his duties, that the Judge has decided to admit the evidence and consequently there is a "decision". Where certain statements were given in evidence by the witnesses examined for the prosecution and they were not objected to by the Advocate for the accused either when evidence was taken or when the Judge referred to the evidence in his summing up to the jury and later on objection was taken to those statements having been taken as evidence and the Advocate-General granted a certificate under Cl. 26 of the Letters Patent.

Held (by the majority), that there was no decision on a point of law by the trial Judge and the review application was consequently unsustainable. LETTERS PATENT (Patna), Cl. 8.

Cl. 26 of the Letters Patent on the ground that certain inadmissible evidence had been put to the jury at the trial. The majority of the Full Bench, who heard the review application, held that there was no decision on a point of law with reference to the question raised and dismissed the review application. At the same time the trial Judge acting under Cl. 25 of the Letters Patent referred the question as to the admissibility of the evidence for further consideration by the High Court. The matter once again came up before a Full Bench and it was held that the evidence was admissible in law and that in any case there was ample evidence, quite apart from the evidence called in question, to support the conviction. The accused having applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council,

Held, that it was not a fit case for leave being granted as the Court had found that there was ample evidence to support the conviction apart from the evidence objected to. The power given to the vacation Judge by R. 4 in Chapter II of the Rules are confined to Patna as distinguished from

LETTERS PATENT (Rangoon), Cl. 10.

Orissa. Rule 5 cannot be read with, or as controlling R. 4 of Chapter II and therefore the discretionary power of the Chief Justice under cl. 35 of the Letters Patent to order that any particular case arising in the Division of Orissa shall be heard at Patna does not vest in the vacation Judge. Apart from the exercise of discretion by the Chief Justice, no Judge sitting at Patna in term time has power to exercise the jurisdiction of the High Court in respect of cases arising in the Orissa Division except in accordance with the rules made under Cl. 35 of the Letters Patent. The possible inconvenience arising from the absence of a vacation Judge for Orissa is no reason for placing upon R. 4 an interpretation which it will not bear if regard is had to the other rules in Chs II and XXII and Cl. 35 of the Letters Patent. ———(Rangoon), Cl. 10—"Suit for land"—Interpretation.

A suit is a "suit for land" within Cl. 10 of the Letters Patent, if having regard to the issues raised in the pleadings, the decree or order in the suit will affect directly the proprietary or possessory title to land or other immovable property. It makes no difference to the jurisdiction of the Court that the "substantial" or "primary" object of the plaintiff or the 'substantial' or 'main' issue in the suit does not relate to land, if in the circumstances of the case the decree sought, if made, will directly affect the title to land, and it matters not a whit, whether other issues are raised in the suit or whether some other issue raises the "main" or "substantial" question in the suit. In other words, the question whether a suit is a "suit for land" or not, depends not upon the motive or the purposes of the plaintiff but upon the nature and effect of the decree. "Suit for land or other immovable property" means suits in which having regard to the issues raised in the pleadings, the decree or order will affect directly the proprietary or possessory title to land of other immovable property. A suit to enforce a mortgage is a suit in which the plaintiff asks the Court to sell the property in the event of the mortgage debt not being paid within the time allowed for redemption. The fact that the plaintiff asked for a decree for the amount due and for an order for sale only in the event of the mortgage money not being paid within the period allowed by the Court does not change the character of the suit. The plaintiff is suing for the enforcement of his mortgage and the decree which he obtains does directly affect the land. The plaintiff asked for a decree for Rs. 14,577 against ———(Rangoon), Cl. 10—"Suit for land"—Mortgage suit for sale—Mortgage by deposit of title-deeds.

It cannot be doubted that in England a suit to enforce a mortgage by foreclosure or sale would be regarded not only as "substantially" a suit for land, but also as a suit which "touches the reality" and directly affects the title to and disposition of the land In India also, it is manifest that a mortgage is immovable property and a suit to enforce a mortgage by sale of the land is a "suit for land." It cannot be reasonably contended that the Court acts "in personam" in a mortgage suit, as the Court when it passes a preliminary decree or a final decree does not lay any obligation upon the mortgagor to do or to refrain from doing anything. It merely gives the mortgagor an option, which he may or may not elect to exercise, to redeem the property in the manner therein prescribed. The operative and essential ingredient in a decree passed in a mortgage suit for sale is the order for sale. Where a mortgage is created in Rangoon by deposit of title-deeds relating to certain lands situate outside the limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court at Rangoon, that Court has no jurisdiction under Cl. 10 of the Letters Patent to entertain a suit to enforce the mortgage by sale of the mortgaged land. ———(Rangoon), Cl. 13—"Judgment"—Meaning of —Order of transfer made by High Court under S. 24, C. P. Code.

In the Letters Patent of the High Courts the word "judgment" means and is a decree in a suit by which the rights of the parties at issue in the suit are determined. The term "suit" in the Letters Patent includes suits instituted by a plaint or by an originating summons in the manner prescribed under the Rules of the Court. A final judgment is a decree in a suit by which all the matters at issue therein are decided. A preliminary or interlocutory judgment is a decree in a suit by which the right to the relief claimed in the suit is decided, but under which further proceedings are necessary before the suit in its entirety can be determined. All other decisions are orders, and are not "judgments" under the Letters Patent, or appealable as such. Hence an order of the High Court under S. 24, C. P. Code, transferring a suit ———(Rangoon), Cl. 39—Leave to appeal in criminal cases—Grant of—Consideration — Admission of inadmissible evidence—If a ground.

The grant of the leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council is a step ancillary to the determination of the appeal, and the principles which regulate the ultimate decision of the appeal cannot obviously be ignored when an application for leave is examined. Leave to appeal is not granted "except where some clear departure from the requirements of justice" exists, nor unless "by a disregard of the forms of legal process, or by some violation of the principles of natural justice or otherwise, substantial and grave injustice has been done". Mis direction as such, even irregularity as such, will not suffice. There must be something which, in the particular case, deprives the accused of the substance of fair trial and the protection of the law, or which, in general, tends to divert the due and orderly administration of the law into a new course, which may be drawn into an evil precedent in future. The admission of inadmissible evidence would, therefore, form no ground upon which an application under Cl. 39 could be based, if the course of the trial was in no way thereby deflected. The Limitation Act refers only to the remedy of a plaintiff and not to his rights, but it does not refer at all to the case of a defendant. The object of the Act is to prevent a party from putting forward stale or antiquated demands; but a ground of defence cannot become stale or barred by limitation. A defendant may, therefore, put forward any defence, though defence as a claim made by him may be time-barred on the date it is raised. And when the title of a person in possession is challenged, he may set forth any defence in favour of his right to the property and the statute will not run so as to prevent him from setting forth any such relief. ———If exhaustive—Provisions as regards exclusion of time.

The provisions of the Limitation Act as regards the exclusion of time are exhaustive, and it is not permissible to supplement or to add to those provisions. If a suit or an application does not fall within any one of the sections that prescribe about the exclusion of certain period in the computation of the period of limitation, the time must be computed from the date prescribed in the third column of the Schedule, and no principle outside the Limitation Act can be appealed to as a justification for the exclusion of any time. ———Object of Act—Nature of bar of limitation.

The object of the law of limitation is not to give a right where there is not one, but to interpose a bar after a certain period to a suit to enforce an existing right. So, if on the last day after three years from the date when a minor attained majority when he ought to have filed a suit, the Court is closed, he is entitled to the benefit of S. 4 and file his suit on the reopening day. 37 M.L.J. 256, Doubt; 36 B. 258, Diss; 45 M 785, Expl. 26 Bom. 782 and 44 Mad. 817, Dist. ——Ss. 4 and 14—Scope and object of—"On the day on which that Court reopens"—"Court"—Meaning of.

There is a marked distinction in the scope and purpose of Ss. 4 and 14 of the Limitation Act. S. 14 provides for the exclusion of certain periods in computing the period of limitation. S. 4, on the other hand, has nothing to do with computing the period of limitation. What it provides is that where the period prescribed expires on a day when the Court is closed, the application, etc., may be made on the day the Court reopens. There is nothing in S. 4 which alters the length of the prescribed period. The benefit under which can be claimed only when the application, etc., is made in the proper Court on the day on which that Court reopens. The Court in the words "on the day that the Court reopens" in S 4 means the proper Court in which the application, etc., ought to have been made. Whether in a case where an application for amending the decree was made in the lower Court, there is sufficient cause for extending the time under S. 5 must depend on the circumstances of each case. It is not an inflexible rule that an extension can only be granted if the amendment sought in the lower Court had something to do with the grounds on which the appeal is based. On the other hand, even in a case in which the amendment has no relation to the grounds upon which the validity of the decree is sought to be challenged in appeal, circumstances may appear which may justly bring the case within the meaning of the expression "sufficient cause". 3 C. The judgment of the High Court was delivered on the 25th January, 1929. On the 22nd April, 1929, the Secretary of State applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council and leave was granted on 2nd July, 1929. In March, 1931, however the Privy Council dismissed the appeal as incompetent. The Secretary of State came to know of this in May, 1931. In June, 1931, the successful party applied for a review of the judgment of the High Court. It appeared that the party had been misled by an earlier decision as to the competency of appeal.

Held, that the time between the delivery of the judgment and the disposal of the appeal by the Privy Council could not be deducted either under S. 14 (2) or S. 5 of the Limitation Act and that the application was not maintainable. Mistake as to Court.

———S. 5—Mistake as to Court—Land acquisition appeal preferred to High Court—Return for presentation to District Judge—Party being misled by prevailing practice—Excusing delay.

A Land acquisition appeal which was originally presented to the High Court was returned and was presented to the District Judge. It appeared that the practice on the date when the appeal was first filed was to prefer such appeals to the High Court. It was however held in two subsequent decisions of the High Court that such appeals should be preferred to the District Judge. It appeared that those decisions rested on an earlier Privy Council case which impliedly decided the question. The appellant sought to exclude the time taken in filing the appeal first to the High Court.

Held, that though the decision of the Privy Council was before the date of the filing of the appeal to the High Court, the question as to the proper forum for appeal was by no means settled till the High Court decided the matter, and that it was a proper case for excusing the delay. The judgment of the Court below was pronounced on the 14th June, 1930, but as vacations intervened before the time for appeal expired the last day for filing the appeal was 6th October. It was filed shortly before the reopening of the Court on the 3rd October but the office found the Court-fee paid on the memorandum and copies to be insufficient and therefore returned the papers. The appeal was refiled on 6th October with the correct Court fee on the memorandum of appeal. The other papers, namely copies of the judgments, were properly stamped on 7th October; that is a day later than the last possible date. It was contended that the appeal was not presented in time.

There is no authority for the view that a mistake of a legal advisor, however gross and inexcusable, if bona fide acted upon by a litigant will entitle him to the protection of S. 5. The discretion given to Courts by that section cannot be crystallized into a rigid rule of law but the following rule expressed by Brett, M.R., in Highton v. Treherne, (1878) 48 L. J. K. B. 167, embodies a sound working formula. "In cases of negligence or gross want of legal skill of his legal advisor, the suitor has his remedy against the legal advisor and meantime the suitor must suffer. But where there has been a bona fide mistake, not through misconduct or through negligence nor through want of reasonable skill but such as a skilled person might make, the rights of the client should not be thereby forfeited."

——S. 5—Negligence of Counsel—"Sufficient cause"—Counsel's advice—Gross carelessness—Extension of time.

A Court may give a liberal construction to the words "sufficient cause" but the interpretation should be in accordance with judicial principles. A client preferring a time-barred appeal under the mistaken advice of his Counsel may be entitled to the benefit of S. 5 but the mistake must be bona fide, i.e., made in spite of due care and attention. Bona fide mistake on the part of the Counsel may be excused but want of care and attention is not "sufficient cause." Filing of an appeal in a wrong Court through carelessness of the Counsel is not a "sufficient cause" for presenting the appeal to the proper Court after the expiry of the period of limitation. ——S. 5—Negligence of Counsel—"Sufficient cause."

LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 6.

———Ss. 6 and 7 and Art. 12—Execution sale against minors represented by Court guardian—Suit by minor on their attaining majority to recover possession of property—Limitation.

A lady died shortly after a decree was passed against her, leaving the plaintiffs 1 and 2, her minor children. At the instance of the decree holder, an officer of the Court was appointed as guardian of the plaintiffs and the property was brought to sale and purchased by the decree holder himself. The plaintiffs instituted a suit for recovery of possession of the property almost at the expiry of the period of 12 years from the date of sale. In substance, their case was that they were not really represented in the execution proceedings and the sale was accordingly not binding on them. They also added that the decree-holder was guilty of fraud in not disclosing the existence of their maternal grandmother and grandfather in connection with his guardian application.

Held, (i) that the propriety of attributing fraud to the decree-holder merely because he did not mention the existence of certain relations in connection with the guardian application, is doubtful; (ii) that there is no question in the present case either of absolute, non representation or of the appointment of a guardian whose appointment is prohibited by statute and the most that can be said is that the decree-holder has persuaded the Court to make a wrong order in the matter of appointing a Court officer as guardian and the sale is, if at all, only voidable and is not a nullity, (iii) that the plaintiffs must have taken the necessary proceedings within the one year allowed by Art. 12 of the Limitation Act, subject to such extension of time as they may get under S. 6; (iv) that the suit is barred by the operation of S. 7 of the Limitation Act, even if it was not instituted beyond one year of the attainment of majority of plaintiff No. 2, and that S. 7 can be invoked even if there is no proof of de facto management by the major member and even if there is no other property except the suit property and therefore there is nothing for a managing member to manage. ——— S. 6—Mortgage in favour of father—Acknowledgment made during son's minority—Son instituting suit within three years after majority—Bar.

A mortgage was executed by two persons in favour of the father of the plaintiff. The plaintiff was then a minor living jointly with his father. The father died in 1912 and in 1913 the mortgagors executed a second mortgage in favour of another including in that mortgage the whole of the amount due under the earlier mortgage. In 1928 the plaintiff sued to recover the amount and claimed that he was entitled to do so within three years of his attaining majority.

Held, that time began to run from the date of the execution of the mortgage, but the mortgage of 1913 contained an acknowledgment and therefore saved limitation.

Held, further, that the plaintiff being a minor at the time from which limitation has to be reckoned, the suit filed within three years of the plaintiff attaining majority, was competent. LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 7.

Under the Customary Law, every minor who was in existence at the time of alienation which is being challenged by him can bring a suit within three years of attaining majority. Therefore, where the plaintiffs are still minors they have clearly ample time for bringing their suits and no objection on the ground of limitation can be taken to their suit. (*Young, C. If a reversioner and his minor sons are alive at the date of an alleged adoption, they have separate rights both derived from the common ancestor. ——— Ss. 6 (1) and (3)—Applicability—Hindu minor widow—Adoption by—Suit by adopted son—Limitation, if saved—"Death"—"Legal representative"—Meaning of.

The extended period of limitation allowed by S. 6 of the Limitation Act only applies to the case of a minor and his legal representative after his death and not to an assignee from the minor. A son adopted by a Hindu minor widow is not under the Hindu Law an assignee from the widow, but is in a position closely analogous. If the Indian Limitation Act, S. 6 (3), had intended to provide for cases of notional death, appropriate language could have been used. The expression "where the disability continues up to the death of such person" in S. 6 (3), refers to physical death and to nothing else and the "legal representative" must be a legal representative whose title depends on the death. An adopted son is not the legal representative of the adopting widow within the meaning of S. 6 (3). When the adopted son is himself a major at the date when the cause of action arises, he is not entitled to the benefit of S. 6 (1). S. 6 (1) will not apply when the person entitled to bring the suit was not, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor. (*Beaumont, C. ———S. 7—Applicability—Capacity to give discharge—Question of benefit to family immaterial—"Discharge"—Meaning of—Adult member should be definitely found to be manager.

In a suit by the plaintiffs claiming to be the owners of certain property alleged to have been given in trust to the defendants during plaintiffs' minority and to have been misappropriated by them, the defendants pleaded that as the manager of the family (one of the plaintiffs) had failed to sue within three years after attaining majority, the whole suit was barred under S. 7 of the Limitation Act. The lower Court held that S. 7 was inapplicable on the ground that the manager was not competent to give a valid discharge as there was obviously no benefit in not instituting a suit in time.

Held, (i) that the view of the lower Court was erroneous; S. 7 merely refers to the capacity to give discharge: "If he gives a discharge without any benefit to the family, his act may be liable to be challenged by the minors but that is immaterial to the question of limitation." 45 B. 446; 38 M. 118, Foll. ; 48 A. 152 (P. C.), Dist.; (ii) that S. 7 applied not only to cases of discharge of debts but also to cases involving immovable property; "the word 'discharge' in S. 7 is wide enough to include any form of quittance, whereby the rights and liabilities between two parties are put an end to." 46 B. 535 and 25 I C. 755, Foll.; (iii) but that before S. 7 could be applied, it should be found definitely whether the adult member was or became the manager. "It cannot be predicted of every Hindu family that an adult brother as soon as he becomes major, becomes the manager and therefore necessarily competent to give a discharge. This depends upon several questions of fact and a variety of circumstances varying with different families and unless the necessary facts are properly alleged and proved by the party who wants to deprive the person under disability of the benefit of S 6 of the Limitation Act, the claim cannot be thrown out as barred by limitation." ———S. 7—Applicability—Hindu minor brothers—Alienation by mother as guardian—Suit to set aside—Limitation—Starting point.

A Hindu widow acting as guardian of her minor sons (plaintiffs) sold their joint family property on 11th March, 1915. The 1st plaintiff became a major in January, 1921, and on 22nd January, 1923, he filed a suit for himself and as guardian of his minor brother, 2nd plaintiff, to set aside the sale-deed and to redeem certain prior mortgages. As the suit was bad under the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act, the High Court gave permission in second appeal for the suit to be withdrawn with liberty to file a fresh suit "if so advised", on 26th March, 1926. 2nd plaintiff became a major on 11th December, 1926, and on 9th March, 1927, both the plaintiffs sued for a declaration that the sale was not binding on them.

Held, that the suit was barred as regards both the plaintiffs, because plaintiff No. 1 was capable of giving a valid discharge within the meaning of S. 7 of the Limitation Act, and consequently the bar of limitation operated against the 2nd plaintiff when it operated against the 1st plaintiff.

Held, further, that S. 14 of the Limitation Act did not apply, and the 1st plaintiff could not claim the benefit of that section in view of the clear language of O. 23, R. 2, C. P. Code. (Broomfield, J.) KONDAJI v. DAGADU. 157 I.C. 592=8 R.B. 72=37 Bom. L. R. 225=A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 259.

A suit brought by one member of a joint Hindu family against a transferee from the manager raises a question as to the authority of the manager and in that sense involves a dispute as to the respective rights of the members of the family inter se. The nature of such a suit is obviously distinguishable from that of a suit brought against a person, who is an entire stranger to the family, who does not claim title through any member of the family and who is setting up his adverse possession as a paramount title. In such cases the manager represents the family as one unit and if time has run out against the manager, limitation is not saved merely because some minor members of the family are still living. Such a case falls within the ambit of S. 7 of the Limitation Act. They were brought on record as the legal representatives of S and continued the proceeding which was ultimately consigned to the record-room on 21 6-'24, leaving a balance still payable under the decree. C on attaining majority applied for execution on 16 8-'29 and was met with a plea that the application was barred by limitation.

Held, that the minor and his two brothers, being legal representatives of their father, who was the original decree holder, constituted one legal representative of the decree-holder and that one of them could not execute the decree nor give a valid discharge.

Held, further, that O. 21, R. 15, C. P. Code, did not confer an unconditional right on one of the decree-holders to execute the decree, that such a right was subject to control by the executing Court, that the above rule did not affect S. 7, Limitation Act, and that the application for execution was not barred by limitation. 29 All. 279; A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 467; 55 Cal. 608; A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 394, Ref.; 66 P.R. 1893, Dist. Under S. 7, not only must there be a joint right to sue but it must be possible for a valid discharge to be given by those who are not under any disability. The omission to sue on the part of the next reversioner to an alienation by the widow is by the customary law not a bar to the maintainability of a suit by the remoter reversioner and therefore a person who was a minor at the time of transfer can avoid it within the time allowed by law even though the nearer reversioners had not done so. LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 9.

——S. 7—Scope—Discharge by certificated guardian out of Court—If valid.

S. 7 contemplates a legal capacity to give discharge without the concurrence of the person under disability. The section requires that the co-decree-holder in addition to his capacity as a co-decree holder must have such a legal capacity as would empower him alone to realize the decretal debt and give a discharge without putting the decree into execution, even if his minor co decree-holder had been under no disability and had the capacity to give his assent. In other words, the legal capacity must enable him alone to give a discharge, the consent of the other decree-holders not being necessary at all in the exercise of that legal capacity. The law must clothe him with rights to give a discharge for the whole debt irrespective of the consent of the other decree-holders. Familiar instances of such legal capacities are those of a partner and the karta of a joint Hindu family. Their legal capacity to give a discharge is derived from the substantive law. They have the power to realize the whole decretal debt amicably and are not required by law to take the consent of the other joint decree-holders or the permission of the Court under the processual law before giving discharge. The legal capacity of a certificated guardian to realize moneys payable to a minor decree holder under a decree of the Court not fulfil the test, indicated above. It is not independent of the rights of the minor decree-holder. S. 7 contemplates discharge by a person who, by virtue of his own legal capacity under the substantive law is able to give a discharge. It does not contemplate a legal capacity which only empowers a person to realize a debt on behalf of another by the process of execution with the permission of the Court. Hence where ther are five joint decree-holders one of whom is a minor and the other are adults and one of the adults is the certificated guardian of the minor a discharge given by such guardian out of Court is not a discharge by a guardian—far less a discharge without concurrence of the minor within the meaning of S. 7 unless it is proved that the adult decree-holder who represents the minor is in a position to give discharge. ———S. 10—Applicability and scope—Suit for damages for wilful default of trustee in management—Limitation—Starting point—Limitation Act, Art. 120.

S. 10, Limitation Act, which applies to trusts, does not in terms apply to suits for damages for breach of trust. It certainly does not apply to such suits for damages on the footing of wilful default, when ex hypothesi the money claimed has not come into the hands of the trustees; and the reference to an account does not extend it to such claims. The section read as a whole justifies a decree for any trust funds shown, on an account being taken, to be in the hands of the trustees. A claim to damages for alleged breaches of trust in the management of trust property falls under Art. 120, Limitation Act, which is the only article applicable. Time runs from the breach and not from the date of the consequent loss. A claim to damages on the footing of wilful default is not one to follow trust funds, and is not saved by S. 10, Limitation Act. ———S. 10—Applicability—Trust property—Possession by stranger independent of trustee—If can be adverse.

Under S. 10 an express trustee cannot prescribe for a title by adverse possession against his beneficiary; the trustee's legal representatives or assignees are in no better position than the trustee himself. But the rule does not apply in the case of a stranger to the trust who takes possession of the trust property independently of the trustee. The section does not prevent such a person from acquiring title by adverse possession. If property is set aside by a testator from the general body of his estate and vested in trustees upon certain trusts, which upon the face of them are inadequate to exhaust the whole of the property, there remains as to the balance a trust impressed upon the trustees in favour of the next-of-kin or the heir-at-law, a trust for the purpose of which you have to do no violence to the language of the will, for which it is unnecessary to disregard any intention or desire that the testator has expressed. The principle, known as the rule in Salter v. Cavenagh, and followed by Courts in India, does not apply to property not so set apart by the testator or property not mentioned by him at all in his will. This residue is held by the trustees for the benefit of next-of kin, but it does not come within S. 10 of the Limitation Act, but is covered by Art. 123 of the Limitation Act. On the 29th the plaintiff applied for the copy of the judgment and decree and the order was made on that application "no decree was drawn in view of R. 11 at p. 27 of the High Court Rules, and there is no direction of the Court to draw the decree. The record is sent herewith." Nothing was done by the plaintiff until 5th January, 1932, when he filed his petition alleging that as he intends to prefer an appeal a decree is required.

Held, that the plaintiff was out of time in applying for the direction of the Court to prepare a decree if the circular rule is taken into consideration. ——S. 12—Construction—"Time requisite for obtaining copy of the decree appealed from"—Meaning of—Period between date of judgment and application for copy—If deductible.

"The time requisite for obtaining copy of the decree appealed from" must be construed as meaning "the time which would have been necessary in any case" and not "the time actually employed by the appellant". No period which may be under the control of the appellant between the date on which judgment is pronounced (which is the date of the decree under the C. P. Code) and the date on which the appeal is filed can be considered as "the time requisite" under S. 12 of the Act. In cases where the decree of the trial Court follows upon the judgment without the parties being required to do anything in the interval, the appellant will be entitled to the exclusion of the time between the judgment and the decree. In exceptional cases, as for instance cases of partition and mesne profits, in which the drawing up of the decree may depend upon the filing of the necessary stamp paper or Court-fees, the exclusion of time in favour of the party who is to file the stamp paper or Court-fees will depend upon the circumstances, but other parties to whom no responsibility attaches for the delay will be entitled to exclude the time. But it cannot be laid down that in no case can the period between the date of judgment and the application for copy of the decree be excluded. 2 P.L.T. 361, Overr. For a revision petition a copy of the judgment of the trial Court is required as a matter of practice, but that is more in the interests of the petitioner himself than an absolute necessity for the validity of the petition. A petitioner must therefore apply for both the copies simultaneously, that is to say, for the copy of the lower appellate Court's judgment and of the trial Court's judgment. If he is unable to get the trial Court's judgment within the period of limitation, he must present his revision petition with the copy of the lower appellate Court's judgment attached to it, and if he satisfies the High Court that he had applied simultaneously, ordinarily time would be given to him to get the copy of the trial Court's judgment and attach it to his petition. Else time required for trial Court's judgment is not excluded under S. 12. (Middleton, J.C. and Saaduddin, A.J.C.) SAINDITTA RAM v. CHHATA RAM PIARA LAL. 6 R. ———S. 12—Time requisite—Series of applications for copy—Second copy used for purpose of appeal—Deduction of time taken.

The time requisite in S. 12 is the time beyond the appellant's control occupied in obtaining the copy which accompanies the appeal and not an ideal lesser period which might have been occupied if the application for copy had been filed at some other date. Thus the Court cannot restrict the time granted by the statute by adding to it a limitation that, where an appellant has got more than one copy of judgment and decree he ought, if he seeks exclusion of time for obtaining the copy, to use the first copy obtained by him. The judgment and decree were passed on 24-2 1927. The plaintiff applied for a ———S. 12—Time to be excluded—Computation of.

The time which may be legitimately excluded from limitation under S. 12, Limitation Act, is that between the date of the application for the copy of judgment and decree and the date on which it is despatched, whether by ordinary post or V. P. P., from the copying department. (Case-law reviewed.) (Fraser, J.C.) SULTAN DIN v. PARTAB SINGH. I.R. 1933 Pesh. 9=142 I.C. 230=A.I.R. 1933 Pesh. 22.

———S. 12—Time to be excluded—Computation of.

Judgment was delivered on 22nd December, 1933, and the appeal was instituted on the 3rd April, 1934 (i.e.) 12 days after expiry of three months. Copies of the judgment and decree-sheet were applied for urgently on the 3rd January, 1934. From the 3rd to 13th January, 1934, copies could not be given as the Court had not prepared the decree-sheet, on the 13th January this had been done, and the copying department was able to prepare an estimate for the preparation of copies on that date. The estimated price was not paid till the 25th January, and copies were ready on the 30th.

Held, that the appellant is entitled to the time from the 3rd to the 13th January and from the 25th to the 30th January and even if the period between the 13th and 25th January be excluded, as not necessary, the appeal is still well within time. Where an appeal was filed on the last date of limitation deducting the time taken in obtaining copies of the judgment and the decree, but with the memorandum of appeal a copy of the translation of the decree, unsigned by the lower Court was filed. No copy of decree was applied for.

Held, that translation of decree unsigned by the lower Court is not a proper substitute for the decree so as to save limitation. (Jai Lal, J.) MEHR SINGH v. RAM CHAND. 150 I.C. 781 (1)=7 R.L. 27=A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 304 (2).

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree should be excluded under S. 12 (2). The section does not say why the time is to be excluded but simply enacts it as a positive direction. Where the application for leave to appeal is filed before the copy of the decree is supplied, it cannot be argued that the copy of the decree is not requisite and that the time cannot be excluded. S. 12 (2) enables the applicant to exclude the whole of the time from the date when the application is made until the date when the copy of the decree is ready. The words "time requisite" means simply the time required by the appellant to obtain a copy of the decree, assuming that he acted with reasonable promptitude and diligence; and the time requisite for obtaining a copy is the shortest time during which a copy could have been obtained by the appellant. It has nothing to do with the amount of time spent by him in obtaining the copy which he chooses to file with the memorandum of appeal. 57 M. 560=66 M.L.J. 687 (F.B.), Diss. from. On an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council, it is not only important but also necessary that a copy of the judgment from which it is sought to appeal should be before the Court; and S. 12 (3) permits the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment to be excluded from period of 90 days prescribed for the application by Art. 179 of the Limitation Act. The legislature has clearly intended that sub-S. (3) of S. 12 should not apply to an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council but that it should apply only to appeals. The plaintiff is entitled to claim the benefit of the provision in S. 14 whether he comes up on the second occasion with the original plaint or with a new plaint. An order of dismissal by the Court in the former suit on the ground that it ought to have been instituted in another Court is not a disposal of the suit on the merits; it is merely a refusal of relief which from the defect of jurisdiction it is unable to give. The word 'jurisdiction' in the section should be construed liberally. If the other conditions mentioned in the section are satisfied, the benefit given by the section cannot be taken away merely because the course adopted before was not a well-conceived one. Where in the prior execution proceedings the minor attacked the validity of the decree on the ground that the guardian had acted collusively and fraudulently and in the latter suit he sought to set aside the decree.

——S. 14—Suit for profits—Plaintiff obtaining mere decree for possession in prior suit—Unsuccessful attempt to recover profits in restitution—Right to deduction of period occupied by restitution proceedings.

The plaintiffs who were some of the members of a joint Hindu family brought a suit against a purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree against another member and obtained a decree for possession of their shares in the property. There was no prayer in the plaint for profits. After an unsuccessful attempt to recover profits in restitution proceedings, the plaintiffs brought a suit for their share of the profits during the period they were kept out of possession and claimed deduction of the period during which the restitution proceedings were pending.

Held, that for the purpose of the application of S. 14 of the Limitation Act, it must be shown that the restitution proceedings were conducted in "good faith" (i.e.), as the result of due care and attention and that they failed on the ground of want of jurisdiction or other defect of a like nature and that it was difficult to hold that by any reasonable construction of S. 144, C. P. Code, the present case could have been believed to fall under that section and that the mere fact that the plaintiffs might have honestly believed that they could get all that they were entitled to by way of proceedings in restitution would not suffice to give them the benefit of S. 14. ——S. 14—Time of previous arbitration proceedings—Exclusion of.

In a suit brought in a Civil Court, the time taken in previous arbitration proceedings relating to the subject-matter of the suit cannot be excluded for the purpose of computing limitation, because proceedings before arbitration cannot be held to be upon the same cause of action as a civil suit. The cause of action in proceedings before arbitrators is the agreement of the parties to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration, whilst in a civil suit there is no such agreement and the cause of action is upon the right or title which the plaintiff alleges in himself. S. 14 is not also applicable because in the first place, although the Limitation Act should be applied by analogy to proceedings before arbitrators and S. 14 can be invoked with regard to proceedings before arbitrators with reference to previous proceedings before arbitrators, still proceedings before arbitrators will not be proceedings before a Court within the meaning of S. 14 with reference to a subsequent civil suit. Secondly the decree of a Civil Court that an award delivered by arbitrators is not valid and binding does not deprive the arbitrators of their jurisdiction and the cancellation of the award cannot be considered a cause of a like nature within the meaning of S. 14. 56 C. 1048 (P.C.), Dist. LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 14.

——S. 14—Time spent in prosecution of another case—Allowance.

The section is mandatory, and if the Court has to exclude the time spent in prosecuting a case in good faith, the Court must determine whether the prosecution was in fact in good faith or not. In order that the Court should arrive at the period which is to be excluded under S. 14, it must also determine how much must be included, whether by reason of prosecution in bad faith or owing to any other reason. (Grille, J.C.) MODEL MILLS, NAGPUR, LTD. v. HIRALAL RAMGOPAL. 30 N.L.R. 294 = 6 R.N. 255 = 149 I.C. 956 = A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 145.

——S. 14—Time spent in revision—Exclusion.

The principle that party who proceeds contrary to a clearly expressed provisions of law cannot be regarded as prosecuting another civil proceeding in good faith is sound but should not be applied with rigidity. If in the revision proceedings there is no want of diligence and good faith, there is no reason why the plaintiff should not have the benefit of S. 14 because of the negligence of his advocate. Every case has to be judged on its own merits. C purchased a field in suit in execution of a decree obtained by him against S and took possession of the same. L obtained a final decree for foreclosure and got possession of the said field on 10—8—1926. C's application in revision filed on 27—9—1926 was also dismissed on 21—3—1927 after notice to the other side. C sued L on 21—3—1928 for establishing his right under O. 21, R. 103 and L contended that the suit not having been filed within one year from 10—8—1926 was barred by time. The trial Court gave C the benefit of S. 14, Limitation Act, and ordered that the suit should proceed. L applied for revision of this order, urging that C was not entitled to the benefit of S. 14 of the Limitation Act.

Held, that in view of the fact that the Court in revision thought it fit to hear the parties, it might be assumed that C had reasonable ground for supposing that the original order would be set aside in revision. The lower Court was, therefore, right in giving the benefit of S. 14 of the Limitation Act to C. But the lower Court should only have excluded from the computation the period during which the application was pending, i.e., from 17—9—1926 to 21—3—1927 and not the time between the date of the order of the lower Court and the date of filing the revision between 1—8—1926 and 27—9—1926. In this view C's suit was time barred. 7 Rang. 466, Dist. (Niyogi, A. J. C.) LAXMAN DAS v. CHUNNI LAL. 27 N.L.R. 251 = I R. 1931 Nag. 49 = 130 I.C. 145 = A.I.R. 1931 Nag 17.

——S. 14—Two Courts with concurrent jurisdiction—Suit filed in one—Good faith.

If two Courts have jurisdiction to try a suit, it is initially the privilege of the plaintiff to decide in which Court he would file the suit, and the exercise of this option by filing it in a particular Court does not affect the question of jurisdiction or his bona fides. The mere fact therefore that the plaintiff instituted the suit in the Civil Court at X instead of at Y, because it was convenient for him to do so, does not indicate that he did not institute the suit in good faith. (Jai Lal, J.) BHAGWAN DAS v. TIKAYA RAM. I.R. 1933 Lah. 423 = 144 I.C. 184 = A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 264.

The appellant filed a suit against two sets of defendants on bahi khata accounts. A preliminary objection was taken to the plaint in the earlier suit and it was held in the end that the plaint was bad because of misjoinder of parties. The appellant was ordered in that suit to make his election as to which part of the claim he wished to proceed with. Upon this order the appellant stated that he wished to proceed against one set of defendants and he withdrew the part of the claim directed against the respondents in the appeals. His suit against the other set of defendants was decreed.

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to claim the benefit of S. 14 (1) on account of the previous suit he had withdrawn.

A mortgagee decree-holder filed an execution application for sale of mortgaged properties on 2nd October, 1922. It was dismissed on 16th January, 1923, owing to non payment of batta for fresh sale notice as ordered by Court. Meanwhile third persons filed a suit against both the mortgagor and mortgagee, alleging that the mortgaged properties belonged to a public religious endowment and were as such alienable and he sought a declaration from the Court to such an effect. That suit was decreed a day previous to the dismissal of the execution application. But on appeal the High Court reversed the decision of the lower Court and dismissed the collateral suit on 16th August, 1927. The mortgagee decree-holder put in another execution application after the termination of the said appeal on 23rd September, 1927, but it was dismissed as time-barred. On the question whether the decree in the collateral litigation would be tantamount to an injunction staying the execution proceedings and whether the fresh application filed after three years would be taken to revive or continue the original application for execution filed by the decree-holder, Held, that in order to make the provisions of S. 15 of the Limitation Act apply to this case, it must be shown that a suit or application for the execution of the decree had been stayed by an injunction or order. If the decree-holder could not bring herself within the exemptions provided for in the Act, she could not escape the bar of limitation by pleading in equity an implied order or a collateral litigation which would render her proceedings futile.

Held also, that since the earlier application for execution had been finally and properly dismissed for non payment of batta and the later execution application was filed more than three years from the date of the order passed on the former one, it should be deemed to have been barred by limitation under Art. 180 of the Limitation Act. In order to enable the later application to be treated as one in continuation or to revive the former one, there should have been no final disposal or there should have been a wrong dismissal on account of some obstacle which had existed but which had been subsequently removed. ——S. 15—Construction and scope—Execution—Stay by injunction order—Application to revive after dissolution of injunction—Limitation—Principle of revival—If superseded by S. 15.

The enlargement of the scope of S. 15 of the Limitation Act, by the Act of 1908 by which the section has been made applicable to execution application also, has not in any way superseded the principle that a later application can in certain circumstances be treated as an application for revival or in continuation of an earlier application. S. 15 only contemplates the filing of an application for execution and does not in terms apply to any other application. An application by a decree-holder for revival of or to continue his previous application which had been stayed by an injunction does not come within S. 15. (*Henderson and R. C. ——S. 18—Fraud—Burden of proof.

Where a suit is on the face of it barred, it is for the plaintiff to prove in the first instance the circumstances which would prevent the statute from having its ordinary effect. A person who, in such circumstances, desires to invoke the aid of S. 18 must establish that there has been fraud, and that, by means of such fraud, he has been kept from the knowledge of his right to sue or of the title whereon it is founded. Once this is established, the burden is shifted on to the other side to show that the plaintiff had knowledge of the transaction beyond the period of limitation. Mere suggestions of fraud do not amount to such knowledge as is required by the section and the knowledge must be clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the particular fraud. A co-sharer coming into exclusive possession of property belonging to himself and his co sharer will be presumed to have done so not only for himself but for his co-sharer as well until there is ouster. If the plaintiff was unaware of that the defendant (his co-sharer) had the property, there is a duty on the defendant to speak and if he remained silent, it amount to concealed fraud on his part, on which the plaintiff can justly rely to get over the bar of limitation. The burden is on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had clear and definite knowledge of the facts which constitute fraud. It is not enough for him to show that the plaintiff had means available to him for coming to know of the fraud. Beljmann v. Beljmann, (1895) 2 Ch. 474, Foll. ——S. 18—Plaintiff establishing fraud of defendant—Onus of proving—Knowledge of plaintiff beyond period of limitation.

The terms of S. 18, Limitation Act, are materially different from S. 26, Real Property Limitation Act (3 and 4 Will. 4, c. 27), and when a plaintiff has established that by fraud of the defendant he had been kept from the knowledge of his right to sue, the burden is shifted on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had knowledge of the transaction impeached beyond the period of limitation. ——S. 18—Scope.

Except when the plaintiff's knowledge is an ingredient of his cause of action, the plaintiff's ignorance of his right to sue does not prevent time from running against him. But it is otherwise if such ignorance is brought about by the fraud of the defendant. In order to constitute fraud, there must be some abuse of confidential position, some intentional imposition, or some deliberate concealment of facts, a designed fraud by which a party knowing to whom the right belongs, conceals the facts and circumstances giving that right. The right of the party so defrauded is not affected by lapse of time or by anything done or omitted to be done, so long as he remains, without any fault of his own, in ignorance of the fraud which has been committed. LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 19—Authority to acknowledge.

In a suit on a promissory note a deposition by the defendant made in an insolvency proceeding to the effect that "I borrowed Rs. 600 from the plaintiff on a promissory note" and recorded under C. P. Code, O. 18, R. 5 (Rangoon), was sought by the plaintiff to save the limitation by way of acknowledgment under S. 19, Limitation Act, on the ground that the clerk who signed the certificate at the end of the deposition was the agent of the defendant for the purpose of making such acknowledgment of indebtedness.

Held, that neither the Judge nor the clerk, who signed the certificates at the end of the defendant's deposition had any authority, either derived from the defendant himself or by reason of any duty cast upon them by law, to make an acknowledgment of indebtedness on behalf of the appellant and hence the condition that an acknowledgment must be in the form of a writing which has been signed either by the debtor or by some person duly appointed as his agent in that behalf, was not fulfilled.

Held, further, that R. 5 (Rangoon) merely required the clerk to sign the certificate at the end of the deposition; consequently the clerk of the Court had not signed the deposition as such, either as agent of the witness or in any other capacity. The result of a decree in a suit for pre-emption is not a re sale of the property by the vendee to the pre-emptor involving any fresh contract or conveyance. When the decree is for pre-emption which places the pre-emptor in the shoes of the vendee thereby becoming the representative of the original vendor, the Court enforces the original obligation of the vendor to offer the property to the pre-emptor and substitutes the pre-emptor in the place of the vendee because the transfer to the latter has taken place in violation of the pre-emptor's preferential right. Consequently a pre emptor is not a representative of the vendee so as to make a valid acknowledgment. An acknowledgment made by

A mortgage was executed by plaintiff's ancestors to defendants' ancestors in 1834. In 1864, the mortgagee admitted that he held the lands on mortgage in a kabuliyat to the inamdar. A mortgage was executed by two persons in favour of the father of the plaintiff. The plaintiff was then a minor living jointly with his father. The father died in 1912 and in 1913, the mortgagors executed a second mortgage in favour of another including in that mortgage the whole of the amount due under the earlier mortgage. In 1928 the plaintiff sued to recover the amount and claimed that he was entitled to do so within 3 years of his attaining majority.

Held, that time began to run from the date of the execution of the mortgage, but the mortgage of 1913 contained an acknowledgment and therefore saved limitation.

Held further, that the plaintiff being a minor at the time from which limitation has to be reckoned, the suit filed within three years of the plaintiff attaining majority was competent. Held, that the word deyne (lit. ———Ss. 19 and 20—Scope—Theory of acknowledgment—Difference between English and Indian law.

There is a fundamental difference in the theory of acknowledgment according to the law in India as compared with the law in England. In England the acknowledgments or part-payments in order to be effective must be such as to amount to a fresh promise to pay. Under the Indian law no promise to pay either express or implied is required. The English authorities cannot therefore afford any guidance in determining the question under the Limitation Act. Unconditional acknowledgment.

———S. 19—Unconditional acknowledgment—Whether constitutes a fresh cause of action—Nature of the plea of limitation in such a case—Time-barred debt—Inclusion of.

Per Niamatullah, J.—An unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay and affords a new cause of action to the obligee. If in making the acknowledgment, he has included time-barred debts which he might well have repudiated, it may be open to the party to plead failure of consideration to that extent. But a simple plea of limitation will have reference only to the period commencing on its date. That the debt acknowledged should not be a time barred debt is made necessary not because it is treated as an acknowledgment under S. 19 of the Limitation Act which certainly saves the bar only if the acknowledgment was made before the debt had become barred but because of S. 25 of the Indian Contract Act. So a time barred debt is not a valid consideration unless there is an express promise made in writing and signed by the debtor. That the original debt had become barred by limitation is not a plea of limitation in reference to the acknowledgment on which the suit is founded, but is the back ground of the plea of want of consideration for the acknowledgment and should be taken in that form. S. 19 contemplates a large variety of admissions which cannot amount to new contracts.

Per Sulaiman, A.C.J.—"It is not correct to say that every acknowledgment of liability amounts to a new contract. If the transaction has amounted to a new contract, it can undoubtedly be made the basis of a suit; if not, unless it is made within the period of limitation, it cannot be the basis of a fresh suit. A promise to pay does not necessarily imply an admission that the debt on the date of acknowledgment had not become barred by time. (Case-law discussed.) A payment cannot be considered to be of interest as such unless it was "avowedly" made towards interest. ———S. 20—Payment of interest as such—Acknowledgment by payer—Necessity—Evidence of intention of debtor—If necessary.

Under Limitation Act, S. 20, no payment of interest can be made to avail unless it is a payment of interest "as such." The fact that there are arrears of interest owing at the date of payment more than sufficient to absorb the payment itself is one of those circumstances which together with other circumstances, may legitimately be taken into account in considering whether there is an intention to pay interest "as such." But this reasoning should not be stretched further as it ignores the question of intention, inasmuch as it may be none the less possible to have what may be described as an "indiscriminate" payment where there are arrears of interest as in a case where there are not. Where interest is not paid as such, that is, the debtor does not clearly mention that the payment by him was to be appropriated towards interest, it cannot be considered to have been paid by him towards principal. Cases are easily conceivable in which a debtor may pay a certain amount in part satisfaction of what is due from him without caring to specify that the sum is to be appropriated towards interest or principal. In such a case, whether the payment was of interest or principal would depend on the manner in which the creditor exercises his option. ——S. 20 (1)—Joint debtors—Promissory note by father and son—Part payment—Endorsement by father alone—If saves limitation against son

In a suit upon a promissory note executed by two persons, father and son, the plaintiff in the suit in order to overcome the bar of limitation, relied on an endorsement of part payment on the note which was signed by the father alone to the effect, "paid towards principal and interest Rs. 1,300 through Mr. G." It was found that on the date of the endorsement, plaintiff went to the house of the executants to demand payment of the debt and met both the father and son. After the discussion between the father and son in respect of an amount due to them by Mr. G, the son asked his father to go with plaintiff to Mr. G's house and arrange with Mr. G for payment to plaintiff. Accordingly the father accompanied the plaintiff to Mr. G's house and obtained from him a pro-note in favour of the plaintiff for Rs. 1,300 after which the endorsement in question was made on the suit pro-note by the father.

Held, the case fell under S. 20 (1) of the Limitation Act and that the payment or part payment was by a debtor, who could be a co-debtor as well, duly authorized to do so, and therefore the suit was not barred by limitation as against the son. It is not necessary that the money with which the part payment is made should

On the death of the father of a Hindu minor, his mother is a lawful guardian and can act under S. 21 of the Limitation Act as an agent duly authorized to acknowledge a debt on behalf of the minor. No question arises under S. 21 of the benefit to be derived by the minor from his guardian's action in acknowledging a debt. The question of benefit is only relevant to the original debt. If the original debt is binding upon the minor, the action of the guardian in acknowledging it merely extends limitation but does not alter the character of the debt. In the same way, if the original debt is tainted with immorality, and not therefore binding upon the minor, the guardian's acknowledgment of it does not change its character. (*Shadi Lal, C. A firm as such has no legal entity, nor is it a person in the eye of the law. It is nothing more than a compendious name for the individuals who carry on business in partnership. When therefore a suit is instituted by or against a firm, it is a suit by or against the partners who are members of that firm although their names are not disclosed in the plaint. If their names are subsequently disclosed and placed on the record, such names are not substituted for the names of persons who are already on the record, nor are such names added to any names which are on the record so as to attract the applicability of S. 22. Where therefore a plaint is filed against a firm consisting of certain persons, it should be deemed as filed against them as existing persons although their names are not disclosed and if the names of the members of the firm are subsequently disclosed, the amendment is merely for correcting a misdescription of the existing person and the suit must be deemed to have been instituted when the plaint was presented and not when it was amended. 7 All. 284; A I R. 1924 Cal. 74; A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 527; 17 Bom. 413 and A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 304, Rel on; A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 191, Dist. (1) of the section, when a new plaintiff or a new defendant is substituted or added, will not apply to a case where a plaintiff is made a defendant or a defendant is made a plaintiff. ——Ss. 23 and 24—Applicability—Obstruction to water-course—If a continuing cause of action.

In view of the illustration to S. 24, in respect of interference with a water course, the party injured has a continuing cause of action. Whether the principle of continuing wrong as laid down in S. 23 can be applied to obstruction to a right of way or not, it undoubtedly applies to cases of interference with a water-course. Although it has sometimes been stated generally that whenever a permanent state of things has been brought about by the defendant, there is no scope for the application of S. 23, the theory of a permanent state of things being brought about can have no application, when it is brought about on the defendant's own land. In such a case, the doctrine of title by adverse possession will not apply. When there is interference with a flow of water, in whatever manner the interference is effected, S. 23 will apply. The person who claims a right over the property of another must not have deprived him of that right by the use of force or secretly. The word "peaceably" qualifies the verb "enjoyed." ———S. 28 and Art 47—Applicability—Order under S. 145 (6), Cr. P. Code—Successful party deprived of possession by stranger after three years—Subsequent suit by unsuccessful party—If barred

S. 145 (6), Cr. P. Code, requires that the Magistrate deciding that one of the parties was or should be treated as being in possession of the land in dispute shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law. If the successful party is evicted by means of a suit by a stranger (not being a party to the proceeding) within three years, as provided by Art. 47, Limitation Act, the order of the Magisrate is rendered ineffectual and the shorter period of limitation under the article ceases to run against the unsuccessful party. There is thus no room left for the application of Art. 47, and S 28 of the Limitation Act, will not become operative until the expiry of the period of limitation laid down in the ordinary law. But the unsuccessful party has no right left at all to the property after the expiry of three years irrespective of the question of the identity of the person who is thereafter in possession of the property, that is to say, whether the person who evicts the successful party and remains in possesson is or is not within the category of persons successful in proceedings under S. 145, Cr. P. Code, and persons claiming under them. When the unsuccessful party has not filed a suit under Art. 47 within three years, S. 28 of the Limitation Act is a complete answer to his claim, if made after three years. ———S. 28—Applicability—Service inam lands—Adverse possession by stranger—Dispossession by holder under decree of Revenue Court—Suit for possession by stranger on basis of prior adverse possession—Benefit of S. 28—If available.

Neither S. 28 nor the principle thereof can be applied to a case where during the period of the alleged adverse possession, no suit for possession could have been instituted in a Civil Court because of some special enactment. A holder of a service inam, who is out of possession of the lands attached to his office, must, under the Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act, sue for possession in the Revenue Court within three years. But where the holder of the office has taken possession of the properties under a decree obtained by him in the Revenue Court, a third party who is aggrieved by that decree, cannot merely sue for possession on the basis of his prior adverse possession and seek the benefit of S. 28 of the Act. The plaintiff claimed to have acquired by adverse possession a prescriptive right to the fishery in the river Cossye, which bring a "large navigable river" the property of the alveus and of the fishery was prima facie in the Government under the provisions of the Bengal Regulation XI of 1825.

Held, on the evidence, that the plaintiff had established that he and his predecessors in title had for 60 years been in possession adverse to the Government of the fishery in question, and therefore by operation of the Limitation Act, S. 28 and Art. 149 (as read with Art. 144), the right of the Government to the fishery was extinguished and the plaintiff had thereby acquired a right to it. The granting by the plaintiff and his predecessors of leases or licenses of the fishery (which prima facie belonged to the Government) was evidence of the usurpation by the plaintiff of the distinctive rights of the Government and was thus most significant evidence of adverse possession. Land Revenue Act—Scope and effect of S. 29 (2) (a) and (b) on the power of the local legislature to apply or exclude certain provisions of the Limitation Act—Applicability of S. 6 to a suit by minor co-sharer for proprietary profits.*

Where a plaintiff instituted a suit for recovering his share of village profits, on 16 6 28 after attaining majority, it was contended that the suit for the recovery of a share of proprietary profits between co sharers and lambardars is not governed by S.6 of the Limitation Act in view of S. 29 (2) (b) as amended in 1922,

Held, the amendment in reality amplified the scope of the old S. 29 of the Act. There is a clear conflict between S. 29 (2) (b) which says that the remaining provisions, which include S. 6 of the Limitation Act shall not apply and S. 160 (3), C.P. Land Revenue Act, which says that the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act shall apply and does not exclude any. The rule is that the general provisions such as those contained in the Limitation Act do not derogate from special provisions but that the latter do derogate from the former. Moreover S. 29 (2) (b) is a negative provision and cannot be interpreted as having been intended to affect any positive provision of the local law. It is not the intention of S. 29 to restrict the power of the local legislature to apply or exclude the application of the provisions of the Limitation Act. S. 29 (2) (a) presupposes the power of the local legislature to exclude the operation of certain sections of the Limitation Act. If so, it is unreasonable to assume that Cl. (b) deprives the local legislature of its power to apply certain provisions, if it so desires, or in any way restricts the scope of the local law which prescribes the application of certain sections of the Limitation Act. Cl. (b) must be construed as laying down that the remaining provisions of the Act shall not apply unless they are expressly made applicable by any special or local Act. It therefore means that is shall not apply to a local law by its own force. It does not prohibit the future or the past application of the provisions of the Limitation Act by any special or local law. So S. 6 of the Limitation Act applies to the suits for recovery of proprietary profits. (Niyogi, A.J.C.) SETH MISRILL v. RATANLAL. 163 I.C. 623 = 9 R.N. 10 = 18 N.L.J. 285.

——S. 31—Applicability and construction—Mortgage executed in 1892—Renewal in 1905—Effect of as against a mortgage of 1902.

S. 31 of the Limitation Act must be interpreted as prescribing a period of limitation even for the purposes of acknowledgments, part payments and renewals under Ss. 19 and 20 of the Limitation Act. The operation of the section cannot be limited or restricted to such acknowledgments or renewals made between 1908 and 1920. It also applies to one made before 1908. Hence a simple mortgage of 1892, renewed in 1905, is effective and has priority over one executed in 1902. (*Beasley, C. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 7.

——Art. 2—"In pursuance of any enactment"—Interpretation of.

The expression "in pursuance of any enactment" in Art. 2 of the Limitation Act must be interpreted as meaning acting in conformity with an enactment and not merely pretending to act or acting under colour of such an enactment. Where a person honestly believes that he is acting under some enactment, he is protected although he exceeds the actual power conferred upon him by that enactment. But where a person merely pretends that he was so acting and knows that he should not act under that enactment, he cannot be said to be acting in pursuance of any such enactment. Art. 2 should not be applied as if it were proved against the averment of the plaintiff and there should be an enquiry as to whether the defendant had, in fact, acted in good faith or not. Even where the facts are false to the knowledge of the defendant, he cannot seek shelter behind the provisions of Art. 2. Where a defendant has done an act or omitted to do an act, knowing that he had no ground whatsoever for so acting or omitting to do an act, he does not come within the purview of Art. 2. It is only defendants who have acted honestly, although they might have exceeded the actual power conferred upon them by an enactment who would be protected. Of course, where it is established that the act done was in strict accordance with an enactment, there would be an obvious protection. But even where the power was exceeded, there would be protection in cases of good faith and bona fide belief. Although the words chosen by the legislature are not happy their introduction was intended to obviate the difficulty of the article being interpreted too strictly. When a claim under O. 21, R. 58, C. P. But when the matter is one to which O 21 R. 58, C. P. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 11.

M mortgaged his property to three sets of persons and all three sets obtained decrees against him for realisation of their dues by the sale of the property; the property was sold and out of it the previous mortgagee and second mortgagee were satisfied, by payment of decretal amount and the execution was filed as fully satisfied. The third mortgagee, whose mortgage was subsequent to the other two put in an execution application in his decree and attached the sum which remained out of the sale proceeds. He then applied for payment of that sum towards the satisfaction of his decree. In the meantime one of the decree-holders in the second mortgage decree applied for amendment of the second mortgage decree. This was after the attachment of the balance by the third mortgagee. The second mortgage decree was amended by raising the decretal amount. The second mortgagee applied in execution proceedings of third mortgagee that he was entitled to the balance of sale proceeds. His objection was dismissed on the ground that his execution was proceedings were consigned to the record room as fully satisfied. More than two years subsequent to this order he filed a suit for payment of the amount.

Held, that the suit was barred by time as he should have filed declaratory suit within one year of the order under Art. 11 and that the suit was not governed by Art. 62.

Held, further, that the proper procedure for him was to put his own amended decree into execution. (Addison and Din Mohammad, JJ.) ISHAR DAS v. PANNA LAL. 159 I.C. 608=8 R.L. 409=A.I.R 1935 Lah 642.

———Art. 11—Starting point—Sale in execution—Objection by son of judgment-debtor—Dismissal—Suit to set aside sale.

Certain ancestral land was attached in execution of a money decree against the father. The sons objected to the attachment under O. 21, R. 58, C. P. A fresh suit was filed by them in 1924 after their father's death for possession of the attached land which was sold in execution of the decree and purchased by the decree holder.

Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation, as the cause of action for the suit is the alienation effected in execution proceedings after the sons' objection had been dismissed, and a suit for possession is incompetent in the lifetime of the father. Art. 120 does not apply to such a suit so far as the decree-holder is concerned. But as for the other creditors of the judgment-debtor who had not attached the property in respect of which declaration was sought, the order in the objection proceedings (to which they were not parties) gives them no such present cause of action as to bring their claim within the purview of Art. 11 and the grant of the relief asked for in favour of such creditors is barred by Art. 120. Art. 11 (a) does not contemplate computation of the period of limitation from the date of any order passed in revision. There is a clear distinction between an appeal and an application for revision. Whereas the right of appeal is a substantive right created by statute, interference by the High Court by way of revision is entirely discretionary and when the High Court rejects a petition for revision, it is not as if the order of dismissal is the only subsisting order in the case. ———Art. 29—Starting point—Subsequent sale not material.

The crux of Art. 29 is in the words "wrongful seizure." If the seizure is not wrongful, there can be no cause of action. The seizure may be wrongful either because the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor or that the Court has no jurisdiction to attach the property. It is because the process is illegal that the seizure becomes wrongful so as to give a cause of action for the suit. The sale of the property after the wrongful seizure does not give a new cause of action. ———Art. 30—Suit against Railway for damage to goods—Starting point.

A suit against a Railway Company for compensation for losing or injuring goods clearly comes under Art. 30 and time begins to run from the date when the loss or injury occurs and not from the date on which open delivery is given to the plaintiff by the Railway. ———Art. 30—Suit for short-delivery—Onus.

The loss or injury referred to in Art. 30 is the loss or injury to the goods and not the loss or injury to the consignee. The onus is on the railway company, in a suit for short delivery, to prove when the loss or injury to the goods actually occurred and that more than one year has elapsed from that date. Where the company had on the other hand throughout taken up the position that no loss had in fact occurred, Art. 30 is out of the question. (*Courtney-Terrell, C. In a suit brought on 4th October, 1923 for damages for short delivery, it was contended that the first delivery having been made on the 21st September, 1922, the suit was barred under Art. 31.

Held, (i) that under Art. 31, the material date was the date of delivery. No date having been fixed in the contract, a reasonable date should be fixed. The contract was an indivisible one. It referred not only to the delivery of iron but also to the delivery of certain wooden frames which were delivered only on the 5th October, 1922, and that the suit was in time; (ii) though the plaintiff wrote on 23rd October, 1922, to the Company, the latter had sent no definite reply till August 1923 and were therefore responsible for the delay in the institution of the suit It was not open to them to plead the suit had been brought too late. ———Art. 44—Applicability—Suit by transferee from minor.

Art. 44 does not apply to a suit by a transferee from a minor to which the minor is not a party. 49 Bom. 309 and 56 M.L.J. 332, Dist. The father and natural guardian of the minor had transferred the property to the defendant in 1912. The minor attained majority in 1923 and sold the property to the plaintiff No. 1 in 1925. The plaintiff No. 1 and the quandom minor (as plaintiff No. 2) brought a suit in 1926 to set aside the alienation of 1912. Plaintiff No. 2 withdrew from the suit without objection on the part of plaintiff No. 1 and on the question whether the suit was in time.

Held, that Art. 44 of the Limitation Act did not apply to the suit. "The question is not whether the suit was barred by limitation, but whether the plaintiff has a right to continue the suit. After the minor had withdrawn, he has virtually elected to acquiesce in the sale by his guardian and the interest of the minor in the property has been extinguished under Art. 44 read with S. 28 of the Act. ———Art. 44—Scope and applicability—Minor's property—Alienation by guardian as if it were his own.

Where a minor's property is sold by his guardian, who professed to act as such or who can be shown to have acted in that capacity, the minor may be bound to have the deed set aside within three years after attaining majority; but where the property has been alienated by the guardian as if it were his own and the mortgagee treats it as the property of the alleged guardian personally and has it sold as such, Art. 44 cannot apply. Where a guardian transfers property in circumstances which did not justify the transfer, such transfer is only voidable. Wherever the transfer is void ab initio, Art. 44 does not apply. Where a minor's property is sold by another person, even though he be his guardian claiming it to be his own, the minor's interest is not affected by such transfer which is void. ———Art. 44—Scope—Minor being in joint possession—Suit to set aside sale and for partition.

Cases contemplated by Art. 44 are those in which "transfer of property" has been made by a guardian. It implies that the property has changed hands and does not apply to cases where the erstwhile minor is in possession of his property in spite of deeds of transfer executed by the guardian under which either possession does not pass from transferor to transferee, e.g., deed of simple mortgage, or possession has not been parted with though it ought to have been delivered. A person brought a suit beyond three years of his attaining majority for partition of the house and declaration that the sale effected by his certified guardian without permission of the District Judge was void and ineffectual as against him. He claimed to be entitled to half share of the house which was so transferred and made the other co-sharer of the house as well as the vendee defendant to the suit. It was found that the plaintiff was all along in possession with the co sharer in spite of the sale in favour of defendants.

Held, that Art. 44 did not apply to the case, and even if it applied it only barred the remedy of the plaintiff to get the sale-deed set aside but was not fatal to his title which still subsisted and entitled him to separate possession of what is now in joint possession of himself and other co sharer. The rule is well settled that lapse of limitation, apart from S. 28 of the Limitation Act, bars only the remedy and does not extinguish the title of the claimant. S. 28 not being applicable to this case, the plaintiff's title subsists and consequently the main relief sought, namely, partition as against the co-sharer was not affected by Art. 44. A. I. ———Arts. 48 and 49—Scope—Attachment of goods—Claimant misappropriating attached property—Suit for compensation.

Arts. 48 and 49 are intended to apply to cases where the plaintiff having the right to the possession of the property learns of the acquisition by theft or dishonest misappropriation or conversion. Where an attachment by a plaintiff was stayed by a rival claimant pending his suit for establishment of claim and the claimant having misappropriated the goods attached, the attaching decree-holder sued him for compensation.

Held, the plaintiff's right was confined to get the goods sold through the Court and realise his decretal money out of the sale proceeds. But this right did not entitle him to take possession of the goods direct. Art. 49 is not hence applicable. Art. 36 which is a general article for suits for compensation for all acts and omissions amounting to torts which are not provided for elsewhere must apply since neither Art. 48 nor Art. 49 applies. A sale of goods by the railway company without the formality provided by S. 55 of the Railways Act is wrongful and a suit for damages for such wrongful sale is one for conversion and is governed by Art. 48 of the Limitation Act and the starting date of limitation is the date when the plaintiff, i.e., the person who has the right to possession, first learns of the act of conversion. If the company seeks to show that the suit is not maintainable by reason of the expiry of the statutory period of limitation, it is upon it to prove precisely at what period the plaintiff became aware of the sale and its wrongfulness, that is to say, became aware of the fact of conversion. ——Art. 49—Release of property from wrongful attachment—Suit for its return—Limitation—Starting point.

The defendant had a decree against certain persons, in execution of which he got attached the produce of the plaintiff. On the responsibility of the defendant, the produce was put in the custody of the shahanas. The plaintiff filed an objection to the attachment which was allowed and the attachment was removed. Thereafter the defendant brought a suit under O. 21, R. 63, C.P. Code which was dismissed. The property continued in the custody of the shahanas. The plaintiff sued to recover his produce and in the alternative its price.

Held, Art. 29 of the Limitation Act is not applicable as the suit is not for damages for wrongful attachment of property but it is for the return of the property after it had been released from the wrongful attachment, and that Art. 49 will apply to the case and time began to run from the date of the release of the property from attachment, when the possession of the defendant and his shahanas became unlawful (Ganga Nath, J.) PARSHADI LAL v. CHANDAN. 158 I.C. 1014=8 R. ——Art. 52—Sale of goods—Liability to pay full price—Date of accrual.

In a simple transaction of sale of goods, the liability to pay the full price accrues on the date of the sale. The fact that the purchaser, not having all the money in his hands, agrees to pay the balance with interest at a certain rate does not prevent the accruing of the vendor's right to recover the whole price on account of the purchase and time begins to run from the date of the sale. Vendor must sue within three years from that date in order to get a personal decree against the purchaser. If the original contract between the parties had been that the plaintiffs would purchase goods on behalf of the defendants retain them and then re-sell them on instruction from the defendants and then only the account would be settled, time would not begin to run from the date of the initial purchase. Case held not to be a case where purchaser stipulates to pay the price after settlement of account on a future date, the goods being re sold by the purchaser in the meanwhile. Subsequently however the contract was broken and the defendant neither returned the car nor made further payment. The plaintiffs sued to recover the balance of the price of the car delivered, damages for breach of contract and interest. The defendant having raised the plea of limitation.

Held, that the defendant was liable for the sale price of the car he had retained and that the suit in respect of such claim was governed by Art. 52 and not Art. 115. ——Art. 57—Account—Suit to recover money—Account not being mutual—Limitation.

A mutual account means not mearly where one of the parties has received money and paid it on account of the other, but where each of the parties has received and paid on the other's account. It is the essence of mutuality that each party to the account must extend the credit to the other on the faith of an admitted indebtedness to him. In a suit for recovery of money on a bahi account it was found that the dealings between the parties were simple meney loans as between creditor and debtor and the account was not matual in any sense of the term. The defendant borrowed money from the plaintiff from time to time made payments to him occasionally and struck balance in his favour. The transactions created obligation on one side only, those on the other being merely complete or partial discharge of such obligations. On the account as it stood there were not independent obligations in the sense in which the term is used in reference to "mutual" account and there were and could be no reciprocal demands between the parties.

Even assuming the proposition that a guardian cannot sue a minor during his minority for expenses incurred on his behalf is correct in the case of a de jure guardian, it cannot apply to a de facto guardian between whom and the minor no jural relationship at all exist. The very term de facto guardian as opposed to de jure guardian implies that there is not a jural relationship between them, though there may be analogous rights and liabilities conferred by a particular law upon a de facto guardian. Again, whatever implied contract there may be between an agent and his principal for the agent to be indemnified by the principal for loss incurred, no such contract can be implied in the relationship of a de facto guardian and the ward. It would follow, therefore, that the de facto guardian is only in the position of a person advancing monies on behalf of another. Art. 61 would, therefore, apply to a suit by him and there is no valid reason for holding that limitation must commence from the date of the ward's attaining majority. It must be borne in mind that the de facto guardian is at liberty to terminate the connection at any moment if he finds that he is incurring expenses on behalf of the minor without being recouped from the estate of the minor. ——Arts. 61, 83 and 120—Applicability—Suit by receiver to recover money due to estate—Money spent in suit for—Limitation.

When a receiver or manager is appointed by the Court, he is appointed on behalf of all persons interested in the property. Hence the expenses incurred by the receiver of an estate in instituting a suit to recover money due to the estate are incurred by him on behalf of and for the person who owns the estate and they are "money payable to the plaintiff for money paid for the defendant" within the meaning of Art. 61. Therefore a suit by the quondam receiver to recover the amount spent by him in instituting a suit on behalf of the estate is governed by Art. 61, and not by Art. 83 or 120, Limitation Act. The circumstance that the receiver was also benefited by the suit does not make the suit any the less a suit on behalf of the owner of the estate or take it out of the purview of Art. 61. 34 M. 167; 32 C. 582 and 38 M. 260, Expl. When once a partition has taken place and property has been divided, a suit for a share in any property that remained over or that was subsequently acquired by one of the members of the family, e.g., debts due to the family realised, would not be a suit to enforce a share in joint ancestral property and would not be governed by Art. 127. On the other hand, although a suit for partition will effect a severance of the joint family status, it does not ipso facto divide the property; and where a preliminary decree is passed which declares that the property is joint and that the parties to the suit have a right to share in the property according to defined shares, it cannot be said that a partition is effected until further proceedings are taken and a final decree is passed. The income of the joint family property, which accrues during the period between the preliminary and final decrees in a partition suit constitutes joint family property; and, if that is not divided by the final decree for partition, a suit to enforce a share in such income is governed by Art. 127, Limitation Act (and not by Art. 62). Art. 62 of the Limitation Act contemplates a suit in which the plaintiff is entitled to obtain the whole of the money received as soon as it is received. It does not apply where the plaintiff is not entitled to the money when it was received by the defendant. The defendant promised to pay to the plaintiff a District Board, a certain amount by way of personal contribution for the purpose of constructing a bridge over a river and he also collected subscriptions for the same purpose. The District Board sued through its President to recover from the defendant both the amounts. The evidence in the case showed that the construction of the bridge could not have been begun earlier than 1923 and the suit was instituted on 5th September, 1925. The lower Court decreed the suit in respect of the personal contribution but held that the claim as regards the subscription collected was barred by limitation.

Held, in appeal, that the claim in respect of the subscription amount was not barred by limitation, Art. 120 and not Art. 62 of the Limitation Act being applicable. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 64.

in truth bilateral, and creates a new debt and a new cause of action. There are mutual promises, the one side agreeing to accept the amount of the balance of the debts as true and to pay it, the other side agreeing the entire debt as at a certain figure and then agreeing that it has been discharged to such and such an extent, so that there will be complete satisfaction on payment of the agreed balance. Hence there is mutual consideration to support the promises on either side and to constitute the new cause of action. The account stated is accordingly binding, save that it may be reopened on any ground—for instance, fraud or mistake—which would justify setting aside any other agreement. It follows from the idea of an account stated that whatever the consideration for each item, every item must appear in terms of money, since what is being agreed is matter of account ; it is also clear that in that great class of cases where the whole dealings between the parties are financial, the items of account can only be in terms of money and can only consist of payments of one to the other and vice versa. There can be account stated although the balance of indebtedness is throughout in favour of one side. It is irrelevant whether the debt in favour of the final creditor is created at the outset by one large payment or consists of several sums of principal and several sums of interest. Nor is it material whether the only payments made on the other side were simply payments in reduction of such indebtedness or were payments made in respect of other dealings. In any event items must be ascertained and agreed on each side before the balance can be struck and settled. (English case-law discussed.) 54 All. 506, Reversed. An account stated may only take the form of a mere acknowledgment of a debt, and though, if those circumstances amount to a promise, and the existence of a debt may be inferred, that can be rebutted by showing that there is no real debt at all. and deemed to be paid by those on the larger side, and there is a promise for good consideration to pay the balance. It is not necessary, to make out a real account stated, that the debts should be debts in praesenti, or that they should be legal debts. Plaintiff had been employed under the defendant from 1913 to 1928. In the books of the defendant's business there were accounts of drawings by plaintiff from time to time; there was no account on the other side as the plaintiff's salary was never fixed. In 1928, an account was drawn up by the defendant's manager, showing credits for salary and debits for drawings and ending in a balance in favour of the plaintiff.

Held, it was an account stated and involved a promise to pay the balance for good consideration. Where in a simple bond it is provided that, if the monthly interest is not paid or if the principal money lent is not paid at the end of a specified period, the creditor may sue, even though there is a breach of the condition for payment of interest, still that is a matter over which the creditor has a right of waiver and limitation will only begin to run from the period stipulated in the bond for payment. In such cases, the clause regarding right to sue on breach of condition regarding interest is exclusively for the benefit of the creditor. The two Arts. 66 and 68 must be read together in the case of such bonds; and limitation runs either from the date specified for payment of the bond or from the date when the condition as regards payment of interest is broken.

———Art. 75—Advantage of waiver—If available against surety.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 75.

The advantage of the waiver described in Art. 75 can be taken by the creditor against the principal debtor only and not against a person standing surety for payment of the debt, because the former are parties to the transaction, viz, the payment of the sum and the acceptance thereof. The underlying principle is that the debtor is shown an indulgence and he cannot turn round and say that the creditor's remedy has become barred because he was kind to him. But the same cannot be said of the surety. It is to his interest that the debt is cleared as soon as possible and if he is no party to the payment which extends limitation, the cause of action to sue him for the whole money due under the bond arises on the date of the first default. A bond executed on 1st December, 1926, after setting out that the principal was payable by yearly instalments after the expiry of three years (i.e., 1st instalment being payable on 1st December, 1929) went on to provide that interest was payable monthly, and if according to the above conditions "principal and interest" were not paid, then the plaintiff could sue at once for the whole amount. Only a small sum was paid by way of interest. The suit was brought on 22nd November, 1930. The trial Court held that the suit was barred by time as the cause of action for the whole amount arose at the time of the first default in payment of interest. On appeal,

Held, that the condition was that the whole amount would become payable at once, only if there was a default as regards the payment of principal and interest and the word "and" between the words "principal and interest" cannot be read as "or" and so the suit was not time barred. In a simple bond it was provided that the debt was to be paid in four years and that interest was to be paid on the amount every six months. The bond further provided that in case of default in payment of interest of any six monthly period or the amount of principal the creditor had power to realize in any way he liked his entire amount. Default was made in the payment of interest from the very outset.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 75.

Held, the covenant in the bond, entitling the creditor to sue for the amount due on the bond before the expiry of the stipulated period of four years, was for the benefit of the creditor, and it was open to him to waive that option, and to wait for the full period of four years before putting the bond into suit, and that the time for recovery of the debt did not begin to run from the date of the first default. An instalment bond provided that the creditor will be entitled on default of any one instalment to realize the full amount with interest in a lump sum or by miscellaneous amounts. There was default but the debtor made voluntarily miscellaneous payments which the creditor accepted and subsequently sued for the balance on the ground that he was entitled to sue for the whole amount. It was contended for the debtor that the creditor had waived such a right and that he was entitled only to the balance with interest from date of last default.

Held, that unless and until the creditor took some action to enforce either of those penalties, it must be held that as the debtor continued to make payments as if he were acting under the original arrangement and the creditor continued to receive those payments, the creditor was undoubtedly acting as if the arrangement still subsisted, and must be held to have waived his right to renounce the agreement until he gave notice of that renunciation by taking the proceedings that resulted in the suit and that he was entitled only to the balance with interest from date of the last default. Held, that the acceptance of the overdue instalments could not by itself prove waiver, much less waiver of clause relating to right to sue for whole amount but not of clause relating to interest, and that if acceptance of overdue instalments amounted to an implied waiver, it follows that he accepted the earlier payments as having been made to him on the due dates fixed for payment. 5 Bom.H.C.R. 55, Ref. ———Art. 75—Instalment bond—Option to plaintiff—Waiver—Suit for subsequent instalments only—Sustainability.

In order to claim the benefit of Art. 75 it is necessary for the obligee to show that he has waived the benefit of the provision entitling him to sue on an earlier default and that he bases his claim on the subsequent default in respect of which there is no waiver. Waiver in respect of the earlier instalment can be proved in a variety of ways. If the promisee had the option to sue for the entire amount on the occurrence of the first default, but he did not base his claim on that option but instead sued specifically for the last three instalments, basing his cause of action on each of the said defaults, that is sufficiently indicative of his having waived his option. If the last three defaults are in time, he is entitled to a decree for those instalments even though in respect of the first default, the action is out of time. ———Art. 75—Scope and applicability—Instalment bond—Default clause.

It cannot be laid down that whenever a suit is brought on the basis of an instalment bond, no matter for what relief, the mere fact that the bond contains a default clause would make Art. 75 applicable to it. Art. 75 would not be applicable if the nature of the claim or the character of the suit be different, for instance, where some other covenant in the document is being sought to be enforced or where the suit is brought for the recovery of the instalment that has fallen due and before there is such a default as makes the whole amount become due. But where there has been no waiver of the benefit of the provision of a default clause made by the creditor, and owing to a default the whole amount has become due and a suit is brought to recover either the whole of the amount or only a portion of it after the expiry of three years from the date of the default (or six years if the deed be a registered one), then the whole claim is barred by time and the creditor cannot be allowed to say that he should get a portion of that amount because his suit should be treated as one falling under Art. 74. ———Art. 75—Simple money bond—Suit for whole amount barred—Creditor cannot sue for instalments not barred under primary terms of bond—Simple money bond is different from mortgage.

There is a difference in principal between money lent on a mortgage and money lent on a simple money bond. When a creditor lends money on a mortgage, he obtains a long term investment on security and it is not necessarily for his benefit that the money should be repaid before the stipulated term has expired, but in lending money on a simple bond without security he is actuated by a different consideration. If a simple money bond is payable by instalments and provides that if default is made in payment, the whole debt should become due, the suit is governed by Art. 75 of the Limitation Act and the mere failure to sue on default cannot amount to a waiver, and if a suit for the whole amount has become barred under Art 75 the creditor cannot sue for instalments which under the primary terms of the bond would have fallen due after the default. ———Art. 75—Starting point under—Chit fund—Instalment bond—Default—Suit for balance—Limitation.

An instalment bond executed in respect of a chit fund, after referring to the obligation to pay the various instalments that would be due from the executant on various future dates provided. "If at any auction the amount therefor is not paid and default is made therein the amount that should be subscribed thereto as the balance left after deducting the dividend therein, would be paid within a month with profit thereon at 2 per cent. per month, and if default is made therein also, all the amounts that are seen to be paid in future after excluding those that have been paid, till then, would be paid with profit," etc. Default was committed, and a suit was filed for the balance due. There was no question of waiver.

———Art. 75—Waiver—Acceptance of overdue instalment—Effect of.

Where the debtor agrees to pay the debt in instalments and there is a stipulation to the effect that in case of default in paying any one instalment, the whole amount would fall due, the acceptance of an overdue instalment by the creditor amounts to waiver of the right to claim, the entire debt, provided it can be definitely proved that the payment has been made towards the liquidation of that particular instalment and ex-necessitate the whole sum due is paid. But a payment towards the reduction of the general debt can on no account be considered as waiver because it is not the acceptance of any specified instalment. Where therefore a creditor waives his right to take advantage of the forfeiture clause with regard to the first three instalments and brings his suit for recovery of the whole of the balance within three years from the date when the fourth instalment falls due, his suit is within time. ———Art. 75—Waiver—Proof of—Acceptance of overdue instalments.

In the case of instalment bonds where the whole amount becomes exigible on default of instalment or instalments, the acceptance of an overdue instalment or mere forbearance to sue by itself does not amount to waiver. The question whether there is waiver or not depends on the attending circumstances of the act claimed as a waiver in each particular case. Where there is no evidence either that the debtors requested the creditors to excuse the default or that the payment was accepted as a consequence of waiver, the suit filed more than 3 years from the date of the first default cannot be saved from the bar of limitation by a plea of waiver. ———Art. 75—Waiver—Proof—Acceptance of overdue instalments—Right of suit on subsequent default.

Where money is payable by instalments subject to a condition that the whole amount remaining due will become payable upon non-payment of any instalment, the creditor is not bound to enforce the condition, but may accept payment of instalments after due date—thus impliedly waiving his right—and may sue upon a subsequent default of any future instalment. It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what would or would not constitute a waiver. ———Art. 75—"Waives the benefit"—Meaning of—Mere inaction or omission to sue—If waiver.

The words "waives the benefit" in Art. 75 do not mean the same thing as availing oneself of the equitable doctrine of waiver, for which either fresh consideration, a fresh agreement or something amounting to an estoppel is necessary. That doctrine is invoked against a creditor, whereas the waiver of the benefit spoken of in Art. 75 is something exercised for the benefit of the creditor and not against him. The waiver, therefore, may be a purely one-sided act and need not be for consideration proceeding from the debtor. The waiver may be by expression of an intention to waive the benefit either by communication to the debtor or by any other overt act. Waiver is a mixed question of law and fact and it depends on the circumstances of each case. It necessarily follows that a mere inaction or omission to sue within the prescribed period cannot amount automatically to a waiver within the meaning of the third column of this article. To hold so would make this article nugatory and the first portion of the column altogether superfluous. Then in every case where there has been an omission to sue, there would necessarily be a waiver inferred as a matter of law and no further question of limitation would arise. ——Art. 80—"Became payable"—Mortgage suit—Application for personal decree.

There were two mortgages between the same parties, one dated 20th February, 1902 and the other dated 8th September, 1903, the mortgagor promising to pay the amount in eight years. There was a further provision that if the interest for one complete year remained unpaid, the creditors were to have power to recover the interest and also were at liberty to recover the principal and interest without having any regard "for the stipulated period." Interest was not paid and there was default at the expiry of one year on account of both these mortgage deeds. There was an acknowledgment of both these mortgage debts on 3rd March, 1906, which gave a fresh start for the purpose of limitation. One consolidated suit was filed on 22nd February, 1916, to recover the amounts due on both these documents and in 1917, the claim was decreed. On 20th February, 1929, after all the mortgaged properties had been sold there still remained a balance over Rs. 2,000 to be realised. The mortgagees accordingly filed an application on 21st August, 1929, under O. 34, R. 6 for a personal decree against the mortgagors.

Held, that the limitation for a decree under O. 34, R. 6, commenced to run not after the expiry of one year within which the mortgagor continued default for payment of interest, but it commenced to run after the expiry of eight years' term stipulated in the deed. In execution of a money decree, a house belonging to the judgment-debtor was purchased by the father of the defendant and the father of the plaintiffs each contributing one half of the consideration. In 1914, the defendant's father sold his share also to the plaintiff's father for Rs. 8,175. The sale-deed provided that in case, any loss was caused to the vendee in any suit brought in respect of the property by a third party, the vendor would be responsible to the extent of his half share. The son of the judgment debtor brought a suit and got a decree in 1916 declaring that his one half share in the property was not affected by the execution sale. The plaintiff's father and the defendant's father thereupon brought a suit for partition and a decree was therein passed in 1924 declaring the vendees to be entitled only to a moiety of the house. The son of the judgment-debtor got possession of his half share in December 1924. The present suit was filed on March 10, 1926, by the plaintiffs for refund of consideration and it was contended by the defendant that the suit was barred under Art. 62.

Held, that the cause of action to recover damages on account of the covenant for indemnity in the sale-deed arose only when the plaintiffs were dispossessed, i.e., in December, 1924, and not when the son of the judgment-debtor filed a suit or got a decree, that the suit was governed by Art. 83 read with Art. 116 and that the suit was in time. 31 Mad. 452, foll.; 26 Bom. 750, dist. A suit by a commission agent to recover loss on the transactions entered into on behalf of his constituents is governed by Art. 83 and time would begin to run when the plaintiff is actually damnified. The right to indemnification though recognized by statute (S. 222 of the Indian Contract Act) is the necessary consequence of the agency contract. The contract to indemnify under Art. 83 need not be by express stipulation, and may be either imposed by statute or implied or inferred in virtue of the jural relations of the parties. Art. 65 would not apply unless there is an agreement between the parties to pay the loss immediately on its being ascertained and in the absence of any specified time or specified contingency, Art. 65 would not apply. When the commission agent allocates the cross-contracts to himself, it may be said that he is damnified on the day when the cross-contracts were entered into. If, on the other hand, he enters into cross contracts with others, it cannot be said that the loss has necessarily occurred to the commission agent on the day on which such cross-contracts were entered into. 16 C.W.N. 1040, Ref. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 84.

If a portion of the purchase-money is left with a vendee for payment, to a creditor of the vendor, and no time is fixed for payment, there is an implied agreement on the part of the vendee to pay the amount due to the creditor either forthwith or within a reasonable time. If the vendee commits a breach of the implied agreement by failing to pay the amount left with him by the vendor for payment to the third party, he is bound in law to indemnify the vendor for any damage sustained by the vendor, in consequence of the breach of agreement on his part. The suit by a vendor in such cases is not for the return of the unpaid purchase money that the vendee failed to pay, but is to enforce the implied contract of indemnity the breach of which was committed by the vendee by failing to pay the third party and comes within the purview of Art. 83. The time against the plaintiff in such a suit does not begin to run till he "is actually damnified". Hence where the vendor himself pays the debt, limitation for a suit against the vendee runs from the date of such payment, and not from the date of sale. In order to prove a mutual account it is necessary to establish mutual dealing between the parties. There can be no mutual account unless each party has a right to demand the fulfilment of certain obligations. ———Art. 85—Mutual account—Test.

The question whether the dealings with which a particular case is concerned can be described as mutual, open and current, must depend upon the general nature of the account and not upon some casual entries. It is not the number of the entries alone that determines the question, for, cases may be conceived where though the items giving rise to reciprocal demands are very few yet the account possesses the essential attribute of mutuality. Where the accounts extending over several years showed that there were sales by the plaintiff creating obligations on the defendant's part and payments were made from time to time by the defendant in discharge of the amounts due by him and there were also two items of sale made by the defendant to the plaintiff after the accounts were practically closed and there was not a single debit entry made against the defendant thereafter.

Held, that the two sales by the defendant were casual merely and not such as would imply a regular course of reciprocal dealings and that on the facts taken as a whole, the test of mutuality was clearly wanting. nature of the dealings which is the true criterion and the nature of the dealings may establish mutuality without the balance ever having shifted at all, or may negative mutuality even where there is a shifting balance. ———Art. 85—Mutual, open and current account—Test.

Where there is no open account on the date of suit, the plaintiff cannot sue on a mutual account and claim the benefit of Art. 85.

Per Rangnekar, J.—The question whether an account is mutual, open and current so as to attract the operation of Art. 85 is one of fact and must depend upon the nature of the dealings between the parties, nature of the entries and other relevant circumstances. In order that an account should be mutual, there must be dealings between the parties and such dealings must be capable of giving rise to independent obligations on each side of the account at any given period or stage. One test commonly applied is the possibility of shifting balances sometimes in favour of one party and sometimes in favour of the other. But that test is not conclusive or decisive of the matter. The real test is whether the dealings between the parties are of such a nature that the balance might so shift. An account current means a running account that is, an account which is continued and not stopped or closed. If the account is running, that is to say, if it is unclosed, then it is open and current. Mere cessation of dealings between the parties, however, does not mean that the account is closed. The real question in each case would be what is the intention of the parties. (*Beaumont, C. Held, that (i) the words "pending action" referred only to a pending suit and not to steps which the Compauy might take in the investigation of the claim; (ii) that the clause only provided that the Company shall not be liable if the claim was made more than twelve months from the date of the loss and not that the insured should not have the right to sue after twelve months, so it was not against public policy and it did not contravene the provisions of S. 28 of the Contract Act, or Art. 86 of the Limitation Act. ———Art. 89—Agency—Termination—Date—Settlement of accounts—If a condition precedent—Admission of liability after limitation—Effect of.

An agency terminates when the agent ceases to represent the principal and in the case of an agent for sale of goods, it terminates when the goods are sold, though the agent may still be liable in respect of acts done by him as agent, he may be under liability to pay some money to the plaintiff. It is not necessary that he must settle his accounts and pay the money due by him to make the agency terminate. Therefore a suit brought after three years from the date when the agency terminated is barred under Art. 89 of the Limitation Act. Even if the ex-agent admits in such a suit his liability to a certain extent, no relief can be granted to the principal on the basis of that admission, because, once the claim is barred it is barred entirely and no such separation of the claim can be made for the purposes of limitation. ———Art. 89—Applicability—Dissolution of partnership—Subsequent agreement—Relationship of principal and agent—Suit for accounts—Limitation.

After a dissolution of partnership, an agreement was entered into by the partners to the effect that the two partners, as mentioned in the agreement, were to collect the outstandings of the partnership as trustees and to deposit the amount in a Bank after paying off the partnership liabilities and to share it equally. Then a suit had been instituted for rendition of accounts of the moneys realized as per agreement.

Held, that under the abovementioned circumstances the suit was governed by Art. 89 and not by Art. 106 of the Act, because by virtue of the said agreement, the trustee partners were the agents of the partnership for recovering the assets, and therefore the suit was essentially between a principal and an agent and for accounts. The agreement had created a modified form of relationship of principal and agent between the parties quite apart from that of the original agreement of partnership, that had been dissolved. ———Art. 89—Starting point under—Termination of agency—What constitutes.

An agency is terminated when the agent ceases to represent the principal even though his liability in respect of acts done by him may continue. The question as to when the agent is to get his arrears of salary or under what conditions, viz., whether only on getting his accounts passed, has nothing to do with the question of termination of the agency. Where an agent appointed specially to carry on the principal's business at a particular place for a particular period, handed over charge to his successor appointed by the principal and left the place and appeared before the principal sometime later for getting the balance of salary due to him and for having his accounts passed.

Held, that the agent ceased to represent the principal in respect of the agency after he handed over charge to his successor and that the period of limitation under Art. 89, commenced to run from that date and not from the date the agent appeared before the principal for the purpose of getting the balance of salary and having his accounts passed. A suit by a minor for a declaration than an ex parte decree passed against him is null and void on the ground that the guardian ad litem was guilty of gross negligence, is governed by Art. 120, Art. 95 which refers to a suit for setting aside a decree obtained by fraud is not applicable to such a suit. The cause of action cannot be held to arise the moment the decree is passed, but it arises only when the gross negligence which entitles the minor to have the decree set aside becomes known to him. The suit may therefore be instituted within six years of the date when he has such knowledge. Whether Art. 95 or 115 applies to a suit for compensations against a pretended agent under S. 235 of the Contract Act, the period of limitation is three years. The date from which limitation starts is the date on which the plaintiff has noticed that the implied agency did not exist, but it must be an effective notice. Where a Mahomedan son, who is not the authorized agent of his father, by mortgaging his father's land holds himself out to be an agent, the limitation for a suit for compensation starts from the date on which the father obtains a decree in a suit for possession of the mortgaged property and not from the date of institution of suit. Though the plaintiff knew that the father repudiated the agency directly he instituted his suit, he was in possession of the land and it was not until a decree was obtained that he suffered any loss. The representative of the mortgagee received from the representative of the mortgagor a sum of money and executed a redemption deed agreeing to deliver possession forthwith. In that deed the former further stipulated that, if any difficulty was experienced by the latter in obtaining possession they would take necessary steps or recoup him. Possession was not delivered and a week after the deed certain third persons asserted right to the property as donees from the mortgagee. Thereupon the mortgagor's representative sued to recover possession. It was held that the plaintiff could redeem only on payment of the money once again to the third parties. The decision was upheld in appeal. The plaintiff thereupon sued to recover the amount he has already paid to the mortgagee with interest and the expenses of the prior litigation.

Held, that the suit was governed by Art. 97 and not Art. 62 of the Limitation Act because the suit was based on failure of consideration of an existing contract.

sued for the money lent urging that the suit was within three years of their actual abandoing and leaving the land.

Held, that in a suit of this sort, it was for the plaintiffs to show that they had come to Court within three years of time beginning to run against them. In the above case, the date on which consideration failed under Art. 97, which governed this case, was the date on which the plaintiffs ceased to be in possession as mortgagees under the instrument or in other words, the date from which their possession became that of trespassers as opposed to their holding under an existing title. That when the plaintiff obtained possession and was subsequently dispossessed, time began to run from the date of dispossession. The words "date of failure of consideration" show that the date to be taken was the date on which plaintiff ceased to derive any benefit from the transfer. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 103.

In the case of monthly wages, the wages accrue and become due in law on the final day of the month, and the period of limitation for recovery of arrears of monthly wages runs under Art. 102 of the Limitation Act from that date and not from the date of termination of service. ———Art. 103—Prompt dower—Suit for—Demand—Necessity for—Evidence of.

Limitation for a suit for dower is governed by Art. 103; it is three years from the date when the dower becomes payable. Although prompt dower may be demanded at any time after the marriage, the wife is under no obligation to make such demand at any specified time during coverture. It is only upon her making such demand that it becomes payable. The demand must be specific and not conditional or ambiguous. No amount of opposition on the husband's part would be sufficient to constitute a cause of action, unless the wife had made a previous demand. 8 All. 149; 2 I.A. 235 (P.C.) and 63 P. R. 1892, Appl. A jirga was sent to a woman who had applied for execution of a maintenance decree against her husband with the idea of bringing about her return to the husband and inducing her to live with him. She expressed possible readiness to accompany her husband if he would pay her the dower.

Held, that there was not a definite and specific demand for dower so as to set the statute of limitation running against the wife. The jirga was in no way primarily concerned with the dower. ———Art. 104—Starting point—Divorce—Talak pronounced in absence of wife and later communicated to her.

It is a part of the Mahomedan Law that, so far as a claim for dower is concerned, the marriage is dissolved only when it comes to the wife's notice, and there is nothing in Art. 134 against that rule. So a suit brought by a Mahomedan wife for deferred dower is in time if within three years from the date when the talak pronounced in her absence by her husband was communicated to her, though it may be more than three years from the date of the pronouncement. In a ptevious suit between the parties for accounts of a dissolved partnership, there was decree in favour of the plaintiff on the basis of a report by a commissioner who went into the accounts and found the amounts due to the respective parties. A defendant in that action who remained ex parte therein and did not ask for a decree in his favour subsequently sued for the amount which was found due to him as per accounts of the commissioners in the former suit,

Held, that the claim was not analogous to one arising out of an adjustment of partnership accounts; that the suit did not involve or require the kind of accounts-taking usually directed in a case of the ordinary accounting kind; and that the suit was therefore not governed by Art. 106. A suit was instituted for recovery of possession of land on the strength of a certain provision in the partition deed which was said to have been confirmed by subsequent oral agreement. The provision in question was to the effect that if there was any inequality discovered afterwards in the share allotted by the partition deed, which, according to the partition deed, were to be enjoyed separately thereafter, the person who had excess land in his possession was to make good the deficit in the other share by giving a sufficient portion of land from a certain field adjoining the latter's share therein. In a suit for recovery of such land, held, that the mere discovery of an inequality did not have the effect in law of putting an end to the separate ownership created or brought into being by the partition deed of 1914, and of giving rise to a different kind of ownership in respect of the same property, namely, joint ownership. ———Art. 116—Direction to purshaser to pay off vendor's creditor—Default by purchaser—Decree obtained by creditor and vendor's properties sold in execution—Suit by vendor for damages—Starting point.

Where the purchaser under a registered deed of sale undertakes to satisfy a mortgage debt of the vendor with part of the purchase-money, there is implied in that agreement an agreement to indemnify the vendor against losses which may be caused by the action taken by the creditor on default of payment by the purchaser. Such an agreement to indemnity can be said to be broken only when the vendor is compelled to pay the creditor himself or (as in the present case) his property is sold in execution of a decree obtained by the creditor. Where, therefore, after the sale of his properties in execution in consequence of the default of the purchaser, the vendor brings a suit against the purchaser for return of the purchase-money reserved with the latter, the suit being based on the implied contract of indemnity, the starting point of limitation is the date of the sale of the properties in execution when the vendor actually suffered loss and not the date of deed of sale executed in favour of the defendant, 49 All. 693; 33 Bom.L.R. 136 and 8 Pat. 860, Foll. ———Arts. 116, 97 and 115—Distinction in the applicability of the articles—Lease—Failure to deliver possession—Suit for recovery of nazarana.

Where Arts. 115 and 116 apply the very basis of the suit is that the contract has been broken, is no longer in existence and damages are sought. Art. 97, on the other hand applies when the plaiiff says the contract is still good and subsisting and an event contemplated by the contracting parties has happened, that is to say, the possible future liability of the plaintiff to enjoy the property, and the plaintiff relies upon the express or implied contract on the part of the defendant that on the happening of such circumstances the defendant will pay back the money which he has already received. Under Arts. 115 and 116 the events subsequent to contract are immaterial while under Art. 97 they are material. The existence of a registered document is the item of difference between Arts. 115 and 116. The difference, however, between Arts. 117 and 97 has nothing whatever to do with the form of the contract. It is rather to do with the question of the date of the failure of consideration and it is quite immaterial in discussing whether Art. 97 or Art. 116 applies to ascertain whether the contract was effected by means of a registered instrument or not. A suit to recover the nazarana paid by plaintiffs, the defendants have broken the contract to place the plaintiff in possession is governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 97. (*Courtney-Terrell, C. ——Art. 116—Execution sale—Sale by auction purchaser—Sale deed laying down that vendor do give plaintiff lawful delivery after getting sale certificate from Court—Default—Adverse possession by judgment-debtor—Suit for refund of consideration—Starting point of limitation.

The defendants were the auction purchasers in an execution sale on a decree in a different suit but had not got the lawful delivery of the property sold. The plaintiff got a sale deed of the said property from the defendants. The judgement debtor in decree on which execution sale was held pleaded adverse possession. The plaintiff then sued the defendants for the recovery of the property or return of the consideration paid by him to the defendants. There was a clause in the sale deed as under: "We shall put in an application for delivery and give delivery to you. Afterwards we shall bring from the Court the said receipt for delivery, and the certificate and give the same to you. You will have to bear the charges for the said delivery."

Held, that Art. 116 applied to such cases. That no time was fixed within which delivery was to be given, and although it was true that the plaintiff might at any time after the execution of the sale deed have sued to enforce delivery under it, so that time would have begun to run for such a suit from the date of contract, yet under the circumstances of the case, the cause of action for refund of the purchase money would not have simultaneously arisen but would only have become available when the vendors became incapable of carrying out their undertaking Before that occassion arose, the vendees could not have sued, alleging a breach of the contract of title for the return of the purchase money. 38 Mad. 887 and 26 Bom. 750, Dist. The defendant leased some property to the plaintiff for a period of 7 years to run from 1st July, 1920, to 30th June, 1927. The lessee gave the lessor an advance of Rs. 200 which under the terms of the lease was to be adjusted towards the last year's rent, that of 1926-27. The plaintiff however was not given possession of the property and thereupon sued for the return of the advance on 27 6 1927.

Held, that the breach of the covenant to lease occurred from the commencement of the lease and that the suit was barred whether Art. 97 or 116 applied.

Held also, that such a breach of the covenant to deliver possession was not a continuing breach.

——Art. 116—Mortgage—Personal relief—Limitation—Starting point.

In a rehan bond there was a personal covenant to repay on a certain date and in addition, there was a clause regarding dispossession which gave the mortgagee the right to realise from the mortgaged property from the person of the mortgagor and from his other properties if he was dispossessed from the rehan property. The mortgagee sued basing his cause of action on dispossession and after sale of the mortgaged property in execution of his decree applied for a personal decree for the balance.

Held, that the article of the Limitatian Act applicable to a claim based on the personal covenant to recover the balance due to the mottgagee after the sale of the mortgaged property is Art. 116 which provides a period of six years from the due date and not Art. 66 or 67 and that on the mortgage deed as it stood the dispossession was as much a cause of action in a registered deed giving rise to limitation under Art. 116 as the cause of action of failure to pay on the date fixed in the bond and that the starting point for limitation was the date of dispossession. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 116.

On 8th April, 1920, W executed a registered sale-deed of survey No. 2 1 in favour of A. He was placed in possession and granted a five years' oral lease to V who remained in possession until he was ejected by W on the 11 April, 1921. A brought a suit against W and his lunatic brother R for declaration of his title to the field and for possession with effect from January, 1926, when the lease which he had granted to V was due to expire. The Court on 15th September, 1925, held that the field was the joint family property of W and R and that the sale was without legal necessity and therefore not binding on R's share. The consideration for the sale was Rs. 4,000, but the Court held that only Rs. 2 795-14 0 had been paid and as A had already paid more than half the consideration for the whole field, he was entitled to possession of a half share without further payment A then brought a suit on 15th September, 1928, against W for the recovery of Rs. 795-14 0, which was the amount he had paid in excess for the value of the half share, and Rs. 280 as interest thereon.

Held, that the filing of written statement by R claiming that he was entitled to a half share in the property was not sufficient to start limitation running. The question whether there had been a failure of consideration because W had no complete title depended on whether the sale was made for legal necessity or not, and that point was not decided until the suit was decided. The suit was not therefore barred by limitation.

Held, further, that it was not necessary to consider whether limitation would run from the date of the decision in the first Court or from the date of decision in the appellate Court. Where, under a registered deed of sale, the vendee, with whom a portion of the purchase-money had been left, had entered into an express contract to indemnify his vendor, the combined effect of Art. 116, read with Art. 83 of the Limitation Act gives a period of six years for instituting a suit, time running from the date when the plaintiffs were actually damnified. It is governed not by Art. 111 but by Art. 116, the terminus a quo is not the date of the execution of the sale-deed but the date on which the contract is deemed to have been broken, this date being either when there was a repudiation of the liability under it or when the contract had become impossible of performance on account of the vendor's debt having been satisfied. 2 L. 316; 55 B. 565; 8 Pat. 860, Foll. An order made by a liquidation Court is not a decree though it is enforceable in the same manner as if it was a decree. Where in a Foreign State there is a suit and in that suit a judgment is given and from that judgment, appeal is made, which appeal is dismissed, the "judgment in that suit" is the judgment of the appellate Court for the purpose of Art. 117 and not the judgment of the Court of first instance. The test of finality is the treatment of the judgment by the foreign tribunal as a res judicata and as the decree of the first Court which is taken on appeal to the appellate Court is not res judicata but on the other hand its finality is destroyed by the appeal, the judgment of the appellate Court alone is the final and the only decree for purposes of execution. *Nouvion v. ——Art, 120—Accounts—Claim against trustee.

The article applicable to an equitable claim against a trustee, liable to account, for an account and ascertainment of what may be due, is Art. 120 and not Art. 62, and limitation does not begin to run until the "right to sue" accrues, i.e., until there is an accrual of the right asserted in the suit and its infringement or at least a clear and unequivocal threat to infringe that right by the defendant. Consequently the plea of limitation fails when the defendant is unable to specify the particular date at which the claim to an account was denied by him. 11 I.A. 59 and 59 M.L.J. 621 (P.C.), Foll. They set up their own exclusive ownership of area in question and denied its character as joint property of the parties. In a suit for injunction by the excluded co-proprietors to restrain the defendants from preventing the plaintiffs from using the common property for the specific purpose for which it had originally been set apart,

Held, that though the cases in which the dispute was between the person who had given the use of his property to another for a specific purpose and this other had perverted it to an unauthorised purpose would be governed by Art. 32, yet in those in which, as in the present case both the plaintiff and the defendant were co-owners of a plot of land and had set it apart for their common use for a specific purpose but which the defendant had diverted to an unauthorised purpose and excluded the plaintiff from using it for the purpose for which it was originally intended, the real cause of action is the ouster of the plaintiff from the common property and not its perverted user and a suit to restrain the defendants from excluding the plaintiffs is governed by Art. 120 and not Art. 32. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 120—Co-owners.

In cases where the litigating parties are co-owners or co-tenants having an equal right to use property for a specified purpose, the presumption of law is that the possession of one is the possession of all. Every such person is seized of the property per my et per tout, and anything short of denial of title cannot destroy the plaintiff's right. To suits between co-owners or co-tenants inter se, where the title of one is denied by the other, Art. 144 or Art. 120 would apply, according as the relief claimed is one for possession or injunction. ———Art. 120—Co owners—Mahomedan co-sharers—Suit for accounts.

In a partition suit between the co-sharers of a Mahomedan family, a female co sharer asked for accounts and profits of her share from the managing co sharer for a period of ten years.

Held, that the right to sue was a continuing one and arose when there was a demand and a refusal for accounts and profits. In this case the refusal was before one year of the suit and hence the suit was not barred under Art. 120. That the plaintiff could claim an account for the whole period of ten years, because if the suit had been brought within six years after the demand and refusal then the person liable may be asked to account for the entire period of his management even if it exceeds six years. The fresh act must be on the part of the defendants which can be said to amount to a fresh invasion of the plaintiff's right or a fresh attempt to cast a cloud on the plaintiff s title and not merely a denial of the plaintiff's title when the plaintiff attempts to assert his title because this denial would be merely a continuation of the denial made long ago. A suit by some of the members of a joint Hindu family against a purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree against another member for their share of the profits during the period they were kept out of possession by him is governed by Art. 120 and not Art. 109 of the Limitation Act. As the purchaser of the mortgagor's interest is entitled to his share in the property, the parties are really in the position of co-owners. The first column of Art. 109 speaks of property "belonging" to the plaintiffs and also of the profits thereof having been "wrongfully" received by the defendant. Neither of the conditions assumed here can properly apply as between co-owners, because in such a case the property cannot be said to belong to the plaintiffs alone nor could the profits received by the other co-owners be held to have been wrongfully received by them. ——Art. 120—Record of rights—Joint family property—Father's gift to stranger—Declaratory suit by sons in possession—Cause of action—Entries in revenue records in favour of defendant—Suit to establish title.

The father of the plaintiffs made a gift of lands belonging to the joint family to a stranger in 1915, a mutation of which was granted. In 1924, the donee sold the property to another, who applied for the land to be partitioned, when the plaintiffs who were in possession raised an objection that the gift was invalid. The plaintiffs were then directed by the revenue authorities to establish their claim in a Civil Court as the entries in the revenue records were in favour of the defendant vendee. They accordingly instituted the present suit in 1928. The suit was resisted inter alia on the ground of limitation.

Held, that as the plaintiffs were in possession of the property in suit, they were not obliged to sue for a declaration of title on the first or on each succeeding denial of their title, and that it was open to them to treat the gift as a nullity and not to go to Court for the purpose of setting aside the gift but that they were forced to go to Court as a result of the partition proceedings, and ——Art. 120—Refund—Sale by guardian—Money left with vendee to be paid to minors on attaining majority—Suit by guardian as reversioner claiming the money—Limitation.

Plaintiff, acting as the guardian of two minor girls, sold a certain property. It was stipulated that the sale amount should remain with the vendee who was to pay it to minors on their attaining majority. One of the girls while still a minor married. Under the customary law which governed the family of the vendors, she lost her right in the purchase money which devolved on her sister with the result that the whole of the said purchase-money became the property of the younger girl. She also died while she was a minor. The plaintiff, as reversioner, became entitled to the whole of the purchase money which was lying with the vendee defendant and sued for the same.

Held, that Art. III did not apply because the plaintiff was not the vendor of the property, but had acted merely as the de facto guardian of the two minor girls under the customary law, that the suit was governed by Art. 120 and that limitation ran from the date of

B, the head of a mutt, having a number of subordinate mutts executed a will by which he appointed two of his disciples, defendant No 1, and one BG to succeed him, dividing the mutts and the properties between them. On B's death disputes arose which were, however, amicably settled, each of them succeeding as provided for by the will of B. On the death of BG later on, he was succeeded in his office by the plaintiff Defendant No. 1 filed a suit against the plaintiff disputing the validity of his appointment by BG, but the suit was ultimately dismissed on appeal by the Privy Council. Defendant No. 1 was subsequently convicted on a charge of rape and sentenced to imprisonment, but he had prior to the conviction appointed the defendant No. 2 as his successor. Plaintiff, describing himself as Mohunt and shebait of all the mutts instituted a suit against the defendants, alleging that he was the rightly appointed Mohunt and that he as the shebait of all the idols was entitled to possession of the properties and praying for possession thereof as Mohunt and shebait. He did not pray for the removal of the defendants, such a prayer being unnecessary. He also disputed the validity of the will executed by B and the right of defendant No. 1 to hold under it and to nominate defendant No. 2. The suit was instituted within 12 years of B's death.

Held, (1) the suit was not barred by limitation having been instituted within 12 years of the death of B, that being the earliest point of time at which the adverse possession of the defendant No. 1 could have commenced as against the shebait of the idols represented by the plaintiff; (2) that Art. 124 did not apply to the case, as the suit was not one for the possession of a hereditary office as contemplated by that article; (3) nor would Art. 120 apply, because the plaintiff did not want any relief in any shape other than a recovery of possession of the properties in his capacity as Mohunt and shebait of his idols mentioned in the plaint. It was found that the site of the property was the property of the first marriage, but that the house thereon was built after the second marriage. Respondent pleaded that the property formed the estate of his father and mother and that consequently he had acquired a vested right in it upon his father's remarriage in 1915.

Held, that the claim preferred by the respondent was governed by Art. 123 of the Limitation Act and being barred by limitation long before the date of suit, had been extinguished by the time he asserted it in Court. U TUN HLAING v. MAUNG SEIN WIN. 158 I C. 118 = 8 R.R. 149.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 125.

Although for the purpose of determining whether a widow possessed unrestricted power of alienation in the property which had descended to her from her husband, it is immaterial whether the property was ancestral or self-acquired in his hands, but the question is of great importance for ascertaining the period of limitation governing a declaratory suit by a reversioner to challenge the widow's alienation. If the property was ancestral of the husband and the contesting reversioner, there can be no doubt that (Punjab) Act I of 1920 is applicable and the period of limitation is six years. If however the property was non-ancestral, qua the plaintiff, the suit would be governed by Art. 125, Limitation Act. (Tek Chand, J.) SANT SINGH v. HARDIT SINGH. 6 I.R. The gift by a widow of her property in favour of her daughter and the son of the daughter's husband's brother cannot be called a surrender since the second of the donees is a stranger. ———Arts. 128 and 129—Applicability—"Hindu"—Meaning of.

The word "Hindu" in Arts. 128 and 129 of the Limitation Act does not refer to the religious persuasion of the plaintiff. The articles apply where the maintenance is claimed not on the basis of contract but on the basis of status of the plaintiff under the Hindu Law. A suit for maintenance based on an express promise made by the defendants' predecessor in interest is governed by Art. 115, Limitation Act, and not by Arts 128 and 129, though the plaintiff is a Hindu. ———Art. 131—Applicability—Test—Suit for declaration of relationship of landlord and tenant and ejectment.

The test of the proper Article to apply is to consider the facts alleged in the plaint and the remedy granted by the Court. It is not necessarily to be measured by the remedy which the plaintiff may have asked for but which has been refused. It is the duty of the Court to consider the facts and then to give such remedies as are not barred by limitation. Plaintiff sued in Civil Court for a declaration that defendant was an under raiyat under him, that he (defendant) had denied that relationship and refused to pay rent to him and further prayed for his eviction.

Held, the Civil Court had jurisdiction only to decide whether the relationship of landlord and tenant existed but not to grant relief of possession as this was within the jurisdiction of Revenue Court under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act and that the article to be applied for deciding the question of limitation was Art. 131 and not Art. 142 or 143. The fact that a certain co sharer landlord denies the existence of a custom of remission once, in respect of some tenants and not all, cannot destroy the custom; the right if any of the tenants generally cannot be held to be barred by limitation, because there might have been refusal to grant remission under custom in the case of some. Hence suit brought by the tenants under O. 1 R. 8, C.P. The shebait of a temple made certain payments under S. 170-B.T. Act, and sued for the enforcement of a statutory mortgage under S. 171, on the basis of accounts showing the payments made. The payments were made in the years 1914 to 1917, the person making the payment went into possession in 1915 and continued till February, 1926, and sued on the basis of accounts in April 1927.

Held, that no question of limitation arose, and that assuming it arose, Art. 132 of the Limitation Act would apply because the claim was to enforce payment of money charged upon immovable property and the suit was not barred in any event. To such a case the provisions of Arts. 61, 91 and 120 of the Limitation Act have no application. The right of subrogation under S. 92 as well as the rights accruing to a co-mortgagor under S. 95 of that Act arise only on the redemption of the mortgage and not on payment of a portion of the mortgage-money to the mortgagee. Therefore no cause of action on the basis of redemption for recovery of the amount paid on behalf of the co-mortgagors arises in favour of the redeeming co-mortgagor until the date when the mortgage debt is completely liquidated and a suit instituted within twelve years of that date is within time. ———Art. 132—Default clause in mortgage—Time from the exercise of option by mortgagee.

A mortgage bond, under which the principal amount was to be repaid in six years, provided for payment of interest annually and that, in case of default, the mortgagee would be entitled "within and after the expiry of the stipulated period of six years" to realise the entire mortgage-money in a lump sum. No interest was ever paid under the mortgage, and the mortgagee brought a suit to enforce his security within 12 years from the expiry of the stipulated period (six years) but more than 12 years from the first default in the payment of interest.

Held, that the proviso in question was inserted in the mortgage deed exclusively for the benefit of the mortgagee and gave him an option either to enforce his security at once on default by the mortgagor in the payment of the interest or to wait for the full term of the mortgage, and it was not competent to the mortgagor to take advantage of his own default and claim a right to redeem before the expiry of the stipulated term.

Held, accordingly, that the principal money did not become "due" (within the meaning of Art. 132 of the Indian Limitation Act) immediately upon default, but when both the mortgagors right to redeem and the mortgagee's right to enforce his security accrued, and that therefore the suit was well in time under Art. 132. 37 All. 400 and 45 All. 27, Overr. A mortgage bond recited that the principal amount was payable within two years while the interest was payable at the end of each month and in case of default in the payment of interest, compound interest at a higher rate and also the principal and interest was to become payable. Default was made in the payment of even the first instalment of interest.

Held, that the period of limitation for the suit brought by the mortgagee should be computed only from the date of the expiry of the term of the mortgage; the clause empowering the mortgagee to sue on default should be deemed to have been inserted exclusively for his benefit and as such it gave him an option to enforce the security at once or to stand by his investment for the full term of his mortgage. 7 Luck. 442 (P.C.), Foll. ———Art. 132—Mortgage bond—Provision for instalments—Default clause allowing recovery of expired and unexpired instalments in one lump with interest on default—Default—Cause of action for suit—Limitation.

A mortgage bond provided for repayment of the principal amount in 20 instalments, the first of which was to become due in May-June, 1913, and in case of default of any one instalment the mortgagee and his heirs "have and shall have power to recover in a proper way the expired and unexpired instalments in one lump with interest thereon at 1 per cent. per month by sale of the mortgaged properties, etc." No instalments were paid at all and a suit was instituted on the bond on 11-8 1928.

Held, Art. 132 was applicable; that the case was one of the class of cases where the creditor is given a different right for each instalment in respect of which default may be made, the creditor being entitled to take the most recent instalment as that which gives rise to the particular cause of action on which he sues, provided the cause of action arose not more than 12 years before the institution of the suit; that it was not that the same cause of action would arise in respect of each instalment as and when it became due and was unpaid, but the cause of action in respect of any particular instalment was different from that in respect of any other instalments; and that what had to be considered was how much had fallen due and had not been paid and was not barred by limitation; and secondly, how much remained to be paid even though till that moment the instalment had not fallen due; and that the suit was not therefore barred by limitation though instituted more than 12 years after the date when the 1st instalment became due and the 1st default was made. ———Art. 132—Mortgage deed—Default clause—Limitation—Starting point.

Where the term of a mortgage is a period of one year and it is clearly stipulated in the mortgage deed that the principal, interest and compound interest will be paid to the mortgagee on the expiry of one year from the date of the mortgage, a covenant in the deed giving an option to the mortgagee not to wait for the full period of one year and to put the mortgage deed into suit after the expiry of six months in the event of the failure of the mortgagor to pay interest on the expiry of six months, is, at best, an option given to the mortgagee and it is open to the mortgagee not to avail himself of this option and to wait for the full stipulated period of the mortgage. Accordingly a suit for sale on the basis of the mortgage bond filed more than 12 years after the date of the default committed by the mortgagor in the payment of interest but within 12 years from the date of the expiry of one year from the date of the execution of the mortgage deed, is not barred by limitation. A mortgage bond executed on 12th May, 1912, provided that interest would be paid yearly and that the principal would be paid within five years. It further provided as follows:—"In the case of default of payment at the time fixed or on the discovery taking place within the stipulated period of any act of bad faith, then the creditor would be entitled to recover his money principal and interest in any way by filing a suit". The mortgagor failed to pay interest in May, 1913, but the suit was not brought till April, 1929.

Held, that the act of bad faith which the parties had in contemplation was not the mere default in the payment of the annual interest, that there was no default by the mortgagor which would entitle the mortgagee to realise the whole of the mortgage money within the period of five years and that the suit having been brought before 12 years from the expiry of the period of five years was within time. There were two mortgages between the same parties, one dated 20th February, 1902, and the other dated 8th September, 1903, the mortgagor promising to pay the amount in eight years. There was a further provision that if the interest for one complete year remained unpaid, the creditors were to have power to recover the interest and also were at liberty to recover the principal and interest without having any regard "for the stipulated period". Interest was not paid and there was default at the expiry of one year on account of both these mortgage-deeds. There was an acknowledgment of both these mortgage debts on 3rd March, 1906, which gave a fresh start for the purpose of limitation. One consolidated suit was filed on 22nd February, 1916, to recover the amounts due on both these documents and in 1917 the claim was decreed. On 20th February, 1929, ———Art. 132—Suit for foreclosure—Right to foreclose or redeem only after five years under the mortgage deed—Starting point.

If the effect of the clauses in the mortgage deed be that neither the mortgagor had the right to repay the mortgage money and to redeem the mortgaged property nor the mortgagees had the right to recall the mortgage money and to sue for forelosure before the expiry of five years, limitation for a suit for foreclosure is caculated from the first date after the expiry of the five years. ———Art. 132—Suit for redemption—Simple mortgagees in possession as purchasers in execution—Puisne mortgagee's suit barred by limitation—Suit to redeem earlier simple mortgage—Right to possession.

Defendants 1 and 2 were the first and simple mortgagees and the plaintiffs subsequent mortgagees. Defendants 1 and 2 brought a suit to enforce their mortgage and in that suit acquired the property. The plaintiffs were not impleaded in that suit and their right to enforce their mortgage was barred by time under Art. 132 of the Limitation Act and brought a suit to redeem the first mortgages of defendants 1 and 2.

Held, that the effect of the sale was not to convert the defendants into mortgagees in possession, because as simple mortgagee they were not entitled to possession, but to make them the holders of equity of redemption. So even if the plaintiffs were allowed to redeem the defendants, they could only be entitled on payment to the first mortgagee defendants 1 and 2, of what is due on their first mortgage, to take a transfer of the security but without any right to possession. That would not however, help the plaintiffs any way as in enforcing their second mortgage, the bar of limitation would as before apply. ———Art. 132—Time from first default.

A deed of mortgage executed on 2-10 1916 provided that the money should be repaid within 2-10-1920 by instalments of Rs. 3 a month, and if three months' instalments remained unpaid, the mortgagee would have the right either at once to realise the full amount or wait till the expiry of the fixed period. Nothing was paid. The suit was brought on 13-9-1930.

Held, that in such a case the money must be considered to become due at the earliest date when it is possible under the terms of the mortgage to enforce payment thereof, that time began to run from 3-1-1917 when three months' instalments were due and that the suit was out of time, 6 O.W.N. 926, Foll. In 1905 Y acting as the guardian of plaintiffs 1 and 2 had sold the equity of redemption to S. In 1907 S redeemed the mortgage and got possession. In 1924, more than three years after they attained majority, the plaintiffs brought a suit to set aside the sale on the ground that Y had no power to sell the equity of redemption and for taking of accounts on foot of the mortgagee. There was no dispute that the purchase by S of the equity of redemption and his redemption when the mortgagee gave up possession to him were in good faith both on the part of S and on the part of the mortgagee.

Held, (i) Art. 134 was not applicable as the mortgagee did not purport to do anything outside or opposed to his mortgage. It was not a transfer by the mortgagee in the sense in which that word is used in Art. 134. (ii) The purchase by S was in his own absolute right and he had been holding as owner (from 1907 at least) and not on behalf of the mortgagor or mortgagee. A mortgage deed contained a forfeiture clause where by the mortgagees might obtain possession of the land in default of payment of the first or subsequent instalments of interest.

Held, that the payment of interest could not possibly be construed as an acknowledgment of the mortgagee's right to enforce their right to possession under the default clause, and that he had a right to secure possession as soon as the first default occurred, The fact that any subsequent default also gave him a right of possession was not sufficient to prevent time from running against him. 1930 Lah. 327, Rel. on; 1919 Oudh 217, Dist. ———Art. 136—Sale of share in joint property by co-sharer—Co-sharers entitled to possession more than twelve years before—Suit by purchaser—Limitation.

Where a special relationship exists between persons, such as tenants-in common or members of an undivided family, the Court will presume that possession held by one is possession held on behalf of all the co-owners or members of the family. It does not follow that because a tenant in-common is out of possession, time immediately begins to run against him. The possession of one co-owner is in itself rightful and does not imply hostility as would be the possession of a stranger. If a co-tenant were to sell his share in a joint property to a stranger some time after twelve years from the date when he and other co-sharers became entitled to the property, it would not be proper to defeat the right of the purchaser by saying that the suit was barred because his vendor first became entitled to possession on the date on which the co-sharers became entitled to the property. In a suit brought in 1926 by the sajjadanashin to recover possession of the lands, the defendants pleaded adverse possession.

Held, (1) that the defendant's plea of adverse possession was inconsistent with the application of Art. 139; (2) that though at one time 1894, the defendants asserted their title to the lands adversely to the then sajjadanashin, since they did not persist in their contention that they were owners and since after their dismissal from office in 1894, they were content to occupy the position of attendants and servants of the shrine and claimed merely a right as such to render services to the shrine, the possession coupled with the performance of the services was consistent with their being allowed to remain inoccupation by leave and licence of, and not adversely to the sajjadanashin; and (3) that under the circumstances and on the evidence, the defendants had not discharged the onus that lay on them under Art. 144, Limitation Act, of proving the adverse possession relied on by them, and the suit for possession was consequently not barred by limitation. Art. 141 only applies to a suit for recovery of possession in respect of property of which the reversioners were out of possession at the death of the female and which was in the possession of another person from whom they seek to recover it. Where the Court found that the plaintiffs were the nearest reversioners to the last male owner, that on the death of the limited owner in 1902 no one had been in possession, that in 1914 the defendants for the first time during the settlement proceedings got their names entered in respect of those lands,

Held, that the suit brought in 1924 was in time, that the plaintiffs who had the title should be deemed to have been in possession till 1914, that limitation began to run only from that date and that Art.141 was inapplicable to the case. ——Art. 141—Applicability—Re-marriage of widow and property held by mother and daughter jointly—Possession of daughter, when adverse—Suit by reversioner.

A bhagdar in the Broach District died leaving a widow, a mother, and a daughter who, according to a local custom, was disqualified from inheritance. The widow re-married in 1905 and the mother died in 1920. The mother during her lifetime and the daughter lived together and enjoyed the property. In 1925, the plaintiff sued to recover possession of the property as a reversioner to the last made owner. It was contended that the daughter was in adverse possession from the date of the re-marriage of the widow and that the suit was barred by limitation.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 141.

Held, that Art. 141 applied to the suit, that where there was no decree against the widow or other act in law in the widow's lifetime depriving the reversionary heir of his right, the possession of the daughter even if adverse to her grandmother could not be deemed to be adverse to the reversioner who was consequently entitled to bring his suit within twelve years from the date of the widow's death. ——Art. 141—Suit by reversioner—Surrender in favour of daughter—Reversioner's right to sue—Starting point of limitation.

The basis of the doctrine of surrender is the effacement of the widow's interest, and not the ex facie transfer by which such effacement is brought about. There is therefore no difference between surrender to a daughter and surrender to the nearest male reversioner. Where, therefore, a widow made a surrender of her estate in 1884, in favour of her daughter, who died in 1894, the right of the male reversioners to sue arises on the daughter's death and is barred under Art. 141 of the Limitation Act if brought more than 12 years thereafter, though in time if the computation is made from the subsequent death of the widow. 46 All. 59, Appr. ———Art. 141—Talukdari estate—Death of taluqdar—Possession by widow as limited owner—Suit for possession by the next heir—Starting point of limitation.

On the death of the last taluqdar to an estate, succession to which was governed by the terms of the primogeniture sanad, his wife entered into possession of the properties and in the mutation proceedings, the position she claimed was that of a claimant to the estate under S. 22 (7) of the Oudh Estates Act, i.e., as a limited owner. ———Art. 142—Applicability—Suit on basis of title—Art. 144 as the proper Article.

Art. 142 is restricted to suits which are in terms and substance based on the plaintiff's prior possession which he has lost by dispossession or discontinuance of possession. Where the plaintiff sued on the basis of her title acquired by inheritance and she did not allege that she was dispossessed.

———Art. 142—Applicability—Test.

Art. 142 applied only to those cases in which the plaintiffs rely on their possession as opposed to lawful title. If a person though not the owner is, while in the enjoyment of his peaceful possession, ousted, he has a right to claim to be restored to possession. It is to such cases that Art. 142 applies. Under Art. 142 the question of limitation does not depend on the length of the defendant's possession but on the question whether the plaintiff was dispossessed or discontinued his possession. This Article makes no reference to the defendant at all. "Has the plaintiff been dispossessed or discontinued his possession within 12 years" is the sale question. In cases where the plaintiff sues for possession of immovable property both on the ground of title and on the ground of his possession having been disturbed by the defendant if he proves his title, the burden of establishing title by adverse possession lies upon the defendant, and if the defendant succeeds in proving that fact the suit must fail, otherwise the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. To this extent Art. 144 will apply to such a suit but it may be that the plaintiff, though not able to substantiate his title, is in a position to prove his possession and dispossession by the defendant within 12 years. Co-sharer.

———Art. 142—Co-sharer—Conditions.

Art. 142 of the Limitation Act is very general in its scope, and the only conditions necessary are that the suit should be for possession of immovable property and that the plaintiff while in possession of the property must have been dispossessed or must have discontinued his possession. Obviously the word "plaintiff" in this article includes his predecessor-in-title as well. There are no words in this article which would confine its applicability to suits based on possessory title only, or confine it to plaintiffs who claim the property wholly and are not co sharers or co-owners with the defendants. Where therefore a plaintiff who was a co-sharer with some of the defendants who transferred a part of the property to third parties, admits in the plaint that he was dispossessed by the transferees sometime prior to the institution of the suit, Art. 142 applies and not Art. 144. 51 A 1042 and 1933 A.L.J. 105. The owner of an impartible estate made a gift, in June, 1909, of a portion of the estate in favour of his second wife who thereupon entered into possession. The alienation, having been made without obtaining the previous sanction of the Commissioner, was void ab initio under sub section (3) of section 12-A of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876). The alienor died in February, 1924, and his successor in title brought the present suit in February, 1925, to recover possession from the alienee,

Held, that it was not a case of adverse possession falling within Art. 144 of the Limitation Act, but one of discontinuance of possession within Art. 142, and that limitation ran forthwith from the date of the alienation in 1909. Where the plaintiff claims the legal title to lands in dispute and she says that the defendants have entered upon these lands and interrupted her possession, to enable her to sue for recovery, it is incumbent upon her to show not only that she has a good legal title but also that the date of dispossession is less than 12 years from the date of filing the suit. As the defendants are claiming a title which really runs back to a date before the plaintiff claims a title which her predecessors-in-interest acquired, so they are not claiming ownership through possession which is, or became at some indeterminate date, adverse to the title of the plaintiff and therefore the plaintiff's suit is governed by Art. 142 and not by Art. 144 A.I.R. 1916 P.C. 21: 14 Bom. 454 and A. In a suit falling under Art.142 the fact that the date of dispossession is not given or proved is immaterial, for, if the plaintiff can show possession within twelve years, the fact that he is not in possession at the time he institutes his suit establishes that some time in the interval he has been dispossessed. 122 I.C. 81, Foll. Per Mukerji, J.—A mere denial of title of the plaintiff on the part of a defendant who is a co-sharer of the plaintiff, and whose possession may be regarded as plaintiff's possession, will not amount to plaintiff's dispossession and the plaintiff's proper remedy will be by a suit for a declaration of title. Where the defendant's possession could be treated in law as plaintiff's possession, but the defendant subsequently transfers possession to a party whose possession cannot be any longer treated in law as the possession of the plaintiff, the plaintiff will have to regard himself as dispossessed and will have to bring his suit within twelve years of the transfer. This of course presupposes that the transfer is brought to the notice of the plaintiff and that the transfer is under circumstances which do not imply in law a continuance of the possession of the plaintiff. Distinction between Arts. 142 and 144.

by the allegations in the plaint, where the plaintiff asserts that he had been dispossessed. But that does not necessarily conclude the matter, because the question of the onus to be determined upon the allegations of the plaintiff and the defendant. If the defendant admitted that he had dispossessed the plaintiff, then quite clearly Art. 142 would apply; but if, he asserted, that the plaintiff had never been in possession, that he (defendant) had been there and had been prescribing against him (plaintiff), the case does not come under Art. 142. It is a case which is otherwise provided for by the Limitation Act and therefore Art. 144 applies. (Wort, J.) KANCHAN TELI v. MOGA MAHTON. 152 I.C. 906=7 R.P. 271=16 Pat. ——Arts. 142 and 144 — Distinction between Arts. 142 and 144.

The essential difference between Art. 142 and Art. 144 of the Limitation Act is that when a plaintiff is suing for possession on the basis of dispossession, the burden lies on him to show that the date of his dispossession or discontinuance of possession, which gave him the cause of action for the suit, was within twelve years of the suit; while if the suit is not for possession based on the ground of dispossession, but is a suit for possession of immovable property not especially provided for in any other Article of the Act, then on proof of title the plaintiff's suit cannot be dismissed until the defendant further establishes his adverse possession for more than twelve years. Ordinarily an owner of property starts with the presumption in his favour that he is in possession of his property. But where the plaintiff admits that he has been dispossessed by the defendant or, at any rate, it is found in the case that he has been dispossessed and is not in possession at the time when he brings the suit, then he cannot start with such presumption and he would have no right of action unless he brings his suit within twelve years of the date on which he was dispossessed or when he discontinued his possession. The burden of showing that his date was within twelve years of the suit is on the plaintiff. If the Court after considering all the evidence and circumstances were to record a finding that the plaintiff had failed to prove his possession, constructive or actual, within twelve years, then the suit must fail, even though the Court does not record a finding that the defendant had established his adverse possession for more than twelve years. ——Art. 142—Distinction between Arts. 142 and 142.

Art. 144 applies to a suit in which the plaintiff sues for possession of immovable property on the basis of his title and in such a suit if the plaintiff proves his title he is entitled to a decree, unless the defendant succeeds in establishing his adverse possession for a period of more than 12 years. Art. 142 is restricted to cases in which the relief for possession sought by the plaintiff is based on possessory title; and the burden of proving in such cases that the plaintiff was in possession and was dispossessed within 12 years from the date of the suit lies on the plaintiff. 1929 A.L.J. 1106, Foll. ——Arts. 142 and 144—Distinction between Arts. 142 and 244—Scope and applicability—Duty to scrutinize pleadings.

In all cases in which the applicability of Art. 142 or Art. 144 is in controversy, it is necessary to scrutinize the pleadings of the plaintiff and to ascertain exactly the allegations on which the plaintiff has come into Court and the reliefs sought by him. Sometimes the pleas raised in defence by the defendant are also relevant to the enquiry. Where the plaintiff comes into Court on the distinct allegation that the property in suit is owned and possessed by him and that some time ago the defendant forcibly and unlawfully took possession of the same, his case comes within the purview of Art. 142. Art. 144 is applicable to cases in which the property in suit is, from its nature, such that physical possession in the ordinary sense would not be possible and the plaintiff was not at any time in actual possession thereof. In such cases, the plaintiff has been to prove his title and the defendant, wno is in possession, will have to give affirmative evidence of his adverse possession for a period of 12 years. Minerals.

——Art. 142—Minerals — Dispossession—Adverse possession by defendant amounting to—Mines—Sinking of pits at different places openly and without challenge.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 142.

A coal company was in possession of a village by virtue of a lease, containing an express power to work the underlying coal. This, their lessors had no right to confer, as it was conceded that their lessors who in their turn claimed under a sanad granted by an ancestor of the plaintiff, had only surface rights and no rights to the underground minerals. In a suit by the plaintiff for a declaration of his title to the minerals and an injunction to restrain the company from working the coal, it was found that the village was treated as a unit of property and the minerals underlying it constituted a defined unit. Rent was paid for the village as a whole. The company had been systematically carrying on the colliery work from 1901. They sank three pits at different points and made bores in likely places, anywhere in the village they chose, openly and without challenge. Their conduct and actings were consistent only with the assertion of a right to the minerals under the whole village. In these circumstances it was held, that the fact that the company may not have worked any one pit for twelve years was immaterial, if for twelve years they have been carrying on operations in various parts of the field. The possession for over the statutory period was effective possession not only of the surface of the village but of the whole mineral field underlying it and adverse to the plaintiff. For such period the plaintiff has been dispossessed of the whole field and the suit brought in 1919 was, therefore, held to be barred by time. Possession following title.

See also WASTE LAND, infra.

———Art. 142—Possession following title—Applicability of presumption—Open site—Proof of possession—Effective possession not proved by other party—Result.

The plaintiff brought a suit in ejectment alleging title under a sale deed of 1898 from the then owners of the land, possession up to 1919 and dispossession by the defendants in that year. The land in dispute was a vast stretch of open site unbuilt upon and uncultivated. It was found that for the period of twelve years before suit up to the date of the alleged dispossession in 1919, there was no effective enjoyment, no effective possession of the plot by any one either the plaintiff or the defendant. So far as title went, that of the plaintiff was found to be more reliable than that of the defendants to nearly one-third of the disputed plot. It was contended that as the plaintiff came to Court with an allegation of definite acts of possession and dispossession which he had failed to prove, he should be non-suited and the presumption of possession following title ought not under such circumstances to be applied.

Held, (i) the plea would be effective only if the possession presumed by law had been displaced by proof of effective acts of possession by the defendant. None such had been established by him. (ii) Though as a general rule the plaintiff in a suit for ejectment should prove possession within twelve years of suit, the possession to be proved is only such possession as the property is capable of. Where therefore owing to the fact that the land was an open site, neither party was able to prove any act of effective possession, possession must follow title, and the plaintiff should be granted a decree to the one third portion of the plot to which he had proved his title. 16 C. 473 ; 9 C. 744. ———Art. 142—Waste land—Suit for possession—Allegation of effective possession by plaintiff found against—Presumption of possession following title, if available to plaintiff.

In a suit for possession of waste land, the plaintiffs alleged they were in effective possession of the land until one year prior to the suit the defendants trespassed on it. The lower Court found against the allegation of effective possession and on that account dismissed the suit. It was contended that having regard to the nature of the land which was waste land, the lower Court ought to have relied on the presumption of possession following title and as the defendant had not shown possession for more than seven years, the suit should have been decreed in plaintiff's favour.

Held, though if plaintiff proves his title, there is a presumption of possession especially in the case of waste land, yet where the plaintiffs put forward a case of effective possession and adduces evidence in support of it, then he cannot give up that case and rely upon any "presumption" in support of his possession because the special case set up by him is inconsistent with any such presumption. 67 I. ———Art. 143—Applicability—Conditional gift—Non-fulfilment of condition—Suit to recover possession—Limitation.

A Hindu widow made a gift of her land to two persons on the condition that the latter would provide maintenance for her and would render services to her during her lifetime. It was expressly provided that if the donees failed to maintain the donor or to render services to her then the latter would be entitled to revoke the gift and resume possession of the land. Alleging that from December, 1926, the donees had ceased to maintain the widow and to render her services she sued in March, 1930, for possession of the land gifted by her.

Held, that the suit was governed by Art. 143 and not Art. 114. (Jai Lal, J.) BUDHU v. HANJRO. I.R. 1932 Lah. 645 (2).

———Art. 143—Applicability—If restricted to landlord and tenant.

Art. 143 is in general terms. It applies to all suits for possession, when the plaintiff becomes entitled to possession by reason of any forfeiture or breach of condition. Art. 143 is not applicable only to suit between landlord and tenant. When a particular article is intended to be made applicable to suits between landlord and tenant only it is stated to be so in express terms in the Limitation Act. (*R. C. Where the defendant (tenant) ceased to perform the service incidental to the holding of the land long prior to the date when the landlord showed his intention to forfeit the tenancy by a notice determining the tenancy, and the landlord filed the suit within 12 years from the date of notice.

Held, that the time began to run from the date the landlord determined the tenancy and not from the date when the service ceased to be performed and that therefore the suit was in time under Art. 143, Limitation Act. (Curgenven, J.) VENKATARAMA v. PONNUSWAMI. A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 918.

Acquisition of title.

———Art. 144—Acquisition of title—Essentials.

Mere possession for any length of time does not per se create any title by adverse possession. In order to acquire such title, the possession must not only be open and exclusive but it must be also shown to have been adverse for the full statutory period. Notoriety of possession may, in some cases, justify a presumption that the true owner was aware of the character of the possession being adverse. But whether in the absence of direct proof of actual knowledge on the part of the true owner such a presumption should be raised against him or not must depend upon the special facts and circumstances of each case. Where there was no evidence of an unequivocal character which would justify the Court in presuming that the owner must have known that the possession of another was in assertion of a hostile title.

Held, that the latter cannot be said to have perfected his title by adverse possession. (Bisheshwar Nath and Kisch, JJ.) SURAJ BALI v. MAHADEO PRASAD. 7 Luck. 250=137 I.C. 678=I.R. 1932 Oudh 259=8 O.W.N. 1153=A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 46.

———Art. 144—Acquisition of title—Evidence.

In a suit for declaration of title to certain land, the plaintiff claimed to have acquired title to it by adverse possession. There was no reliable evidence to prove that the plaintiffs physically dispossessed the defendants or that they ever asserted hostile title. All that was made out by evidence was that the plaintiffs had been in possession for many years, that they had never paid any rent in respect of the land and that in the village papers they had been recorded as bila faisla tenants whereas the tenants were recorded as proprietors.

———Art. 144—Adverse possession—Essentials of.

By adverse possession is meant possession adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor. The possession required must be nec vi, nec clam and nec precario. It is not necessary in order to establish adverse possession, that the proof of acts of possession should cover every moment of the requisite period. The nature of the requisite possession must necessarily vary with the nature of the subject possessed. The possession must be the kind of possession of which the particular subject is susceptible. There is no authority for holding that adverse possession should be shown to have been brought to the knowledge of the other party. It is sufficient that the possession be overt and without any attempt at concealment so that the person against whom time is running ought, if he exercises due vigilance, to be aware of what is happening. Further, it is not necessary in order to establish adverse possession that the proof of acts of possession should cover every moment of the requisite period. ——Art. 144 — Adverse possession — Essentials to prove—Declaration of title on basis of adverse possession—Permissibility—Proof of title.

A declaration of title may be made on proof of 12 years' adverse possession. Such a declaration cannot however be given on a title distinctly stated in the plaint or in the issues. The question of adverse possession is a mixed question of law and fact and if a party claims a title by adverse possession it is his duty to make clear allegations in the plaint and to lead evidence as regards facts from which he asks the Court to draw the inference that the proved facts amount in law to adverse possession. ——Art. 144—Adverse possession — Essentials to prove—Possession as owner with intention to oust.

A defendant, in order successfully to set up a title by adverse possession, must show that he was in possession of the land in such a manner as to indicate that he was claiming to be in possession as an owner and was intending to oust the plaintiff. It is true that every form of occupation and every act of possession is not such as to show an intention of this kind, and is consequently not necessarily sufficient to give rise to a title by adverse possession, but each case must be decided upon its own peculiar circumstances, and whether those circumstances indicate that the person in possession was setting up an adverse claim is a question of fact. ——Art. 144—Adverse possession—Evidence of.

Where the defendant in proof of his plea of adverse possession over a certain land relies on various acts of enjoyment such as dumping of rubbish, tethering of cattle enclosing the land with wall, etc., such acts if they stood by themselves would not be sufficient to prove adverse possession on the part of the defendant, but they, taken in conjunction with the fact that the defendant had enclosed the land in dispute which had been in existence for a period much longer than twelve years would be sufficient proof of adverse possession. ——Art. 144—Adverse possession—Mortgage decree-holders—Purchase in execution—Symbolical possession —Suit for possession.

The defendants were in possession of the suit property as purchasers in a money decree. The plaintiffs obtained a mortgage decree and purchased the property in 1908, the sale was confirmed in 1912, and the writ of delivery taken out by the plaintiffs in 1915. The present suit for declaration of title and possession was brought in 1927 by the plaintiffs and the question was from which date the defendants could be said to have been in adverse possession.

Held, that the title of the defendants could not be said to be adverse until the plaintiff attempted to enforce his rights under the sale and that date being 1915, the suit was in time. 27 C.W.N. 259 and 33 C.W.N. 963, Foll. ——Art. 144—Adverse possession—Onus of proof.

When the title to the lands in dispute is in the plaintiffs, the onus under Art. 144 is on the defendants, who rely on adverse possession as a bar, to show that they had been in adverse possession of the lands for more than 12 years prior to the institution of the suit. ——Art. 144—Adverse possession—Starting point— When adverse.

The starting point of limitation under Art. 144, Limitation Act, is the date when the possession of the defendant becomes adverse. In order to apply the article it must be determined first what was the nature and effect of the defendant's possession ; and that again depends on the nature and extent of the rights asserted by the overt conduct or express declaration of the person relying on it. Possession to be adverse must be adequate in continuity in publicity and in extent. The classical ———Art. 144—Burden of proof—Adverse possession—Onus to prove undertaken—Failure to do so—Whether Court is bound to presume possession from title.

When prima facie title is proved by the plaintiff, onus is shifted to the defendant to prove adverse possession. But where the trial Court required the plaintiffs to prove in the first instance that they were in possession within 12 years of the suit and it only required the defendants to prove adverse possession in the event of the plaintiffs failing to establish this fact and the plaintiff accepted this but failed to discharge the burden.

Held, since the plaintiff took no objections to the frame of the issues made by the trial Court, he cannot subsequently complain that onus has been wrongly placed on him and that his possession must be presumed from title. When a party accepts the burden of proof laid on him by the trial Court and undertakes to discharge it but fails to do so, he cannot in appeal turn round and say that he has not been fairly treated in the matter of burden of proof. Since the plaintiffs accepted the onus of proving before the trial Court that they had leased the properties to the defendant about three years before the suit and that in any case they had been in possession within twelve years before the suit, the appellate Court is not bound to presume possession from the very start and to remand the case to enable the defendants to establish adverse possession for more than twelve years. It was admitted that the lands were parti and jungle lands and that the plaintiffs had a title to it but the defendants claimed a limited tenancy interest only as against the admitted proprietor, the zemindar.

Held, that the defendant must either show title to tenancy right by contract or by the fact that he has been in possession for the necessary period and the onus is equally upon him to show the date upon which he came into possession and his title began. Such cases are governed by Art. 144 and not by Art. 142 and it is impossible for the Judge in trying such a suit to raise any presumption against the plaintiff by reason of the absence of any witness on the part of the plaintiff. The plaintiffs who sued to recover possession of certain property alleged that some six or seven years before the suit, the premises had been let out to the defendant for rent and that the latter had agreed to pay rent. It appeared that the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest had filed a previous suit for a declaration that he was the owner of the property and the same had been decreed.

Held, that though the plaintiff's allegation as to tenancy was wrong, since their title was found they were entitled to succeed in the absence of proof by the defendant that he had been in adverse possession for over 12 years. To this extent Art. 144 will apply to such a suit. But it may be that the plaintiff though not able to substantiate his title, is in a position to prove his possession and dispossession by the defendant within 12 years. There can be no adverse possession by one co-owner against another until there is an ouster or something equivalent to an ouster of the latter. The original owner died in 1896. Sood after, the entire suit property was the subject of alluvial action of a river and when it emerged a trespasser took possession of it. In 1889 the defendant, one of the members of the joint family entitled to the property, instituted a suit against the trespasser and recovered possession under a compromise decree. He subsequently sued and recovered rent from trespassers on the land. It appeared that the joint family became divided in 1912 or 1913, but the defendant was left in exclusive possession of the said property. The other members of the family having instituted a suit to recover his share of the property,

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 144—Co owners.

With regard to co-owners of joint property, the law is that there should be an ouster and adverse possession after ouster for more than 12 years, before one co owner can succeed against another. To establish adverse possession as between co-owners of joint properties, there must be evidence of open assertion of hostile title by one to the knowledge of the other. Mere exclusive use of a common well and incurring of costs for the repair of the property by one is not sufficient. Nothing short of ouster can bring about that result. The plaintiff's possession, as co-owners must be referred to their lawful title and he cannot be allowed to assert that he has acquired title by prescription on the ground that the defendant (the other co-owner) has not been in possession for some 15 years before suit and that he had a secret intention to exclude the other completely from possession. ———Art. 144—Co-owners — Tenants in common—Ouster—Non participation in profits—Denial of title.

The possession of one tenant in common would not be adverse to the other until ouster. In a suit by a member of one branch of family against a representative of another branch for possession of certain villages, which the plaintiff contended, had continued undivided after a division between the members of the family long ago, the question was if the defendants had been in adverse possession for over twelve years. With reference to three villages, the defendant's predecessors had been in sole possession and participation of the profits of the villages for more than the statutory period and as early as 1884, in the revenue proceedings of that year the interest of the first plaintiff in those villages was denied by the defendant's predecessor. With reference to the fourth, there was no denial of title prior to 1912; but having regard to the separation of the branches, non-participation of profits since 1880, and the omission of this village in the list of properties handed over to the first plaintiff on his attaining majority by his guardian, the possession of the defendant was adverse for more than the statutory period and the suit was, therefore, barred by Art. 144. Where two co-sharers are in possession of unequal shares, and the co-sharer in possession of the bigger share sues to eject the other on the ground that the other is no sharer at all and fails, his suit alone is not sufficient to constitute adverse possession as regards the bigger share in his possession, though adverse possession against a co-sharer is not impossible. ———Art. 144—Co sharers—Ouster—Proof.

Although as a general rule one co sharer has no right to take exclusive possession of a joint property, the question whether such exclusive possession amounts to ouster or not depends on the circumstances of each particular case and in a case where it cannot be held that there has been ouster the exclusive possession of a co-sharer should not be disturbed at the instance of another who is similarly in possession of another portion of the joint property. In such a case the fact that one person constructs buildings upon land is not such an injury as cannot be remedied in a partition suit. 89 I.C. 831, Ref. In the case of joint property, possession on exclusive occupation by one co-sharer without more is not sufficient to constitute ouster or adverse possession even if such exclusive possession extends beyond the statutory period of twelve years. But this rule has no application to a case where some items of joint property were rightly or wrongly taken possession of by a stranger and passed out of the joint family and the stranger having been in possession thereof for more than twelve years and acquired an indefeasible right to them by adverse possession, one of the joint family members purchased them from the stranger with his own money. ———Art. 144—Landlord and tenant—Non payment of rent—Holding over—Adverse possession.

Mere non-payment of rent is not sufficient ground for holding that the tenancy is determined and that the tenant's possession is adverse. In the Punjab the case of a tenant holding without the permission of the owner is governed by the Tenancy Act and not by the Transfer of Property Act. A tenant has the right to continue in possession if he wishes until his landlord serves him with notice of ejectment. There is no question of the tenancy being determined by lapse of time and therefore the holding over after the expiry of the lease does not amount to adverse possession. No general rule as regards a presumption to be drawn from entries in Jamabandis can be laid down. Each case must be considered on its own facts. Thus if it were simply a case of whether one man or the other was in possession it might be presumed that the Jamabandi entry supporting one man's possession is correct. ———Art. 144—Minerals Putni—Grant of surface rights—Deposit of Ochre underneath sub-soil—Adverse possession of—Possession of surface insufficient—Different strata of the sub-soil—Possession of sub-soil—Presumption—Article applicable.

Upon a grant of the surface rights by a zamindar he remains in the eye of the law in possession of the sub-soil, though it may be only constructive in possession. But the doctrine that "possession follows title" is well established. So while lands are submerged, constructive possession is with the true owner, and that, though immediately prior to the diluviation physical possession had been with the adverse claimant. It is for this reason that cases as to adverse possession of mineral rights must ultimately fall to be decided under Art. 144 rather than Art. 142. Once title is proved or admitted to be in the zamindar, he will be presumed to continue in possession until adverse possession by the trespasser is established, and that, whether the trespasser is the grantee surface or a stranger. It is in effect only an instance of of the a shifting onus. Though it may be convenient to speak of an idol as a minor for certain purposes, i.e., for the purposes of determining the powers of manager of temple property, it is not correct to speak of an idol as a perpetual minor and illogical to extend to idols the privileges as to limitation of actions conferred on minors in the limitation Act, so as to make it impossible for temple property improperly alienated to be acquired by adverse possession. The minors dealt with in the Act are human beings, not juristic persons like idols and corporations who can really hold property in an ideal sense. The acquisition, protection and loss of property by juristic persons can result only from the acts of natural persons. In the generality of cases the claim to the office of mutawali and to the property appurtenant thereto go together and are inseparable. ——Art. 144—Religious endowment—Temple property—Invalid alienation—Adverse possessicn by lessee.

The suit was brought in 1918 by the Dharmakarta of a temple for possession of various plots of land which had been alienated by a permanent Cowle in 1865 by the then Dharmakarta in favour of two persons from whom the defendants derived title as lessees. It was conceded that the Cowle of 1865 was invalid and beyond the powers of the Dharmakarta to grant but the defendants contended that they had, by adverse possession, acquired title to permanent tenancy. The evidence showed that the permanent grant was made in view of the contemplated reclamation and cultivation of the area computed to be cultivable but that the grantees were bound to pay a fixed rent from the fourth year onwards whether they reclaimed and cultivated or left the land waste. It was also proved that the Cowledars and their transferees were, since the inception of the lease, openly asserting their right to permanent tenancy.

Held, (i) that the suit was not governed by Art. 134 as Dharmakarta was not a trustee within the meaning of the section; (ii) that the suit was barred under Art. 144 whether the starting point of the adverse possession be held to be the date of the lease or the date of the death, removal or resignation of the alienating Dharmakarta. The ruling of the Privy Council in 44 Mad. 831 is confined to alienations by Matathipadhis and is not applicable to a permanent lease by the Dharmakarta of a temple. (Case-law referred.) ——Art. 144—Scope—Case of dispossession.

Art. 144 of the Limitation Act is a residuary article and is applicable only when a suit does not fall within any of the numerous articles found in Sch. I. If on the allegations made in the plaint the suit falls within Art. 142, there is no justification for taking it out of that Article and for applying Art. 144 on grounds which are not to be found mentioned in Art. 142 itself. There is no justification for restricting the scope of Art. 142 to cases in which the relief for possession is based only on "possessory title and not on proprietary title. It must therefore be applied in every case where the plaintiff alleges his own dispossession by the defendant prior to the suit as also where he does not make any such allegation, but it is found, as a fact, that he was dispossessed by the defendant prior to the institution of the suit. 51 A. 1042 and (1933) A.L.J. 105, Overr. ——Art. 144—Scope—Comparison of Arts. 142 and 144.

Art. 142 is restricted to suits for possession on dispossession or on discontinuance of possession. In order to bring a suit within the purview of that article it must be shown that the suit was in terms as well as in substance based on an allegation of the plaintiff having been in possession and having subsequently lost it either by dispossession or by discontinuance of possession. Art. 144 on the other hand is a residuary article applying to suits for possession not otherwise provided for. Suits based on the plaintiff's title in which there is no allegation of prior possession and subsequent dispossession or discontinuance of possession must fall within that article. It is well settled that the question whether the article of limitation applicable to a particular suit is Art. 142 or Art. 144 has to be determined by reference to the pleadings. Where there was no allegation about the plaintiff having lost possession either by dispossession or by discontinuance of possession, held, that the suit was governed by Art. 144 and not by Art. 142. The fact that the present occupier has not been in actual possession of the house for the whole of the period of adverse possession but has acquired the house by a deed of gift from a person whose title to it has not been proved, does not make any difference if his predecessor's possession was also adverse to that of the landlord. 14 A. ——Art. 144—Tacking—Adverse possession—Tacking of possession of separate trespassers.

The general principle regarding the tacking of possession of separate trespassers is that it will be tacked when the second trespasser derives his possession from the first. But this cannot be done if the two trespassers are independent of each other and the second has obtained possession otherwise than through the first. It is not always necessary that the second trespasser should receive possession by the voluntary acts of the first. Where the subsequent trespassers claim on behalf of village proprietary body as the owners of the land and themselves get possession on the claim that the first trespassers were in fact trespassers with no rights, their possession is in no sense derived from that of the first trespassers, but merely follows that possession. Where the possession of the co-owner himself was not adverse to his other co-owners, and it is not he but the mortgagee, who having become his subsequent vendee, is setting up adverse possession then the mortgagee vendee would not be able to join the two periods together in order to complete his period of prescription for acquiring full title. When a person is in possession in the capacity of a usufructuary mortgagee unlawfully against the true owners, the only title which he can acquire by adverse possession is that of a mortgagee. Trust.

———Art. 144—Trust—Agreement to convey properties to the plaintiff—Contract not to revoke disposition in favour of plaintiff—Resulting trust—Right of beneficiary—Enforcement.

Art. 144 is applicable only to a possessory suit by the owner of the properties claimed against a person holding adversely to him without title. Where a testator made a will bequeathing all his property to A and also entered into a contract with A's father not to revoke the same but later executed a second will revoking the first, the contractee or his legal representative can enforce specific performance of the agreement or obtain compensation for its breach but that would not make A the "owner" of the properties, entitled for the purpose of bringing a suit for possession, to the benefit of twelve years under Art. 144. Assuming that, by virtue of the contract, there was a trust created in favour of A and that trust continued even after the death of the testator (which their Lordships doubted), that would not entitle him to sue for possession as "owner". The Indian Law makes no distinction between legal and equitable estates and the "owner" in case of trust property is the trustee. The right of the beneficiary is in a proper case to call upon the trustee to convey to him and that right is governed by Art. 120 and not Art. 144. ———Art. 158—Extension of limitation—Need for plea being taken.

A Court is not bound to go beyond the prima facie facts in matters of limitation and to inquire how long he took to obtain copies. There are many ways in which limitation, as fixed by definite periods of time, may be extended, but if the appropriate plea is not put forward, it is not the business of the Court to conduct an investigation in order to satisfy itself before acting that it has complied with all the provisions of the law. An award was filed in Court on the 30th June and notice on the same day given to the parties for the 11th July, that date being clearly fixed in order to comply with Art. 158. The defendant urged before the High Court that the following day, the 1st July, was a Sunday, and that on the 2nd July he applied for a copy of the award which was not obtained until the 9th. Accordingly he had only the interval between the 9th and 11th instead of the ten clear days allowed. He therefore contended that the Court below acted illegally and without jurisdiction in passing the decree on the basis of the award.

Held, that as the defendant had failed to bring this fact to the notice of the lower Court and as it was not the duty of the Court suo motu to make inquiry, the High Court could not interfere in revision. 29 I.C. 860, Ref.

———Arts. 163 and 164—Application to set aside dismissal for default—Limitation—Starting point.

The starting point of the period of limitation for an application to set aside a dismissal for default of appearance of plaintiff is date of dismissal, and not date of knowledge as in Art. 164. Hence an application filed beyond 30 days from the date of dismissal should be dismissed, even though plaintiff is not aware of dismissal, S. 5 not having been made applicabe to such an application so as to give the Court power to extend time. In Art. 163, the starting point is the date of dismissal, and there is nothing in this article about the date of knowledge as there is in Art. 164. ———Art. 163—Dismissal for default—Subsequent death of plaintiff—Application by legal representatives three months later—Limitation.

A suit was dismissed on 22-12 1930 for plaintiff's default. The plaintiff died on 9 1-1931. No application under O. 9, R. 9 of C. P. Code was made by the legal representatives within thirty days. Three months later the widow applied to have her name brought on record.

Held, that the time had begun against the husband and expired on 23-1-1931 and the widow could not be in a better position than her husband and the application was barred. ———Art. 164—Applicability—Defendant having due notice of suit—Omission to ascertain date of hearing.

Art. 164 is not intended to help a defendant who is duly served with a summons and has due notice of the suit but who intentionally neglects to ascertain the dates of the suit after it has been transferred to another Court with a view to come at a late stage and get the decree set aside if it were passed ex parte. No proceedings can therefore be taken on an application by such defendant, to set aside an ex parte decree presented after the period of limitation. A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 379, Rel. on. ———Art. 164 — Applicability — Order allowing amendment of decree—Application to set aside.

A decision given under S. 152, C. P. Code, granting an application for amendment of a decree is an order and not a decree. Hence an application to set aside such an order is governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 164. (Ba U, J.) LAWRENCE v. DEWAN SINGH. 6 I R. (Rang.) 59 (1)=145 I.C. 823=A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 264.

An application was made for setting aside an ex parte decree with the necessary security bond attached to it.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 164.

This application was withdrawn as being defective in certain formalities. Subsequently a second application for the same purpose was made within limitation and to this application the same security bond was attached. The security bond was verified by the surety after limitation on a question being raised as to limitation.

Held, that although the Court would accept the security bond after some evidence in support of its genuine character, the date of the evidence would not affect the date on which the security bond was actually filed and that inasmuch as the surety verified the security bond as a genuine and correct document, the bond was effective and valid from the date on which it was filed. ———Art. 164—Application to set aside ex parte decree—Extension of time—Power of Court.

For an application to set aside an ex parte decree, a period of limitation is prescribed by Art. 164. The provision of S. 3, Limitation Act, render it imperative that an application presented after the statutory period of limitation shall be dismissed. It is not competent for the Courts to enlarge the period of limitation laid down by the statutory law. (Fraser, J.C. and Saaduddin, A.J.C.) AJAB KHAN v. ALAF GUL. A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 146.

A security bond, which was filed along with the application to set aside an ex parte decree, had not however been verified by the two sureties. It was in fact verified later but by that time it was two days beyond the period of limitation prescribed for making the application.

Held, that the bond was filed, though not verified in the first instance, and was perfectly good and effective and that the application was within time. 29 A.L.J. 1049, Ref. (Kendall, J.) AHMAD YAR KHAN v. KHEYALI. 147 I.C. 853=6 R.A. 580=1933 A.L.J. 992=A.I.R. 1933 All. 933.

———Art. 164—Commencement of limitation—Knowledge of decree.

Under Art. 164 an application to set aside an ex parte decree must be filed within 30 days from the date of the applicant's knowledge of the decree and not within 30 days of the knowledge of the suit. ———Art. 164—Decree passed ex parte on substituted service—Application to set aside—Enquiry into due service—Duty of Court.

The fact that substituted service by order of Court has been declared under O. 5, R. 20 (2), C.P. Code, to be as effectual as if it had been made on the defendant personally does not necessarily mean that the first part of Art. 164, Limitation Act, covers the application to set aside decrees which follow such service. The words "or where the summons was not duly served" in Art. 164 clearly connote an inquiry into the due service of the summons which can only be found out by giving a chance to the petitioner to prove that he has not been served according to law. (Mir Ahmad, A.J.C.) AHMAD DIN v. GOKAL CHAND. 158 I.C. 355=8 R. Pesh. 52 =A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 137.

———Art. 164—"Due service"—Effect of substituted service.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 164.

The lower Court acting on certain decisions then in vogue held substituted service is due service within the meaning of Art. 164, Limitation Act. Subsequently however a slightly modified view had been taken in other cases.

Held, that the lower Court had not acted erroneously and that it was not a case for interference in revision. The decisions on the question of substituted service reviewed. (Curgenven, J.) RAJAGOPALACHARI v. SUBRAMANIAM. I R. 1932 Mad. 525=138 I.C. 146 =1932 M.W.N. 133=A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 472.

———Art. 164—Due service—Substituted service.

The rule that substituted service is to be taken as effectual as personal service only means that the Court hearing the case may proceed with the suit as if the summons had been personally served on the defendant. But if for no fault of the defendant, a defendant was never put in a position to know that a suit has been instituted against him, whatever steps might have been taken for serving the summons on him, these steps can never be taken as amounting to "due service." It is therefore open to the defendant, when he appears to show that the method employed was not calculated to effect the purpose of informing the defendant of the institution of the suit, and in order to see whether there was due service or not, the Court must consider all the circumstances of the case, for example, the place where the defendant was when the summons was issued to him and where and how the summons was served. (Sulaiman, A.J.C., Mukerji, Boys and Bajpai, JJ.) RAM BHAROSE v. GANGA SINGH. 54 All. 154=136 I C. 609=I.R. 1932 All. 225=1931 A.L.J. 1049=A. I.R. 1931 All. 727 (F.B.).

———Art. 164—'Due service'—Substituted service.

The aggrieved party may be given an opportunity of proving that substituted service had not been properly effected, that, in other words, there had been no due service. In that sense it is incorrect to say that substituted service is necessarily due service which can never be contested by the judgment-debtor at a later date; but it is equally incorrect to say that it is necessarily not due service. The Court can in a case of substituted service come to the conclusion that the substituted service was properly asked for, granted and effected, in other words, that there was due service. L.J. 931.

———Art. 164—"Due service"—Substituted service—Application for setting aside ex parte decree—Limitation.

Substituted service under O. 5, R. 20, C.P. Code, is as effectual as personal service and is therefore "due service" within the meaning of Art. 164 of the Limitation Act. Where the order for substituted service is based on proper materials and an ex parte decree is passed an application for having it set aside should be made within the prescribed time. (Nanavutty, J.) THAKUR PRASAD v. BARATI LAL. I.R. 1931 Oudh 330=132 I.C. 778=14 O L.J. 543=8 O.W.N. 845=A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 369 (1).

———Art 164—'Due service'—Substituted service—Service of summons—Limitation.

In the case of substituted service a summons is duly served for the purpose of Art. 164 even though it does not in fact come to the defendant's knowledge and as time runs from the date of the decree in such cases, an application for setting aside an ex parte decree made ———Art. 164—Due service—What is—Substituted service.

Substituted service cannot always be deemed to be due service within the meaning of Arts. 164 and 169 of the Limitation Act. Due service within the meaning of those Articles is not service which is technically and formally correct as a basis for proceeding ex parte but service which has really been effective, which has achieved the object of service by bringing the claim against him to the knowledge of the defendant or respondent. 52 M.L.J. 512 and 28 L.W. 513, Diss.; 54 M.L.J. 448. Except where there are special rules made by the High Court extending the provisions of S. 5 of the Limitation Act to applications for setting aside ex parte decree, the Courts do not have the power to have recourse to the provisions of S. 5, or enlarge the period prescribed by Art. 164 by resorting to S. 151 of the C.P. ———Art. 164—"Summons"—Meaning of.

The summons referred in Art. 164 is the summons for the first hearing of the case, and there is no essential difference between the case where a suit is adjourned owing to the absence of the presiding officer or some other cause and a case in which a suit remanded for retrial by the appellate Court. The underlying principle in such cases is that where the existence of the suit has been brought to the notice of the defendants by due service of a summons on them, it is their duty thereafter to inform themselves of what is being done in the case (*Almond, J. ———Art. 164—"Where summons was not duly served"—Effect.

The words "where the summons was not duly served" in Col. 3, Art. 164, refer to the summons for the first hearing of the suit and not to any summons issued for a subsequent hearing. The intention is to give an extended period of limitation in cases where the defendant has no knowledge at all of the suit. But when he has knowledge of the suit, the mere fact that he did not get the due notice of a subsequent hearing can hardly be considered to be a ground for extension of the period. 57 I. C. 15 and A. I. ———Art. 166—Application by judgment-debtor under O. 21, R. 89, C. P. Code—Deposit not made in time owing to inaction of Court—Effect.

No doubt under O. 21, R. 89, read with R. 92 (3), C, P. But it is well settled that a party litigant ought not to be penalised when he found it impossible to comply with the requirements of the statute, not because of any fault of his own, but by reason of the action or inaction of the Court. In execution of a mortgage decree the mortgaged property was brought to sale. Defendants 19 to 21 objected to the execution and their objection having been dismissed they took the matter in appeal to the High Court. Certain other defendants attacked the sale under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. Code. Defendants 19 to 21 also deposited the decree amount in Court and prayed to have the sale set aside under O. 21, R. 89 of the Code. They obtained a stay of any further proceedings under R. 89 pending the disposal of their appeal to the High Court objecting to the execution. Subsequently the application under O. 21, R. 90 were allowed and the sale was set aside. Against this the vendee appealed to the High Court. After the sale was set aside defendants 19 to 21 first got their stay order in the High Court cancelled and then applied to the lower Court for permission to withdraw their application under O. 21, R. 89 and the Court ordered that the application be dismissed as withdrawn and the deposit made by them was refunded. Later on, the High Court allowed the appeal preferred by the vendee and restored the sale. Thereafter defendants 19 to 21 presented an application to the ower Court under S. 151 and Q. 21, R. 89 praying that he sale be cancelled, if necessary, by reviving their earlier application under O. 21, R. 89 and by excusing the delay. The lower Court set aside the sale as prayed for.

Held, in appeal, that the subsequent application having been made more than thirty days after the date of the sale was timebarred; and the Court could not treat the original application as pending in spite of its order of dismissal.

A report was then received that resistance was offered. The Judge held that an application under O. 21, R. 97 was barred by limitation and the decree-holder-purchaser applied for a fresh warrant for possession.

Held, that the case did relate to an application under O. 21, R. 95 and the matter at issue between the parties did relate to the execution of the decree, and hence a suit could be barred under S. 47. In construing the meaning of words "when the sale becomes absolute" in Art. 180, regard must be had not only to the provisions of O. 21, R. 92 (1) but also to the other material sections and orders of the Code including those which relate to appeals from orders made under O. 21, R. 92 (1) Where therefore there is an appeal to the High Court from an order of the Subordinate Judge disallowing the application to set aside the sale, the order of the Subordinate Judge confirming the sale did not become effective and the sale will not become absolute within the meaning of Art. 180 until the disposal of the appeal, even though the Subordinate Judge may have confirmed the sale, as he was bound to do when he decided to disallow the abovementioned application. The sales did not become absolute within the meaning of Art. 180 till the date when the High Court dismissed the appeal. So applications for possession of the properties under O. 21, R. 95 purchased at the auction sale were not barred by limitation as the period of three years commences from the date of the dismissal of the appeal by the High Court. When there was a final conclusive definite order confirming the sale and not from the date on which the application to set aside the sale by the judgment-debtor was dismissed by the Subordinate Judge. ———Art. 180—Starting point under—Cancellation of cause of action for application—Subsequent removal of cancellation—Application after—Maintainability.

Under Art. 180, an application by an auction-purchaser for delivery of possession has to be made within three years from the time when the sale becomes absolute. But when, by reason of a decree of a competent Court (declaring that the decree-holders had acquired no right on the basis of their auction-purchase in execution of the mortgage decree and consequently had no right to get possession) there is a cancellation of the cause of action for delivery, operating to suspend the rights of the auction-purchaser, he is entitled, on the removal of such cancellation by a Court of appeal, to avail of a fresh cause of action, which arises by reason thereof. O. 21, R. 32, C. P. Code, only prescribes the mode for the execution of a decree for injunction. If however a Court is moved to enforce execution of the decree under this provision of law, the application must be made within limitation as prescribed by Art. 181. Where therefore a person, who has obtained an injunction forbidding defendants from building their house in such a way as to interfere with the passage of light and air through the ventilators in his house, puts in an execution application on the ground that defendants have violated the injunction by building a wall against the ventilators, it is incumbent upon him to prove that the breach of injunction took place within three years of his application. The building of the wall is not a continuing wrong and limitation is not saved by the provisions of S. 23 of the Limitation Act, as the wrongful act on the part of the defendants is completed by the building of the wall. Where under the terms of a decree the right of the decree-holder to recover possession of some property in the hands of the defendants is contingent upon the decree-holder paying certain sums of money to the defendants but no date for payment is specified, the decree-holder is entitled to pay the money on the date when the decree was passed and to ask for possession immediately after the payment had been made. If, as a result of execution, a decree has been satisfied and if the decree-holder is compelled to refund or restore the property as a result of proceedings taken subsequently by the judgment-debtor or by a third party the satisfied decree revives on the refund or the restoration of the property and an application to execute the revived decree would be competent within three years from the time when the right to apply accrued to the decree-holder. In such cases the starting point for an application would be the date when the decree-holder is compelled to refund the amount or restore the property. On 9th April, 1923, the decree holders applied for execution but on 25th May, 1923, the judgment-debtors obtained from the Court an order in these terms: "In compliance with this order, the execution proceedings should be stayed until the re-hearing case is disposed of. Let the execution be stayed until further orders". In compliance with this order, the executing Court passed an order on 14th December, 1923, in these terms: "It is useless to keep the execution case pending any longer. Struck off". The rehearing case was dismissed on 19th December, 1923. On the 7th January, 1924, the judgment debtors took an appeal, but it was dismissed on 21st June, 1926. On 11th January, 1929 the decree-holders filed a fresh execution application.

Held, that no "further orders" having even been passed the decree holders were entitled to wait till the proceedings relating to the re-hearing were finally disposed of on appeal and that the execution application was in time. ———Art. 181—Mortgage suit—Application for final decree dismissed for default—Second application beyond time—Decree passed on such application—Sale in execution—Decree and sale—If nullity as time-barred—Objection by judgment debtor after sale—Competency.

A preliminary decree in a mortgage suit was passed on 27 1-1927. The first application for a final decree within three years was dismissed for default, for omission to take steps to serve notice on the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder again applied for a final decree, but not until after the expiry of three years prescribed by Art. 181. Notice was served on the judgment-debtor on that application but he did not appear or contest it, and a final decree was passed by the Court on 25-11-1930 Execution was started in June, 1933, and after the usual formalities, the properties were sold and purchased by the decree holder on 7-11-1933. The judgment debtor, though served with notice under O. 21, R. 22, C. P. Code, on the execution application, did not appear or urge any objection. More than 6 months after the sale, the judgment-debtor filed objections and the executing Court dismissed the execution case altogether on the ground that the decree was time-barred and incapable of execution and in fact a nullity.

Held, that the decree was neither time-barred nor incapable of execution and that the judgment-debtor should have raised the objection earlier and not after the sale. An application for a final decree under O. 34, R. 3 (2), C. P. Code, is not an application to enforce the preliminary decree that has already been passed because, in order to be a mode of enforcing the preliminary decree, it must be an application to enforce a right that accrued to the mortgagee under the preliminary decree. In the old form of mortgage decree under S. 88 of the T. P. Act, the decree directed that the property should be sold on default being made by the mortgagor, but under O. 34, R. 3 of the Code, the preliminary decree does not direct that in case of default the property shall be sold nor does any right of sale thereunder accrue to the mortgagee. The right that is given under the preliminary decree to the mortgagee is a right, subject to any order that may be made in respect of redemption, to apply to the Court for a final decree for sale of the property. Such an application does not fall within

The minor applied within three years of his attaining majority for a final decree on 30th November, 1928.

Held, (1) that S. 6 of the Limitation Act had no application since the proceeding to obtain a final decree was not a proceeding in execution; (2) that having regard to the provisions contained in O. 32, R. 10, C. An order dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution does not deal judicially with the matter of the suit and can in no sense be regarded as an order adopting or confirming the decision appealed from. Time for applying for final decree in a mortgage suit would in such a case run from the date fixed for payment in the preliminary decree. But where the appeal is formally brought before the Court but is withdrawn and dismissed, the order dismissing the appeal amounts to a decree which supersedes the original order appealed against and time for applying for final decree would run only from the date of the appellate order and not from the date fixed for payment in the preliminary decree. ———Art. 181—Mortgage suit—Preliminary decree confirmed on appeal—Application for final decree—Limitation.

The right to ask for a final decree arises where the preliminary decree has been under appeal, from the date of the judgment in appeal. In cases where there has been a final decree in pursuance of the preliminary decree of the lower Court pending the appeal, the final decree is valid and binding to the extent to which it is not altered by the appellate decree, and a decree of the appellate Court confirming after judicial consideration the preliminary decree of a lower Court is for this purpose one altering it. The consequence is that where there is a final decree obtained in pursuance of the lower Court's preliminary decree and that preliminary decree is taken up in appeal and the appellate Court on a judicial determination confirms the preliminary decree and dismisses the appeal, the decree-holder has the right, which he may exercise within three years from the date of the decree in final appeal, to obtain a final decree in conformity with that appellate decision or if that is the proper way of expressing it, amending the old final decree so as to bring it into such conformity. 39 All. 641; 6 Pat. 24 (P.C.); 5 Lah. 257; 1930 M.W.N. 104 and 1933 M.W.N. 623, Foll. The right to apply for restitution accrues really on the date when for the first time a decision is given which entitles the party asking for restitution to have restitution. In execution of a decree for rent, the holding was sold by auction and the auction purchaser deposited the amount which was in excess over the decree amount in Court. The decree-holder withdrew the amount due to him and the balance due to the judgment debtor was kept in Court. On an application to have the sale set aside, it was set aside and the auction purchaser's money was ordered to be paid. The auction purchaser withdrew the amount in Court deposit. The decree-holder filed an appeal against the order and the sale was confirmed. An appeal was filed against this appellate order by one of the judgment debtors in which the plaintiffs, also a judgment-debtor, was impleaded as respondent; but the appeal was dismissed. Plaintiff filed a suit for restitution of the amount withdrawn by the auction-purchaser three years after the order confirming the sale, but within three years from the date of High Court's order of dismissal of appeal.

Held, that the cause of action arose on the date confirming the sale, that the appeal in the High Court did not concern him as he had not appealed and that the suit was time-barred. (*Mitter and M.C. On 4th March 1916 the mortgagees obtained against the mortgagor an ex parte decree for the recovery of the amount due to them by the sale of the mortgaged property and in execution of that decree the property was sold to certain persons and the sale was confirmed by the Court on 25th June, 1927. The defendant applied to have the ex parte decree set aside and the same was granted on 17th July, 1921. The suit brought by the mortgagees was subsequently tried on the merits and dismissed in February, 1922, though the mortgagor had admitted the execution of the mortgage deed and the receipt of the consideration. On 10th April, 1923, the mortgagor applied for the recovery of the possession of the house which had been sold in execution of the ex parte decree but the application was dismissed in April, 1924. On 18th October, 1924, he made an application that the money realised by the sale of the property be paid to him.

——Art. 181—Revival of execution—Pending execution proceeding—Application for revival—Starting point of limitation.

An ex parte mortgage decree was passed in January, 1924. An application for execution was filed on August 7, 1925, and while that was pending, the judgment-debtors applied for the setting aside of the ex parte decree on October 13, 1925. There was an interim order staying execution passed on that date. On April, 1926, the decree-holder and the judgment debtors compromised and agreed that the judgment-debtors should be given 3 months to pay up the amount and if they failed to do so execution should proceed. There was a written compromise filed in Court and verified by the parties on May 12, 1926. On May 22, 1926, the Court passed an order striking off the application for the setting aside of the ex parte decree on the ground that the matter had been compromised. Subsequently on June 4, 1926, the Office put up a report before the Court stating that the decree-holder could sell the property if the amount was not paid within 3 months. On this the Court ordered 'the execution case be struck off for the present without payment being entered.' The judgment debtors did not deposit the amount within the period which expired on July 24, 1926. An application for execution of the decree was made on July 24, 1929.

Held, that the application was one merely to revive the earlier proceeding which had been kept in abeyance and that Art. 181 did not apply.

Held, further, that assuming Art. 181 applied, the decree holder had applied within 3 years of the date when the right to apply accrued.

Per Niamatullah, J.—Where it is the duty of a Court to do something or to take some action, Art. 181 does not govern such an application to do such thing or take such action. A decree for money was passed in 1922. In 1924, on a petition by the judgment-debtor, the Court directed the decree to be entered as satisfied. The order was reversed on appeal in 1926. The decree holder applied for execution in 1928. The application was dismissed by the lower Courts as barred by limitation under Art. 182.

Held, that the application was not barred either on the ground that the words "the date of the decree" in Art. 182 (1) implied the condition that the decree should be legally executable during the whole of the three years period or on the ground that the application was governed by Art. 181, the limitation being three years from the time when the right to apply accrued, i.e., when the bar to the executability of the decree was removed. 40 M.L.J. 1 (P.C.), Appl. ———Art. 181—Starting point—"Decree to be drawn up on production of succession certificates"—Right to produce succession certificates, if barred.

The plaintiffs, in a suit to recover money, obtained a decree on June 10, 1921, subject to the following condition: "The decree should be drawn up after the several claimants produce succession certificates and apply for the drawing up of the decree." In 1923 and 1924 the plaintiffs applied twice for drawing up of the decree but as they produced no succession certificate, the applications were dismissed. On February 19 1926, they applied with the certificate and the lower Court held that the application was barred by Art. 181.

Held, the succession certificate and not an application for drawing up of the decree was the essence of the judgment, the decree necessarily following upon the production of the certificate and as the judgment specified no time within which to produce the certificate, Art. 181 did not apply to the right of the appellants to produce a succession certificate and therefore their application was in time. 37 C. 796; 6 C. 60; 8 C. 420, Foll. When a decree, dated 3rd September, 1919, was put into execution, N executed a surety bond undertaking to pay the amount in case the decree-holder failed to realise the amount from the judgment debtor. Subsequently the first application against the surety was made on 24th March, 1931.

Held, that the period of limitation against the surety did not run under any of the clauses of Art. 182, that Art. 182 was not exhaustive for all execution applications, that Art. 181 applied and that limitation in this case was three years from the date when the decree was

In April, 1922, the respondent and another executed a bond for the production of certain movables attached in execution of a decree by the appellant. The terms of the bond provided that "if any default is made in respect of the properties, ourselves (the sureties) would be liable for all the loss that may be sustained thereby and for any amount that may be directed by the Court." On the failure of the sureties to produce the articles, the first surety was arrested in March, 1923, and the petition against him was closed in September, 1923. In January, 1926, an assignment of the decree was recognised and in August, 1926, the assignee applied for the arrest of the respondent, the second surety. The question was if the application was in time.

Held, that (i) steps taken in execution against the judgment-debtor are not steps against the sureties nor are steps in execution against sureties steps in execution of the decree itself, so that the proceedings of January, 1926, for the recognition of the assignment of the decree did not save limitation; (ii) that the application was governed by Art. 181 and not Art. 182; (iii) the application of March, 1923, for the arrest of the first surety in which no relief was sought against the second surety, did not save limitation against the second surety and that the petition was, therefore, barred by limitation. The decree-holder filed an application to execute his decree by attachment and sale of a certain property, but an objection was raised by one K on the ground that he had a lien on the property. This objection was allowed and the proceedings in execution were stayed, because in the meantime the decree-holder had instituted a suit under O. 21, R. 63, C. P. The suit was decreed in January, 1922, but in the meantime in December, 1918, the application of the decree holder had been dismissed in default and the property attached released. The next application by the decree-holder was made in August, 1922, in which the prayer was to revive the previous application and to sell the property which had already been attached on the ground that the suit brought by the decree-holder had been decreed. ——Art. 182—Surety bond—Enforcement of—Starting point of limitation—Liability not absolute but only for deficiency after sale up to stated limit.

An application to enforce a surety bond must be within three years if the application is properly an application in the suit, or within six years if it should be made by independent suit. Where a bond is executed by a surety in pursuance of an order of Court, the bond should be considered in the light of the order directing the security to be given. Pending an appeal from a mortgage decree, stay of execution was granted for one year from April 1919 on the mortgagor furnishing security to the extent of about a lakh and odd which represented one year's interest on the mortgage money. As part of the security, the puisne mortgagee defendant executed a bond which provided for two contingencies in the following terms: (i) (if the appeal be disposed of within one year from 1st April 1919) "the defendants shall pay the sum of Rs. 77,000 or whatever may be payable under the High Court order not exceeding Rs. 77,000" (in default) "any amount so payable as aforesaid shall be realised from (me)"; (ii) if the appeal be not disposed of within one year "the decree-holders according to the order of the High Court shall be able to execute their decree with interest and to realise Rs. 77,000 from me." The appeal was dismissed in July 1921. The mortgaged properties were sold in January 1925. There was a deficiency. The decree-holder applied in January 1927 to enforce the bond and on objections raised by the surety,

Held, that on a true construction of the document and a consideration of the circumstances in which it was executed, (a) it was not absolute security which the decree-holders were to be free to realise immediately on the 1st April 1920; it was a security to the extent of Rs. 77,000 for the balance, if any, remaning unpaid after sale; (b) that until the property was sold, the liability under the bond could not be enforced and the date of sale being January 1925, the application in January 1927 to enforce the bond was in time. Held, that the agreement showed a set off and entitled the party in whose favour the excess who decreed to ultimately take out execution, that the excess could be only ascertained after the final decree was passed in appeal, if any, perferred by any of the parties, and that for purposes of the execution, the date of the decree of the appellate Court and not of the trial Court was the starting point of limitation. In the case of a plaint claiming several reliefs where the Court passes a decree granting some of such reliefs and refusing the others, but where an appeal is preferred only against a portion of the decree regarding a particular relief, limitation for the excution of the other unappealed reliefs runs only from the date of the appellate decree. 59 I. ——Art. 182 (2)—Applicability—Appeal rejected as being out of time—Execution of lower Court's decree—Starting point of limitation.

Where a decree was obtained on the 5th September, 1922, by the appellant in the lower Court, and the decree was confirmed on appeal on the 20th April, 1925, and the judgment-debtor preferred a second appeal to the High Court which, on its having been filed 4 days out of time, was dismissed on 5th March, 1926, and the decree that was thereafter sought to be executed was that of the first appellate Court, dated 20th April, 1925, and the present application to execute the decree was made on the 6th December, 1928, i.e., admittedly more than three years after the date of the appellate decree in 1925, and the question arose whether the execution application was barred by limitation or whether according to the contention of the appellant that inasmuch as there had been an appeal to the High Court, the date of the final order of the High Court, that is, 5th March, 1926, should alone be considered as the starting point for computing the period of limitation,

Held, that since the appeal memorandum presented to the High Court had been rejected as having been out of time there had been no appeal to the High Court and the appellant was not entitled to take advantage of the provisions contained in Art. 182 (2) of the Limitation Act in support of his contention that the execution petition was not barred by limitation. There has been no appeal when the Court has refused to receive the memorandum on its file in view of the sub S. (3) to R. 1 (Madras Amendment) of O. 41 of the C. P. ——Art. 182 (2) — "Final decree" — Meaning—Amendment of decree — Execution application—Commencement of limitation.

Art. 182 (2) has to be interpreted by giving the words their natural and ordinary meaning. The words "final decree" merely indicates the final order by which an appellate Court decided an appeal and they cannot be interpreted to mean that the decree must be one which finally disposes of the suit and merges in itself the decretal order of the original Court. The word 'final' is used in antithesis to the word 'interlocutory'. It is only when the decree sought to be executed in the decree of the lower Court and not merely of the appellate Court, and the appeal is with regard to a part of the decree or against any other decision in the suit which is subjudice between the parties that the question as to whether time would run from the date of the appellate decree would arise for decision and Art. 182 (2) would come into operation. If there is an appeal, time must run from the date of the decree of the appellate Court if the decision of the appellate Court is not interlocutory but final. A decree was passed in a partition suit against defendant 3 and in favour of defendants 1 and 2. Defendants 1 and 2 appealed to the High Court but both appeals were dismissed on preliminary grounds. An execution application was filed within three years from the date of the order of the High Court but beyond three years from the date of the amended decree by the trial Court.

Held, that the appeal was no less an appeal even though it was incompetent. (Patkar and Barlee, JJ.) NAGAPPA v. GURUSHANTAPPA 57 Bom. 388 = 147 I C. 1227 = 6 R.B. 250 = 35 Bom L R. 432 = A.I R. 1933 Bom. 255.

——Art. 182 (2)—"Final decree or order"—Dismissal of appeal by Privy Council for non prosecution—Execution—Application for—Starting point.

Not only under R. 34 but also under R. 36 of the Judicial Committee Rules, 1925, the dismissal for non-prosecution of an appeal to the Privy Council even after admission and appearance of the respondents does not constitute a final order or decree of the appellate Court within the meaning of Art. 182 (2) of the Limitation Act. So the starting point of limitation for an application for execution of the decree is the date of the dismissal of the appeal by the High Court and not the date of dismissal by the Privy Council for non prosecution. 36 A. 284; 36 A. 250; 49 C. 203, Rel. on; 2 P L.T. 28, Not Foll. ——Art. 182 (2)—"Final order of the appellate Court"—Order declaring appeal to have abated—New starting point of limitation.

An order of the Appellate Court holding that the appeal had abated and refusing to set aside the abatement is a final order within the meaning of Art. 182 (2) since it deals judicially with matters before the Court. When an order is judicially made by an Appellate Court which has the effect of finally disposing of an appeal such an order gives a new starting point for the period of limitation prescribed by Art. 182. either as to the character of the appeal or as to the parties to it; the words mean just what they say. So long as there is any question sub judice between any of the parties those affected shall not be compelled to pursue the so often thorny path of execution which, if the final result is against them, may lead to no advantage. The contention that an appeal in order to save limitation under Cl. 2 of the Article must be one to which the persons affected were parties and that it must also be one in which the whole decree was imperilled is not sound. So an application for execution presented within three years from the date of the decree of the appellate Court but more than three years from the date of the decree of the trial Court is in time even though the appeal was irregular in form and was dismissed on that ground. A preliminary decree in a partition suit was passed on 18-4-1918 and confirmed by High Court on 20-3-1923. A final decree was passed by the trial Court on 30-9-1919 and on an application for execution filed on 24-3-1925.

Held, that the appeal referred to in Art. 182 (2) was an appeal against the decree sought to be executed and as no appeal had been preferred from the final decree which was the decree sought to be executed, time began to run from 30-9-1919 and the application was therefore barred, even though it was within three years of the date when the High Court confirmed the preliminary decree. Art. 182 speaks of "the final decree or order of the appellate Court" and it does not say that the decree or order must be passed in an appeal which was a competent appeal. ———Art. 182 (4)—Construction and scope.

The effect of Art. 182 (4), Limitation Act, the words of which must be given their plain meaning, is that it is an answer to any objection taken with regard to the plea of limitation so far as the earlier final decree (i.e., before the amendment) is concerned. When it is amended, limitation starts from the date of the amendment. The fact that the decree had already become barred before the amendment or that the amendment applied for was unnecessary are matters which ought to have been dealt with by the Court which was moved to amend the decree. ———Art. 182 (4)—Mortgage suit—Appeal from preliminary mortgage decree dismissed with costs— Final decree already passed—Application for its amendment so as to include costs of appeal allowed— Execution—Limitation.

After an appeal from a preliminary mortgage decree was dismissed with costs, the decree-holder presented an application to the trial Court that the final decree previously prepared be amended so as to include the costs awarded to him in appeal. The Court allowed it and directed the amendment of the final decree as prayed. The decree-holder applied for execution of the final decree more than three years after the date of the final decree as originally prepared but less than three years from the date of its amendment. Overruling the plea of limitation,

Held, that the final decree could not have been "amended" under any rule of law and that the mortgagee's application asking for amendment and the order of the Court thereon amounted, in substance, respectively to an application and an order for preparation of a

———Art. 182 (4)—Principal of—Decree already barred by time—Amendment of decree no fresh start of limitation.

Clause (4), Art. 182, presupposes that at the time of amendment the decree is alive. The basic idea underlying, Art. 182, is that the decree is subsisting at the various points of time from which the limitation starts to run under provisions of Col. 3 of the article. The decree-holder cannot get a start for limitation from the date of amendment, even in a case where the decree had already become barred by time when the amendment was made. (Case law discussed.) ———Art. 182 (4)—Scope—"Provided for"—Meaning—Amendment of decree—Commencement of limitation.

The words "provided for" mean that where execution is barred by S. 48, C. P. Code, execution cannot be allowed under Art. 182, Limitation Act. In other words Art. 182 is subject to the provisions of S. 48. An amendment of a decree does not give a new date for starting a period of limitation, if the application for execution is beyond the period of 12 years allowed by S. 48, that is, that the period of 12 years under S. 48 is final and cannot be extended by way of amendment of the decree, whether that amendment is made before the expiry of the period of 12 years, or whether that amendment is made after the expiry of the period of 12 years. 42 Bom. 309, Ref.; 60 I.C. 318, Diss. Applicability ———(as amended by Act IX of 1927), Art. 182 (5)—Applicability.

To make this clause applicable, the necessary conditions which must be satisfied, whether the application is one for execution or to take some step-in-aid of execution of the decree or order are that in either case (1) the application must be in acoordance with law, (2) it must be made to the proper Court, and (3) there must be a final order passed on the application. These conditions are adjectival both to the application for execution and to the application to take step-in-aid of execution of the decree or order. ———Art. 182 (5)—Applicability—Essentials.

Two conditions are necessary to satisfy Art. 182 (5): (1) There must be an application in accordance with law asking the proper Court to take a step; (2) The step required to be taken by the Court must be one in aid of execution. When both these conditions are fulfilled the requirements of the law are fully satisfied; and nothing more is needed. It is not necessary that the proposed step should be actually taken or that even an order should be passed by the Court on the application. As soon as an application of the above description is made, the period of limitation will run from the date of the presentation of the application. Per Shadi Lal, C.J. and Broadway, J.—It cannot be affirmed as an inflexible rule that the granting of leave to bid must in every case amount to a step in-aid of execution ; nor can it be said that it may not, in any case, aid the execution. Whether it belongs to one category or the other must depend upon the circumstances of each case. 3 C.L.J. 240, Rel. on. (Case-law referred.)

Per Jai Lal, J., contra.—An application for leave to bid always implies a suggestion that the proposed step would promote the execution of the decree as every increase in the number of bidders or even of bids promotes the execution of the decree and this is the moving factor in granting the leave to bid. In its very nature an application for leave to bid amounts to an application to the Court to take a step in-aid of execution and this irrespective of the hidden motive of the decree-holder in applying or of the actual result of the granting of the application and the combination of some other prayer in the application does not affect the question as then it would be the granting of such a prayer that would be the step-in aid of execution and not the granting of the leave to bid which in that case must be held never to amount to a step-in aid of execution. Even if the previous execution application was dismissed on the ground of gross carelessness because the judgment-debtor was wrongly shown as "Sheodeni" instead of "Sheobeni" it is an application in substantial compliance with the law to save limitation, whether it was admitted, rejected, returned, or allowed to be amended. 53 Cal. 664, Rel. on. For the purpose of execution of the decree which the Additional Munsif pronounced, his Court is the Court of the first Munsif, for he is then trying suits appertaining to the area which was comprised in the territorial jurisdiction of the latter. ———Art. 182 (5)—Application in accordance with law—Legality of final order immaterial.

A Judge has jurisdiction to decide wrongly as well as rightly, and when the execution proceedings begin upon an application which is valid in its inception, for the purposes of limitation, it does not matter whether the final order passed therein is in accordance with law or not ; time will begin to run from the date of such final order. So the fact that in the previous application, no notice to the assignor of the decree was issued as required by O. 21, R. 16 does not make all the execution proceedings void as if they never existed for purposes of limitation especially as the judgment-creditor admitted the transfer of the decree in the previous execution taken out by him. ———Art 182 (5)—"Application in accordance with law"—Meaning—Non compliance with O. 21, R. 11 (g), C. P. Code—Effect of.

To see whether a particular application for execution is or is not in accordance with law by reason of the omission from it of the particulars required by O. 21, R. 11, C. P. Code, what has to be looked is whether the executing Court would or would not issue execution on the application as preferred to it The expression "in accordance with law" in Art. 182 (5), Limitation Act, must be taken to mean that the application, though defective in some particulars, is one on which execution could lawfully be ordered. If the omissions are such as to make it impossible for the Court to issue execution upon it, it must be held that the application is not in accordance with law. But an application in substantial compliance with the law will be effectual to stay the progress of limitation, whether the Court admits, or rejects, or returns the application or allows it to be amended. The application ultimately failed for want of prosecution. A question having raised whether application was according to law and serves as a step in aid of execution.

Held, that the statement made by the other decree-holder in the purshis did not amount to a relinquishment or to an assignment of his interest in the decree. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 182 (5)—Bona fides of decree-holder.

A decree-holder or a person applying for execution of a decree is not called upon to satisfy the Court that a previous application for execution or for some step-in-aid of execution from which he seeks to reckon the period of limitation for his next application had been made with a genuine intention of obtaining execution of his decree if reasonably possible and that he did not abandon the proceedings except upon a genuine belief that it would not be reasonably possible to obtain execution. It is not open to the execution Court to go into the question of the bona fides of the application for execution. If the application fulfils the requirements of O. 21, R. 11, C. P. Code, it is good and operative for saving limitation and it is immaterial whether the decree holder wanted to have immediate execution or merely wanted to make the application in order to keep the decree alive. 1929 A. Held, that the order closing the case was the final order and the application was in time. The fact that the application for execution is withdrawn or struck off at the request of the decree-holder does not prevent it from giving rise to a new starting point for a period of limitation. ———Art. 182 (5)—Final order—Order dismissing execution petition on part-payment—Decree-holder giving judgment-debtor two months' time for payment of balance—Default by judgment-debtor—Fresh application for execution—Limitation.

On the receipt of a part payment of the decree amount, the decree holder allowed his execution application to be dismissed with costs on the 9th July, 1930, and at the same time gave two months' time to the judgment-debtor to clear the balance. On default by the judgment-debtor, he made another application on 8th September, 1933, which was dismissed by the executing Court on the ground that it was made more than three years after the last order passed by the Court. On revision,

Held, that the order passed on the 9th July, 1930, was a 'final order passed on an application made', and the two months' time given by the decree-holder to the judgment-debtor to pay the decretal amount did not suspend the proceedings, as the application itself was dismissed on that day with costs and that, therefore, the order of the executing Court was correct. ———(as amended by Act IX of 1927), Art. 182 (5)—Final order—Recording of payment by Court under O. 21, R. 2 (1), C. P. Code.

The words "final order" imply that it should be final as far as the Court passing the order is concerned. It should be an order which if not reversed or modified by a Court of appeal would be binding between the parties. In the case of a certification by the decree-holder and the recording of payment by the Court, the law does not require any notice being sent to the judgment-debtor and it is always open to the judgment debtor to question the alleged payment, hence recording of payment by the Court under O. 21, R. 2 (1) cannot be regarded as a final order within the meaning of Art. 182, Cl. ———Art. 182 (5)—Jurisdiction of Court—Step-in-aid—Application for execution—Form of.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 182 (5)—Jurisdiction of Court.

In considering whether an application can be treated as a step-in-aid of execution, the form of the application is of no importance. An application for transfer of a decree for execution need not be on any particular form. Whether an application is one for execution or for transfer is to be decided on the nature of the prayer made and not on the choice of a particular form. If an application for transfer is incompetent because the Court to which the decree is sought to be transferred has no jurisdiction to entertain the same it cannot be treated as a step-in-aid of execution. Such an application does not become an application for execution merely because it was made on a form prescribed for an application for execution as the decree-holders asked the Court to do a certain thing which the Court was not empowered to do that is, to send the decree for execution to the Court which had no jurisdiction to execute that decree. The form of the application has no bearing on the question. In order to bring a case under Cl. Hence Cl. (5) can have no application unless there is an application made to the proper Court. A decree-holder's application to the Collector for declaration of his mortgage lien under the decree is not an application made "to the proper Court" to take some step-in aid of execution of the decree for sale of the mortgaged property, as the Collector is not certainly "the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree" within the meaning of Expl. 2, Art. 182. started and on the 29th August, 1927, they were eventually dismissed by the Tangail Court. On the 25th January, 1929, the appellant filed another application for execution in the Court of the Munsif at Dacca. The application remained pending in that Court for some time. On the 2nd March, 1929, the decree, together with the certificate of non-satisfaction, was returned by the Tangail Court to the Dacca Court. The appellant's application for execution dated 25th January, 1929, was registered and an order for issue of notice was passed. Notice was however not issued and the execution proceedings were dismissed. There was no subsequent application for execution when the Court at Dacca acquired jurisdiction to execute the decree after the 2nd March, 1929. The execution proceedings were again started on 1st June, 1931.

Held, the decree is barred by limitation as the application of the 25th January, 1929, was not made to the proper Court though the application was presented to a Court which had no jurisdiction and it remained pending on the file of the Court till it acquired jurisdiction. Proper Court means the Court whose duty is to execute the decree. (*Mitter and M. C. An application made under S. 28 (2) to the Insolvency Court for leave to execute the decree is not an application made to the proper Court within the meaning of the explanation to Art. 182 and does not save limitation. The Insolvency Court which is entirely a creature of the Provincial Insolvency Act is a different Court from the Court which is to execute a decree obtained independently of the Insolvency Act and the mere fact that the Judge is the same person will not make the two Courts the same. A plaint in a suit in a Munsif's Court for a declaration that certain immovable property of the judgment-debtor was liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree obtained in a Small Cause Court, can be treated as a step-in aid of execution under Art. 182 (5). But it cannot be treated as an application made to the "proper Court," unless the said decree of the Small Cause Court has, before the plaint is filed, been transferred to the Munsif's Court for execution. ——Art. 182 (5)—Proper Court — Subordinate Court temporarily established for one year but continued from year to year—Decree passed by—Execution petition to District Court—If made to "proper Court."

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 182 (5)—Step-in-aid—What is.

Courts established temporarily have jurisdiction not only to pass decrees but also to execute those passed by them. The mere fact that a Subordinate Court is established for one year and is thereafter continued from year to year cannot deprive it of its character of the Court which passed the decree. It has therefore jurisdiction in the subsequent year to execute a decree passed by it in the previous year. Consequently when that Court exists, an application to execute a decree passed by it, made to the District Court, is not an application made to "the proper Court" within the meaning of Art. 182(5) of the Limitation Act, and cannot therefore be availed of for the purpose of saving limitation. ——Art 182 (5)—Step in aid—What is—Transfer of decree to another Court—Application to first Court to transfer it for execution to same transferee Court.

Per Jai Lal and Rangi Lal, JJ. (Skemp, J., holding contra.)—Where a money decree has been transferred by the Court which passed it for execution to another Court, an application to the first Court to transfer it for execution to the same Court is a valid application, even if such an application is made before the proceedings taken in the other Court have first been reported and certified by that Court and is a step-in-aid of execution.

Skemp, J.—After the first Court has sent the decree once to the other Court for execution it is no longer the duty of the first Court to execute the decree; the proper Court is the transferee Court, and hence an application made to the first Court to send the decree to the same transferee Court where it has already been sent once and whence it has not been sent back is not an application in accordance with law to the proper Court or a step-in aid of execution. A decree-holder applied under O. 21, R. 16, on 20th August, 1923, for transfer of the decree to another Court. The defendants pleaded that the decree had been satisfied. On 5th December, 1923, the Court directed the decree holder to bring his account books in three days. The decree holder on the same day filed a counter petition and an affidavit in support denying accounts books having been kept by him. The transfer was ordered on 7th December, 1923. The decree holder then applied for execution on 22nd November, 1926.

Held, that neither the affidavit, counter, batta for witnesses nor the vakalath could be deemed to be a step in aid of the execution and that none of them saved limitation for the present execution application. There was a compromise decree for instalments passed between the parties by which it was agreed that the total amount due was Rs. 1,100, that Rs. 300 would be paid within a month of the compromise decree and that the balance of Rs. 800 was to be paid by instalments of Rs. 25 on the 1st November and 1st May, the first instalment being payable on 1st November, 1928. The compromise further provided that in case of failure to pay two instalments, all the money will be paid at once and in case the sum of Rs. 300 is not paid, all the money will be paid at once with 1 per cent. interest per mensem. There was default in the payment of Rs. 300; but the decree holder did not apply for execution of the whole decree. This amount of Rs. 300 was paid in some instalments and on default of two instalments, the decree holder applied for execution of the whole of the balance remaining, but the application was filed more than three years from date of default to pay Rs. 300.

Held, that the right of the decree holder to apply for execution of the decree for the whole of the remaining sum due to him was time barred, but of the decretal amount, he had a right to apply for execution of the instalments of Rs. 25 which have fallen due provided that the date of those instalments were within time from the date of the application. A decree provided that the principal amount together with interest was repayable within twelve years of the decree and in default, the immovable property was to be sold after twelve years. It also provided that interest was to be paid every year and in case of default in payment of any two years' interest plaintiff was given an option to execute the decree at once. Immediately on the first default the plaintiff exercised his option by praying for the sale of the property. He did not pursue that darkhast any further and after nine years of the default and after twelve years of the decree, he gave another darkhast for the execution of the decree.

Held, that the second darkhast was time barred because the plaintiff having exercised his option on the first default, he could not fall back on the former clause giving him twelve years' time and elect to continue to treat the decree as an instalment decree. 28 A. 249, Rel. on; 25 Bom.L.R. 203 at 205; 27 Bom.L.R. 461; 45 A. 27 (F.B.), Ref. In the case of a decree providing for payment by instalments and that in the event of default of payment of any instalment the decree holder was entitled to take out execution for the whole amount, unless the decree leaves him no option on the happening of default but to execute the decree once for all for the whole amount due under it, the decree-holder may execute it on the happening of the first, second or any subsequent default; and limitation will run only against him in respect of each instalment separately from the time when each instalment may become due and payable. Where a decree specifies clearly the respective liabilities of the various judgment-debtors and put it beyond doubt that the decree holder could proceed against individual judgment-debtor in respect of his share of the decretal amount and costs, it is in reality a separate decree against each of the judgment-debtors and the mere fact that the decree is written out on one sheet of paper does not in fact make any difference. In applying the law of limitation, the decree has to be kept in force against each judgment-debtor and the execution taken against one of them is not sufficient to prevent the period of limitation running in favour of the other. LUNACY ACT (IV OF 1912)—Lunatic's estate—Joint managers—Death of one—If terminates other's office.

Until the legislature see fit to introduce into the Lunacy Act a provision similar to S. 38, Guardians and Wards Act, by which on death of one of joint guardians, principle of survivorship is applied, the rule of English law should be followed and where there is no provision for survivorship in the order of appointment of the joint managers, the office of the survivor should terminate on the death of his co-manager. There is no provision in the Lunacy (District Courts) Act (XXXV of 1858) nor in the Lunacy Act of 1912 on this point. At the auction held a month later, plaintiff became the successful bidder. A suit having been brought on the promissory note, Held, that the partnership did not involve a "transfer" within the meaning of R. 27 as the partnership had already come into existence when the plaintiff bid for the right and it was therefore not illegal. Consequently the suit promissory note was enforceable. A partnership for the sale of liquor is not per se illegal or opposed to public policy. An abkari contractor committed default in the payment of the monthly rental due to the Government. The Government sustained loss on re-sale of the shop and therefore put up the house of the defaulter for sale. The defendant bid for Rs. 1,805, at the auction and the property was knocked down to him. He did not however, deposit the necessary amount within the time mentioned in the conditions of sale. The Government therefore resold the house. At the re-sale, the price was only Rs. 20. The Government therefore brought this suit to recover the loss caused by the re-sale from the defendant. At the time of the first sale, both the Government and the defendant were not aware of the existence of an encumbrance on the property and that accounted for the low price at the re-sale.

Held, that (i) a sale under the Act did not require confirmation by the Collector; (ii) although a sale for default under the Abkari Act is held in the manner of one for recovery of arrears of land revenue under Madras Act II of 1864 the property is not sold free of encumbrance as it is in a land revenue sale; (iii) although the Government may not be legally bound to notify in the sale of immovable property for default under the Abkari Act that it is subject to encumbrance, the fact that the forms of sale proclamation were identical with those of the sale for revenue arrears was apt to mislead the public into thinking that the sales were free of encumbrances; (iv) the property sold subject to a mortgage at the re sale was not the same as the property purchased by the defendant at the first sale, not subject to the mortgage; (v) the amount which the Government was entitled to recover was not the difference in prices—but the difference between the amount bid for at the first sale and the price fetched by re sale with any encumbrance amounts due at the time of the re-sale added to the latter figure. t The requisites for the applicability of the section are chat the adolescent offender should be addicted to priminal habits or tendencies or be associated with persons of bad character and the Court should be satisfied that he is a person likely to benefit by detention in a Borstal institution. The mere fact that the accused falls within the term "adolescent offender" as defined in S. 2 of the Act is not sufficient to justify the Court in detaining him in a Borstal institution. It is desirable that a declaration of age under S. 37 should not be made except on adequate and proper evidence for the reasons (1) that in the public interest criminals should suffer the legal penalty for their offences and not escape on an unduly lenient finding as to age, (2) that the declaration, is final and cannot be interfered with in appeal, or revision, and (3) that it also affects the length of detention in the Certified School. MADRAS CITY TENANTS' PROTECTION ACT (III OF 1922)—Applicability—Tenancy for fixed period.

The Act applies to a tenancy for a short period, e.g., a tenancy for five years of a site used as a fire wood depot, though in such a case it may be difficult to suggest in the words of the preamble that the tenant could have "hoped he would not be evicted." The language of the City Tenants' Protection Act conferring on the tenants rights of compensation and acquisition, is sufficiently clear and explicit. It may be hard, it may be unjust, but there is no ambiguity about it. And the preamble when it talks of 'the hope of the tenants that they would not be evicted' is so vague and indefinite and so far from defining any particular class of tenants that the legislature can hardly have intended to make it a qualification for the acquisition of rights under the Act. The preamble of this Act cannot therefore be invoked to restrict the scope of the provisions of the Act. (Curgenven and Bhashyam Ayyangar, JJ.) C. ———Scope and object of—Landlord's right to increase rent.

Even under the common law the landlord has no right to increase the rent as he thinks fit without the consent of the tenant. So surely it cannot be argued that an Act like the City Tenants Protection Act which is meant to protect tenants would give the landlords a right which the common law did not give them. Hence a landlord, whether in Madras or elsewhere, has no right to collect rent at a rate higher than the rate agreed upon by the tenant without the tenant's consent. A notification under S. 80 in pursuance of a decision to levy profession tax which merely states that "profession tax at the maximum rates detailed in R. 17, Sch. IV" will be levied does not sufficiently comply with the requirements of the section. The rates must be mentioned in the notification itself. People upon whom tax is about to be levied should be enabled from the notification itself to understand what the tax is and its rate and they should not be driven to look into the Schedule of the Act to gain that information. The fact that R. 17 is mentioned cannot enable people to find out the rates. The words "kept within the municipality" in S. 103, District Municipalities Act, does not contain any such limitation as that a person keeps a taxable vehicle only if he has an accommodation to contain it and that if he has no fixed accommodation for it, he is not keeping it within the Municipality. By reason of S. 99 (4) the presumption is that every person having possession, custody or control of a taxable vehicle within the Municipality has "kept" the same within the Municipality for sixty days in the half year until the contrary is shown and the burden of showing to the contrary is on the owner of such taxable vehicle. Where a person is found to have in his custody and possession a motor bus but he has no accommodation for it in the shed and it is found to be standing on the roadside, it cannot be said that it is not 'kept within the Municipality' within the meaning of S. 103. The permission to instal a flour mill granted to the petitioner was suspended by the Collector on 3-6-1929 and the petitioner was charged with having disobeyed that order and run the machinery from 24-6-1929 to 19-10-1929, not only under Ss. 250 and 313 but also under Sch. VIII and for this purpose the offence was split into periods of a day.

Held, the charge under Sch. VIII was not sustainable in the absence of a previous conviction under S. 313 before 24-6-1922, that in such case the accused can be convicted in respect of the same machine for the one act of installation only, that the theory of a daily offence was entirely misconceived as also the splitting of a day. Land not being defined in the Act, must be taken in its ordinary sense of the solid part of the earth's surface as opposed to water; rock is in this sense just as much land as sand or earth are. All that zamindar can legitimately demand is his customary fee, if any, for the removal of the stones and compensation for such damage as may accrue, in case the stones are removed without his permission. The question, only assumes a new aspect if the raiyat proceeds to quarry a stone of recognized commercial value. In that case the zamindar can reserve his mining rights under S. 7. The ryots of a certain village had since 1881 been paying a specially high rate on the dry lands held by them if they had grown cocoanuts thereon and they had also during that period signed muchilikas agreeing to pay according to the village riwaz if they should grow cocoanuts on dry land. There were also other pattahs going back to the year 1868 wherein a similar clause appeared but a patta of the year 1868 was silent on the point and in several of those earlier puttas there was a provision that the ryot should not plant cocoanut trees without the proprietor's permission. The evidence showed that the ryots had been required to pay the same rates for the period before the cocoanut trees came to bearing as after that date. There was also no proof of admission of ryots to the lands after the practice of paying higher rent for cocoanut plantation came into force. The suit was instituted to enforce the landholder's right to charge the higher rate in respect of cocoanut trees planted before and after the passing of the Madras Estates Land Act.

Held, that a cocoanut tree is a fruit tree and the plantation of cocoanut trees an improvement within the

Under the provisions of Ss. 24 and 30 of the Estates Act, no enhancement of rent can be claimed by the landlord except under the special provisions enacted in that respect; if he wishes to enhance the rent he must do so by filing a suit before the Collector. A claim to additional rent on the ground that the land has become more productive by reason of better irrigation facilities afforded by the landlord—it being alleged that the tenant raised wet crop on dry land and a second crop on wet land by the use of the landlord's water—amounts to an enhancement, having regard to the implications of S. 30 of the Act. A person took a lease of waste lands for a period of thirty years under a deed providing that so far as the waste lands in the village were concerned he might give cowles in any way he pleased during the period of lease after which the land would be liable to pay half waram. He made a permanent lease of the suit lands in favour of defendants, though he had no right to give lease for a period extending beyond the period of his own lease. But afterwards he obtained a permanent lease and sometime later, and his rights in them were sold in execution of a decree and purchased by the plaintiff. The plaintiff after waiting up to the termination of the period of thirty years from the date of the first lease demanded of the defendant rent of the normal rate which lands of similar quality would be liable to pay. The defendant refused on the strength of the prior lease in his favour.

——S. 30—Applicability—Landlord's claim to charge for water—Maintainability.

The landlord's right to rent under the Estates Land Act must be determined solely with reference to the sections of the Act. The Act contains no provisions to the effect that a charge or cess is payable for the use of the landlord's water. If he desires to enhance the rent, he must bring himself within the terms of S. 30 of the Act. The bare fact that his water has been used is not mentioned in that section as a ground justifying enhancement. Granting that his water has been used he must, under S. 30 read with S. 3 (iv), show that the productive power of the land has increased by some positive "improvement" effect by his agency or at his expense; he can make good his claim only by showing a direct conviction between the water so used and the improvement he has effected. "Rent" under the Act, no doubt, includes whatever is payable on account of the use and enjoyment and water supplied or taken for cultivation of land. But the water must be "supplied" or "taken." It is not sufficient to show that some water which the landlord could not prevent from overflowing or the tenant had no option of refusing was used by the tenant. ——Ss. 45, 163, 211 and Sch. B, Art. 7—Application under—Limitation.

The date of occupation mentioned in Art. 7, Sch. B to the Act is the date on which the unauthorized occupation began. If the unauthorized occupation began more than a year before the date of the application under S. 45, the bar of limitation under Art. 7 cannot be got over. In order to interpret Art. 7, Part B, in the schedule to the Act, S. 23, Limitation Act, cannot be invoked in aid. No doubt S. 211 overrides the general provisions of the Limitation Act in S. 29 and it may be possible in a suitable case to apply the principle of S. 23, Limitation Act, but in an application under S. 45, when the date of occupation mentioned in Art. 7 has to be understood only as the date on which the occupation was begun. S. 23, Limitation Act, can be of no avail. If the application under S. 45 is not promptly made within one year from the date of the first occupation, this particular remedy cannot be had by the landholder and he has only to sue the occupant under S. 163 for possession of the land treating him as a trespasser. (3) entitling him to recover rent; the burden of proving the conditions mentioned in S. 26, Cl. (3) is on the plaintiff and if he succeeds in discharging the burden imposed on him by Cl. (3), the defendant, if he wants to claim exemption should rely on the provisions of sub-Cl. (1) of S. 26. Where the defendants in a suit for recovery of rent under S. 77 (1), Madras Estates Land Act. claimed that they held the lands rent free, and it was found that for a considerable number of years the lands were being held by the defendants and their predecessors rent free, though it could not be definitely ascertained how they came to hold as such.

——S. 125 — Construction—"Encumbrances created before the Act"—If to be by Pattadar.

The intention of S. 125 of the Estates Land Act will be defeated if it be assumed that the reservation therein must be restricted to encumbrances created by the holder of the patta, independently of the question whether he was a person entitled to hold the land or not. The kind of encumbrances intended to be saved must reasonably be all encumbrances which under the law as it stood prior to 1908 would have been valid. There is no reason to limit them to encumbrances created by a person who would satisfy the definition of a ryot under the Act. Under the older law it was only the real owner of the holding that could create any encumbrance on the property and not the person who happened to hold a pattah for that hold. The section cannot therefore be read as only saving encumbrances created by a ryot as defined in the Act or by the Pattadar. The policy of the Estates Land Act is to compel any person who has acquired an interest in ryoti land to follow the procedure laid down in S. 146 if he wishes to be treated as a ryot and it have all disputes as to procedure in rent sales enquired into by the Revenue Court. The consequence of the omission to do so would be to bar the asking for a similar relief in a Civil Court by means of a suit. Unless the transferee has under S. 146 obtained recognition from the landholder, the latter is at liberty to deal with the transferring pattadar, as though the transfer had not taken place. The same principle applies where a claim adverse to the pattadar is put forward and is still sub judice in civil proceedings, so the real owner of a holding, who has not been recognised by the landholder, cannot upset a rent sale under a decree obtained by the landholder against the pattadar under S. 77 of the Act on the ground that in separate civil proceedings they have established their title to the property. Though the Board of Revenue in carrying out the provisions of Ch. The High Court can, therefore, issue a writ of certiorari in respect of proceedings of board of Revenue under Ch XI of the Madras Estates Land Act in a fit and proper case. (Case-law disc.)

MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT (1908), S. 171.

Under S. 185 of Act any document showing that the lands were let out by the Zamindar as pannai lands ought to be considered whenever the question whether a land is pannai or ryoti arises. This fact cannot be ignored. If they are pannai lands, they are execluded from the Act and no record of rights under Ch. XI can be made with regard to them. Where, therefore, the ryots claimed that certain lands were granted to them by a registered document of 1895 on the footing of pannai lands on a permanent favourable rate or rent, the fact whether they are pannai or ryoti must be definitely found and failure by the Board to enquire into this question is failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested under Ch. XI which justifies the issue of a writ quashing the settlement of proceeding with a view to enable the Board to enquire into the question of pannai lands. ———S. 13—Plaintiff appointed Karnam by proprietor—Appointment cancelled and defendant appointed instead by Revenue Officer—Suit to set aside order—Maintainability.

The plaintiff was appointed to the post of a Karnam by the proprietor and discharged his duties as such. His appointment was cancelled by the Revenue Officer on the defendant's application that he was the nearest heir of the last office holder, and the defendant was appointed to that office. Thereon the plaintiff filed a suit for declaration that the order of the Revenue Officer was ultra vires and hence null and void. It was held that S. 13 did not apply to the case because the plaintiff did not ask for a declaration that he was the heir to the office in question, or for restoration of his appointment as Karnam but only prayed to set aside the order of the Revenue Officer. So S. 21 was no bar to the maintainability of such a suit. 9 L. W. 90; 33 Mad. 208; 12 L. W. 663, Ref.
